NSS Department Reorganized By Labor Minister

Ottawa, Aug. 11—(CP)—A sweeping reorganization of the National Selective Service Department, designed to expand and strengthen its administration and promote more closely linked activity between the government departments charged with obtaining manpower was announced Tuesday by Labor Minister Mitchell, under whose jurisdiction Selective Service comes.

Mr. Mitchell said in a statement that the plan of reorganization recommended by Selective Service Director Arthur MacNamara and approved by the government, is designed to decentralize the work of the department "as far as practical."

It involves the establishment of an administration board of full-time personnel, the appointment of assistant associate directors at head office for mobilization; fuel, mining, lumbering and logging; farm labor; priorities; fishing and canning industries; war industries and essential civilian services; the employment of women and the appointment of a director of planning.

In addition, the plan calls for the appointment for each employment region of provincial directors, whose duties will include dealing with matters within their regions which otherwise would be referred to Ottawa.

Judge as Deputy Head

Among the objectives of the reorganization are the selection of a judge to act as deputy head on the civilian side of selective service and division of the work on an industrial classification basis.

The minister said that war industries and essential civilian services will each be represented at head office by two associate directors, who will maintain close liaison with the requirements of the Munitions Department and the Prices Board.

The Mobilization Board, Munitions Department and Prices Board will be represented on regional advisory boards. The provincial director for the Ontario employment region will have offices at Toronto.

Act as Chairman

Provincial directors, Mr. Mitchell said, will act as chairmen of regional selective service boards, and will confer with regional superintendents of employment service. They will suggest remedies for emergent labor shortages and provide at the regional level "a liaison between mobilization and civilian employment."

The selective service advisory board for each employment region will consist of seven members—the regional director, national selective service chairman; the chairman or registrar of the mobilization board; the regional superintendent of the employment service; and representatives of labor, the munitions department and prices board and the chairman of the employment service committee.

Mr. Mitchell said he was convinced that the "success which must be attained" depended upon the effectiveness of the work done in the employment offices.

Streets of Paris Made Into Fortress

Berne, Aug. 11—(AP)—The Tribune De Geneva reported today that the Marine Ministry Building and several streets in the heart of Paris have been converted into a fortress with numerous cement blockhouses and connecting tunnels.

Many streets have been forbidden to civilians, the newspaper said. Many houses have been evacuated. It added that Kleber Ave., is a network of fortifications.

An entire quarter of the city was said to have been made a defence line, including a four-storey underground tunnel. Connections are made partly by a small-gauge underground railroad.

Violent Storm Visits London

A gale with an electrical storm of unusual violence struck London and the surrounding counties July 31, censorship allowed to be disclosed today. Trees were uprooted and boats were dragged from their moorings in the Thames by the storm which ended a six-day heat wave that brought temperatures as high as 93 in the shade in London the day of the storm.

Windsor Castle was struck by lightning at the height of the gale which lasted only a brief time. The castle's electrical system was out of order for a while and a lodge in the grounds was set afire. The flames were controlled quickly.

The storm was so violent in some areas of London that windows of houses were smashed and gables wrenched off. Nearly 1,000 persons gathered in West Drayton and West Middlesex were caught in the open attending a concert.

One of them said: "For the three or four minutes it lasted it was terrifying. We could see it tearing toward us. It sounded like thousands of tanks roaring along the road. Trees went down as though poleaxed."

YOUTH DROWNED AT SOUTH BAY

Walter Rose, 14, Attempted to Swim From Shore to Sand Bar Off Shore

Picton, Aug. 11 —(Special)— Walter T. Rose, 14, only son of Mr. and Mrs. John Rose, South Bay, 14 miles south of Picton, was drowned Tuesday afternoon, while swimming in South Bay with Ralph Dulmage, 12, near Earl McIntosh's shore. The body was recovered a half hour later, and although resuscitation was applied, Dr. H. Walmsley, Picton, pronounced the boy dead and no inquest will be necessary. The drowned youth is the only grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Rose, South Bay and a nephew of Bruce Hart of Belleville.

Dulmage and Rose were swimming near the shore and Dulmage proceeded to a sand bar a short distance out, the intervening water between the shore and the bar being very deep. Rose, not as good a swimmer as Dulmage, attempted to make the bar, but was in difficulty about half way over. Dulmage went back and took hold of Rose but was unable to hold him. Young Dulmage then secured a boat from shore and called Mr. Earl McIntosh and the boy's father, Mr. John Rose, who went to the scene and succeeded in recovering the body. The funeral will take place on Thursday with interment in Cherry Valley Cemetery.

Forced Purchasing Declared Illegal

Ottawa, Aug. 11 — (CP) — The Prices Board today issued an order, effective immediately, making it illegal for a merchant to require a customer to buy additional goods when purchasing other goods which are in short supply. Exceptions are made for any practices of the kind which were established during or before the basic period, Sept. 15 to Oct. 11, 1941, and the order does not apply to goods distributed under provincial direction, such as alcoholic beverages.

The order will not interfere with the sale of articles ordinarily sold in sets. The board's announcement said there has been evidence of an increasing tendency on the part of some merchants to impose new conditions when selling goods that are in short supply.

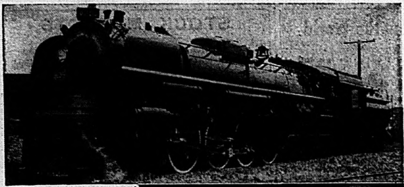
Big Fleet of New Locomotives for War Duty



HEAVIER wartime freight and passenger traffic on lines of the Canadian National Railways calls for more power and R. C. Vaughan, Chairman and President of the National System, has welcomed the delivery of the first of 60 powerful 6,200 class, Northern Type, locomotives. This new 6235 is already in service carrying war freight needed by the armed services, and as each succeeding engine is received it will be promptly broken in for war duty. These locomotives are really "monsters," being 94 feet 9⅜ inches overall and weigh 677,890 pounds in working order. They carry 11,600 gallons of water and 18 tons of coal. A feature of these engines is a wartime substitution of steel plate bells manufactured in the company's Montreal shops, for the traditional bronze bell, the bronze being required for war needs. Mr. Vaughan, inspecting the first of new engines, sat in the driver's seat as F. G. Pike, the driver, explained the use of the instruments.

Butter Stocks Sharply Higher

Ottawa, Aug. 11—(CP)—A happy alliance of more cows and good hay supplies was reported by Federal authorities today along with figures which showed a "gratifying improvement" over last year in butter stocks now available.

With enlarged herds and good pasture conditions giving the promise of continued good production, the Dairy Review of Canada, issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, reported July butter production about 10.5 per cent. higher than in the corresponding month last year, although down 4.5 per cent. when compared with June this year. This decline marked the usual drop from the year's peak production.

July production was 44,547,613 pounds.

The stocks on hand at August 1. totalled 62,522,613 pounds, against 42,983,709 at the same date last year.

The bureau report said:

"Respecting stocks in store Prices Board officials said that the figures as of Aug. 1 show a gratifying improvement over the situation at this time last year, which was critical, leading eventually to rationing at a level lower than now prevails.

"However, though stocks in store now are substantially larger than at this date last year, when the figures are reduced to a per capita basis they represent a total of less than five and a half pounds a person, compared with the present ration rate of 26 pounds a person a year—in other words a supply sufficient for only 11 weeks.

Consumption Also Gains

"Board officials further point out that the figures for butter disappearance in July show that the present rate of disappearance or consumption, even with rationing, is still some 2,000,000 pounds a month greater than in normal times."

With enlarged butter production, a decrease in cheese output was reported with July cheddar production placed at 26,714,035 pounds against 30,200,000 in July, 1942. Stocks on hand at Aug. 1 were 51,190,852 pounds of which 106,487 pounds were imported. This compared with 67,797,943 on hand Aug. 1, 1942.

For the January-July period this year, every province except British Columbia reported increased butter production when compared with the corresponding period last year, the gains ranging from 51.2 per cent. in New Brunswick to 6.7 per cent. in Ontario.

Ice cream production in July was about 2,900,000 gallons, an increase of 18.3 per cent. when compared with July, 1942. For the seven months of this year, 10,400,000 gallons were produced, a gain of eight per cent. over 1942.

The War Today—

Two Major Problems Apparent In Allied Parleys at Quebec

By DEWITT MacKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst)

For once Messrs. Roosevelt and Churchill are going into conference without employing the customary smoke-screen of secrecy, and as a matter of fact haven't even attempted to conceal the approach of what is likely to be one of the most momentous meetings of the war.

This doesn't mean that the forthcoming parley will be held in the open for all to hear. We are left to figure out for ourselves what questions will be debated at this critical moment. Still, the trend of events indicate that there are at least two major problems with which the conference will be concerned, and they are these:-

1. The opening up of that much and warmly debated front in western Europe, so as to capitalize to the full the amazing success of the Red offensive.

2. The post-war policy which will bring the best co-operation among Britain, the United States and Russia in particular, and the other Allies in general. This contemplates the probability that the Muscovites are likely to emerge from the war as the dominant power both in Europe and the Orient.

Unexpected Speediness

These questions would seem to be urgent because of the unexpected speediness of Allied successes both in Russia and in the Mediterranean theatre. Plans which were made at the last meeting of the Allied chiefs presumably need bringing up to date.

From the military standpoint the question would seem to be what we do when we have finished with Sicily. There has been considerable talk of a quick invasion of the Italian mainland, to take advantage of the patent weakness there. However, the more one contemplates the task of invading and subduing the peninsula as the next major move, the less attractive it appears—a lot of labor for a return of doubtful value

Crack Hitler in Quickest Way

The Nut we want to crack is Hitler, and we want to get at him the quickest way possible. The Russians again are urgently pointing out that the speedy way to smash the Fuehrer is to open up that new front in France, while the Red armies have the Nazis on the run in the east.

That's a logical move, providing the Anglo-American Allies are capable of undertaking, what undoubtedly would be one of the greatest and most dangerous operations of the whole war—a landing in France from England.

If the Allies are to undertake such an invasion it can't long be delayed. The summer is rushing by with its good fighting weather, and the opportunity presented by the Russian offensive may slip away with the arrival of autumn.

Occupation of the Italian peninsula wouldn't take us appreciably nearer our main objective.

Invasion of the Balkans wouldn't bring against Hitler from two sides the quick and heavy pressure which Moscow believes would wind the war up quickly. The alternative seems to be a blow through France, and one would expect this to figure largely in the Churchill-Roosevelt conference.

Two Commanding Officers of R.C.R. Killed in Action

London, Aug. 11 — (CP)—Major J.H.W.T. Pope, of the Royal Canadian Regiment, who took over the command of that unit Monday in Sicily after its Commanding Officer, Lt.-Col. Ralph Crowe, had been killed in action, was himself killed shortly afterwards, his mother was informed here last night. Considered by high army officials to be one of the most brilliant young officers in the Canadian Army, Major Pope was only 29.

His wife, the former Miss Mary Kinghorn, resided at "Rayorham" Parkville, B. C., with their three-year-old daughter, Sarah. His father, Col. E. W. Pope, lives in Victoria and his mother had come recently to London from there, to dispose of her home here. She is the former Margaret Marie Ginge.

Major Pope was well-known in the Canadian Army as the author of pamphlets used by basic training units, written while he was on the headquarters staff at Ottawa before proceeding overseas in July, 1941.

Kiska Invasion May Be Next On Allied Program

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
Associated Press Staff Writer

Washington, Aug. 11 — (AP) — Prolonged silence on American military activity in the North Pacific raised new speculation today over the imminence of an invasion of Japanese-held Kiska Island.

The last reported action at Kiska was 12 days ago, when a naval force shelled defence positions for the eighth time in July.

Usually well-informed quarters here profess to be without information on the fighting in the Aleutians since then, and cite the weather as a possible explanation for the apparent inactivity. In the past, fog and storm have made operations impossible for several days at a time but except in mid-winter have not caused a halt of as much as 12 days.

Gather Forces for Campaign.

One explanation discussed unofficially is that the American commanders in the Aleutians have been gathering their forces for a final campaign to reconquer Kiska. Another is that any operations which might be in progress preliminary to such a campaign are not being disclosed for strategical reasons.

Whatever Tokyo finds out about its beleaguered garrison, therefore, must come from Kiska itself and the Japanese there might be having trouble furnishing adequate reports. Their communications equipment, like all their other installations, must have taken a heavy beating in sea and air assaults.

Reconquest of the island has been a subject of speculation ever since the Japanese occupied it early in June 1942. The prospects of an amphibious attack were greatly heightened after American troops took Attu in May. That gave them a base of operations west of Kiska balancing the base on Anchitka Island to the east and permitted the establishment of a reasonably effective blockade.

GERMANS ATTEMPTING "DUNKIRK" FROM SICILY

80 Ships Shuttle Across Messina Str. With Troops

Protect Evacuation With Umbrella Of Anti-Aircraft Fire Of Great Intensity

STRONG REAR GUARDS

By NOLAND NORGAARD
Associated Press War Correspondent

With the British 8th Army in Sicily, Aug. 12 — (AP) — German evacuation of troops and equipment from Sicily to the Italian mainland was reported to be in full swing today with at least 80 vessels plying night and day across the Messina Strait under a record umbrella of anti-aircraft fire which was growing steadily in intensity.

Allied Progress Difficult

Strong German rear guards, well entrenched with mortars, machine-guns and artillery, and extensive road demolitions continued to make progress slow for the Allied armies converging on Messina and the evacuation beaches while the bulk of the German troops were being withdrawn.

Determined to save all possible equipment, the German Command was reported to have decreed that "the passport to Italy is a gun," meaning that troops must bring their weapons along if they want places in the boats at Messina.

British forces advancing along the east coast encountered a skeleton enemy force in a strong line covering the only avenues of approach with heavy mortar fire and a battery of possibly 16 88-millimetre guns.

The narrow, winding mountain roads the Germans were defending made it extremely difficult to dislodge them.

SEVERAL HUNDRED INVALIDED HOME

Most of Soldiers Who Have Returned Home Were Injured in Accidents

Halifax, Aug. 12 —(CP)—Several hundred Canadian soldiers and airmen, invalided home mostly as a result of accidents in Britain and illness, arrived here today aboard Canada's hospital ship, the former Lady Nelson. Some of the airmen are convalescing from injuries suffered in action.

American soldiers who saw action in North Africa came with the Canadians and will continue to the United States by train.

Most of the Canadian soldiers were injured in accidents in Britain while training for the coming offensive in Europe.

All were glad to get back home after several years in Britain but regretted being left behind when other Canadians went to Sicily.

Cpl. Lloyd Coffin, of Collingwood, Ont., was injured in an explosion while on training manoeuvres in Britain. It is good to see Canada again, he said but "I'd like to be over there when the fun starts."

"So Mr. Churchill is here in Canada. I bet that means something else will soon start again," exclaimed one of the men.

They were all waiting to get their English money changed to Canadian currency, and all said they were anxious to get home "to see the family."

U.S. Infantry Lands From Sea Behind Nazi Lines on North Coast

RANDAZZO UNDER FIRE

By RELMAN MORIN

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 12 —(AP)— A force of American infantry has again landed from the sea behind German lines on the north coast of Sicily in an amphibious operation more daring than the first and established a bridgehead east of Cape Orlando after cutting through powerful Nazi resistance.

Elsewhere in the battle for Sicily steady Allied advances were reported on all fronts and large-scale air attacks on the Italian mainland were resumed.

In the centre the key German base of Randazzo has been brought under heavy and light artillery fire. A British 8th Army column is reported more than half way along on the 10-mile road between Bronte and Randazzo while American troops fighting eastward along the road from Cesaro are reported to be three miles from the town.

On the east coast the villages of Prajola and Zafferana Etna, on the eastern slopes of Mount Etna, fell into the hands of the 8th Army.

(The daily communique, as received in New York, referred to capture of a "village south of Prajola and Zafferana Etna." This dispatch presumably is based on later information.

Canadians Are Resting

(The communique again did not mention Canadian troops and there has been speculation that Maj.-Gen. Guy Simond's 1st Division is resting following its month-long drive from its Pachino beachhead to the slopes of Mount Etna.)

The Americans had to fight their way ashore to launch the assault at dawn Wednesday and were met immednately by strong German counter-attacks, reports to headquarters said today.

American warships and fig[illegible] bombers covered the landing, pouring shells, bombs and machine-gun fire into German detachments as they surged down the beach to give battle.

The surprise element which contributed to the success of the outflanking of the San Agata-Cesaro line from the sea at the weekend was lacking, but the Americans broke up the counter-attacks, and a field dispatch said they had "successfully established a bridgehead."

British Premier's Train Passed Thru Belleville

While Belleville slumbered early Thursday morning a special passenger train bearing the world's most travelled person steamed slowly through the south section of the city and then rolled quietly westward.

Aboard the C.P.R. special train was none other than Winston Churchill, Prime Minister of Great Britain, perhaps the most talked of man in the world today. Also on the train was his daughter Mary.

Tunisian Arabs Made Unhappy When Allies Abolish Their Black Market

By MAURICI DESJARDINS
(Can. Press War Correspondent)

Tunis, July 25—(Delayed)—(CP)—Tunisian Arabs didn't particularly welcome the removal of the Axis from North Africa. Under the Axis regime Arabs in the city of Tunis made stacks of francs through their black market operations. Allied occupation put an end to all that and there is much Arabian unhappiness about the whole thing.

Rationing still continues in Tunis under Allied control but it is lavish compared with rationing under the Axis. The black market hasn't disappeared altogether but it has become several shades lighter.

Rations were so minute until May that the civilians of Tunis who had the means dealt with unscrupulous Arabs who demanded and got the equivalent of $2.50 for a pound of sugar and $1.60 for a bar of soap.

Consequently, Arabs, who never had much use for sugar and soap themselves, strolled through the streets brandishing bankrolls that would choke a camel.

There is in Tunis a strong Arab Nationalist movement whose motto is "All Frenchmen to the sea." The movement, called "Destour," is headed by Mohammed Bourguiba, an Arab lawyer married to a Frenchwoman.

During the six months of Axis regime, the "Destourians" annoyed the French by being nice to the Germans." Arabs gave the "Heil Hitler" salute to marching German troops and made them gifts of oranges.

Furthermore, the "Destourians" who hitherto had never concealed their dislike for the Italians, welcomed Mussolini's soldiers with open arms.

The "Destour" movement flourished under the blessing of Germans, Italians and the pro-German former Bey of Tunis. When the Allies took over hundreds of "Destourians" were placed under arrest. On July 14, General Mast freed 250 of them. General Mast is the present Resident of Tunis and at one time was General Giraud's companion in Nazi prison camps.

RUSSIANS TIGHTEN STRANGLEHOLD ON KHARKOV

Advance Within 7½ Miles of Stronghold And Sever Poltava-Kharkov Rail Line

CITY UNDER FIRE

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

Moscow, Aug. 12 (AP)—The Russian stranglehold on Kharkov tightened today as Red Army troops drove within 7 1-2 miles of the big Ukrainian city from the northeast and severed the Poltava-Kharkov railway, main lifeline of the defending Nazis, over a 10-mile stretch west of the nearly encircled bastion.

(The BBC reported that Kharkov is under fire from Russian guns. The broadcast quoted a late message from the front.)

The big drive against Bryansk rolled ahead though fresh German tank divisions, rallied in a desperate effort to halt the advance.

Perfect Co-ordination

Perfect co-ordination of Soviet tanks, infantry, artillery and aviation was an important factor in the high-speed rush to envelop Kharkov, Red Star, army newspaper, reported.

Soviet infantry and artillery were waging battle against Nazi strongholds while tank forces by-passed garrison towns to sever communications and capture settlements in the hills around the enemy bases.

East of Kharkov, where Red Army forces were fighting their way tenaciously into the city's suburban districts, the Germans were reported felling cherry and apple trees to construct pillboxes among the ruins of the villages.

The drive on Bryansk from Orel pressed forward through 70 more villages yesterday and drew steadily closer to the main objective. Despite bad weather, squadrons of Russian bombers rained destruction on the retreating Germans.

Two German armored trains operating on the railway east of Karachev were assisting fresh German tank and infantry units as they made numerous counter-attacks in an effort to stem the Soviet drive.

Close in on Karachev

(A BBC broadcast, recorded by CBS, said the Russians were less than 12 miles from Karachev, "advancing through deep minefields and meeting stubborn resistance all the way."

(The German high command said the "great defence battle" was continuing in the Belgorod area, without mentioning the threat to Kharkov, and declared that Soviet attacks southwest of Orel were frustrated. It said the Russians lost 102 tanks in yesterday's fighting.

(Both the Nazi high command and Transocean, German propaganda agency, said heavy Russian attacks continued south and southwest of Vyazma on the Smolensk front, an offensive not yet even hinted in dispatches from Moscow. Transocean conceded that the Russians were driving toward Kharkov, but quoted Berlin military quarters as saying the city was not yet threatened.)

Terni Heavily Bombed, Large-Scale Attacks Resumed on Italy

By DANIEL DE LUCE
(Associated Press War Correspondent)

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 12—(AP)—American four-engined bombers in strong force heavily bombed Terni, an important railway manufacturing centre 50 miles north of Rome Wednesday in the resumption of large-scale Allied attacks on the Italian mainland.

"The damage was severe," an official statement said, adding that "later photographs showed rolling mills were badly damaged, a boiler house probably damaged, a large group of workshops hit, a jute factory almost completely destroyed, two trains left burning and hits scored on both the gas works and the Royal Arms factory.

German Focke-Wulf 190s and Messerschmitt-10s and Italian Macchi 202s attacked the big Flying Fortress formation.

It was the first time Terni had been attacked by northwest African bombers and it marked the return of the heaviest Allied bombardment power to targets in the heart of Italy after several days of concentration on enemy communications for supply evacuation in Northeastern Sicily and the toe of Italy.

Heavy attacks in that area continued, with Allied air fleets striking against railways and highway bridges near Angitola and Marina Di Catanzaro in the Italian toe, while scourging bombings and strafings took a heavy toll of enemy vehicles, supply dumps and troop concentrations in the Sicilian bridgehead.

One Allied plane was missing from yesterday's operations. No enemy aircraft was reported destroyed.

R.A.F. Beaufighters attacked two schooners in coastal waters due west of Rome with cannon-fire, damaging a number.

American strafers reported 21 trucks destroyed in the Sicilian battle zone. Barracks were damaged, troop formations machine-gunned and an ammunition dump at Milazzo bombed and left burning. Fighter bombers sank four more small vessels in shipping sweeps.

The railway yards at Rosarno behind the German lines also were hit and Randazzo, the enemy's besieged strongpoint, was attacked several times.

R.A.F., U.S. and South African airmen participated in these raids. Half the Angitola Highway bridge was reported destroyed.

The enemy failed to intercept in these toe-of-Italy attacks and no anti-aircraft fire was encountered.

Besides its importance as a major railway junction, the Terni target includes four main highways which pass through the city, connecting it with the big Northern Italy industrial section.

RELAX CONTROLS SOON AFTER WAR AS POSSIBLE

W. P. Zeller Says Private Enterprise is Essential to Political Freedom

LIVING STANDARDS

Toronto, Aug. 12 — (CP) — Walter P. Zeller, of Montreal, President of Zeller's Limited, told the opening session of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association three-day war conference here today that wartime controls must be relaxed as soon as possible after the war.

Private enterprise is essential to political freedom, he said, and defined it as "a society free from those artificial restrictions, either by the state or by monopoly, which prevent any person who dares to take the risk, from setting forth on new economic voyages of discovery."

"No government controls presided over the industrial revolution," he said. "No state-controlled economy built the factories, laid the railroads, launched the ocean liners, invented and developed the electric light, the telephone, the automobile or the airplane.

"Under private enterprise has been built here one of the highest living standards in the world. It still rises," he added.

Farmers Urged To Buy Western Feed Immediately

Toronto, Aug. 12 (CP)—V. S. Millburn, Secretary of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture, said today that if farmers do not buy and store western grain now "the shortage will be reflected in a decrease of hogs, beef cattle, poultry and dairy products production during the fall and winter."

Mr. Millburn said both the Federal and provincial departments of agriculture have given financial assistance in the way of subsidies to help farmers in the purchase and carrying charges of carloads of western grain. He added that farmers should take advantage of available transportation facilities before delivery of the new eastern crop makes demands on these services

Montreal, Aug. 12 —(CP)— The Order-in-Council which suspended reduced railway fares for weekend and holiday travel has been extended to Feb. 15th., 1944, it was announced today by T. C. Lockwood, Controller of Transport. The original order covered a trial period from last April 15th. to August 15th.

ALEUTIAN-BASED BOMBERS ATTACK KURILE ISLAND

Approaches to Japan Proper Raided From the North

JAPANESE WARNED

New York, Aug. 12 — (AP) — A Japanese broadcast today reported American fliers had attacked the "northern section" of the Kurile Island approachs to Japan and warned:

"Further appearance of enemy planes from the north are to be expected."

In a later broadcast, the Tokyo radio identified the planes as eight heavy bombers and said the raiders were Aleutian-based.

The earlier announcement had claimed that Japanese anti-aircraft "promptly repulsed" the American attackers.

The broadcast warned the Japanese that the raid must be regarded as resulting from "positive measures" that the United States had taken to raid our mainland, Japan, from the north.

The first bombing of Japanese territory from Aleutian-based planes was made on Paramushiru on July 20 without loss.

Airmen returning to Attu Island from that 1,530-mile round trip raid said the bombing was no more difficult than the flights they had made against the Japanese base on Attu before it was retaken by American invading forces, and on Kiska, the only remaining Aleutian island still in Japanese hands.

Battle Casualties Taken to Africa

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 12 (AP)—Battle casualties in Sicily are reaching North African hospitals by air as quickly as 12 hours from the time they are wounded, Col. Daniel Franklin, surgeon of the United States 7th army, announced today.

Franklin disclosed the medical men and the equipment of captured Italian army units in Sicily are aiding the Allies. Paroles have been extended to Italian medical officers to serve in their own hospitals under Allied direction.

A large hospital for Italian casualties is operated by prisoners of war outside of Palermo.

JAPS EXECUTE MISSIONARIES

Chungking, Aug. 12 — (AP) — A Chinese press report today said that the Japanese have executed three Canadian missionaries at Hsuchow, in Kiangsu province, after several months of imprisonment and torture. The report gave no names or any clue to the identity of the alleged victims.

DAYLIGHT THRUST FOLLOWS NIGHT RAIDS ON RUHR

Four E-Boats Blown Up One Set Afire And Sixth Damaged By R. A. F. Force

NAZIS RETALIATE

London, Aug. 12 — (CP) —Heavy bombers of the United States 8th Army Air Force attacked industrial targets in Germany today, it was announced at American headquarters.

The American thrust, made across the Channel in bright sunlight, followed night raids on the Ruhr and Rhineland by R.A.F. Mosquitoes.

Bonn, One of Targets

The German radio claimed that targets in the Rhineland, particularly Bonn, 15 miles southeast of Cologne, were hit by the American raiders. The Nazi broadcast said a strong force of four-engined bombers made the attack, taking advantage of excellent cloud cover in their swing down the Rhine.

"The raiders were spotted before reaching the French coast," the German radio added. "They were intercepted and many heavy air battles were fought above the clouds."

The broadcast said the raiders concentrated their heaviest attack against the "inner city" of Bonn, which has a population of approximately 100,000.

Bonn, the target of five R. A. F. raids since the war began, is known chiefly for its university and as the birthplace of Beethoven. It is a large railway centre on a Rhine Valley line which forms one of Germany's most important north-south communications systems. Its industries include a factory producing light alloys, flour mills and warehouses.

The last previous attack by United States heavy bombers based in Britain was on Kassel, German locomotive production centre, July 30.

An Air Ministry communique did not list specific objectives of the night-raiding Mosquitoes.

Coastal observers said the daylight force appeared to be fairly large.

In other operations by the R.A.F. during the night, mines were laid in enemy waters and railway targets in France and the Low Countries were attacked. One night bomber was reported missing.

Germans Retaliate

German planes retaliated last night in the heaviest raid on Britain in several weeks when about 10 raiders dumped incendiaries on an unnamed southwest coast town.

Eight persons were killed and a number were injured when bombs destroyed a number of dwellings and stores and damaged two schools, a church and a number of shops.

Two neighboring towns also were attacked, it was announced, but only slight damage and no casualties were reported.

The overnight attacks on German war production plants in the Canadian 'Left Hook' Against Aderno Most Impressive Feat Says Munro

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

Catania, Sicily, Aug. 10 — (Delayed) — (CP Cable) — Success of the Canadian-British "left hook" on Aderno takes on greater proportions when the Semeto River battle ground on the plains south of Catania is viewed first hand. That is where the Germans created an impressive defence line of concrete pill boxes, strong points and gun positions.

I drove from Aderno along the 8th Army's fluid new front to Catania and seeing this now broken Nazi line realized more than ever before the vital importance of the wide flanking movement of the Etna line at Aderno. Without it the 8th Army might still be fighting before Catania.

The break-through at Aderno by the Canadians and the magnificent British 78th Division — a veteran of the Tunisian fighting — was a major factor in the enemy withdrawal northward here into the narrow corridor between Mount Etna and the sea.

On the outskirts of Catania a group of airdromes from which the Germans pounded Malta and Tunisia was devastated by Allied bombing and shelling. The runways were pitted, the hangars and dispersal areas shattered and 100 or more German fighters, gliders and bombers were lying wrecked.

Full Retribution

I thought back to Tunisia where I had seen British planes riddled on the ground by the Germans. Here was full retribution and more. Next to Aderno, this was the most complete bombing I have seen in Sicily.

A road from Catania led south through the plains to the Semito River bridge where British divisions fought a series of gallant actions to establish a bridgehead. Here had been some of the bloodiest fighting in the campaign.

Nazi reserves were moved hastily from Catania to the Aderno sector to try to block the break-through but the effort was in vain. The

Prime Minister, Daughter Cross To United States

Motored To Lower Arch Bridge After Viewing Falls From Lookout Tower

FLOWERS PRESENTED

By HAROLD FAIR
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Niagara Falls, Ont., Aug. 12 —(CP)— Prime Minister Churchill and his daughter, Mary, today visited this border tourist centre and then motored across the Lower Arch Bridge over the Niagara River to Niagara Falls, N.Y.

The Prime Minister and his daughter, who arrived at Victoria Park Station in a six-car special Canadian Pacific Railway train, viewed the falls area before motoring across the river. Mrs. Churchill remained in Quebec.

They saw the falls, which Mary pronounced "absolutely wonderful," the whirlpool and the monument to General Sir Isaac Brock, killed in a battle during the War of 1812.

For the British Prime Minister, it was no new sight but for Mary the tour was one that kept her chuckling with delight. She bought souvenir postcards at one point.

"My lad, I saw the falls before you were born," Mr. Churchill told The Canadian Press when asked if he had been here before. "They have been going quite a long time."

First Seen in 1900

Later he came over and told me he had seen them first in 1900. Asked if they had changed much, he said he had never seen them so green at the top.

Mr. Churchill and his party went to the falls directly from the station where their arrival, news of which had been kept strictly secret, was witnessed by only a scattered crowd.

Maj.-Gen. C. F. Constantine, Officer Commanding Military District No. 2 (Toronto) and Mayor George R. Inglis of Niagara Falls were there to welcome him. A guard of scarlet-coated Royal Canadian Mounted Police was lined up on the platform.

Cmdr. C. R. Thompson, Mr. Churchill's aide, was first out of the train followed by Mary Churchill, a subaltern in Britain's Auxiliary Territorial Service, who was wearing her uniform which had two pips, denoting her rank, on the shoulders.

Father Rested Well

She told Mrs. Inglis, wife of the Niagara Falls Mayor, that she nearly fell out of bed when she heard she was coming to Niagara Falls. She told the Mayor that her mother was rather tired and she confided to The Canadian Press that her father had rested well on the overnight train ride.

Miss Churchill chatted for a moment with Lieut. Don Baldwin of Winnipeg, Gen. Constantine's aide. She explained to him that the two red patches at the top of her sleeve denoted her connection with an anti-aircraft battery.

President Roosevelt Expected Soon At Quebec to Confer With Churchill

CABINET IN QUEBEC

Quebec, Aug. 12 —(CP)— Prime Minister Winston Churchill has left Quebec by train for an unannounced destination but military staff work continued undiminished here today as British, American and Canadian officers prepared for his return and the arrival shortly of President Roosevelt for the two leaders' sixth wartime meeting.

In the interim Canada virtually is being governed from this old capital of what was once New France.

Mr. Churchill and Prime Minister Mackenzie King held a joint meeting of their respective cabinet war committees here yesterday and in the British Prime Minister's absence most of the Canadian cabinet is staying here with Mr. King.

Yesterday Mr. Churchill and Mr. King, the official host to the conferees, completed preliminary conferences at a three-hour session of the war committees and the British war cabinet was represented by the Prime Minister and the Lord President of the Council, Sir John Anderson. The Canadian cabinet war committee was represented by Mr King and nine ministers.

It was the first time such a joint meeting has ever been held and it was stated another session would take place "at a later date."

Continue Discussions

Throughout yesterday high British, American and Canadian staff officers continued discussions which are expected to occupy them and their army of technical experts and advisors for some time.

They labored, as did the joint cabinet war committees, in the Chateau Frontenac, the huge Quebec hotel which has been taken over for a 20 day period ending August 27.

Only meagre details of the conference have been doled out through a strict, sometimes confused and swiftly-changing censorship and government agencies, and only meagre glimpses of the official party have been obtained by the public. It is assumed, however that yesterday's preliminary Churchill-King discussions were occupied mainly with revelations by Mr. Churchill of "inside information" on the war to date and a study of what place Canadians may take in future thrusts against occupied Europe or in the Pacific.

Presumably the Chiefs of Staff and other experts are working on data upon which Mr. Churchill and President Roosevelt will base their decisions for global strategy, government of occupied and liberated countries, and post-war realization of the objectives of the Atlantic Charter which was announced two years ago today.

There may be little news of the conference now until President Roosevelt comes here some days hence to join with Mr. Churchill in meetings which will cover the entire field of Allied activity at sea, on land and in the air, in Europe and in all Pacific areas.

SPEEDERS 'HOOKED' BY CITY POLICE

Belleville's midnight police patrol cracked down on speeding motorists Wednesday night when several offenders were apprehended driving at alleged fast rates of speed on Station St. and Cannifton Road by Sergeant Arnott and P. C. Carruthers. The offenders will be hailed into court on speeding counts on Friday.

"Warnings pertaining to speeding on city streets seem to have gone unheeded in Belleville so it has been necessary to enforce this law to the fullest extent. There will be no exceptions or excuses accepted when motorists are found violating traffic regulations in Belleville from now on," warned police officials this morning.

GROWTH ON VINES IS POTATO

Speculation as to whether it was a tomato or potato has held the attention of the editorial department of The Ontario Intelligencer after a cutting from the potato vines was brought into the office by Mr. S. Herrington, 161 Mary Street. Investigation was made and it was learned, that this was not a phenomenon but the normal reproduction of potatoes. The seed looks like a tomato in shape and contains small white seeds very similar to those in tomatoes and might easily confuse the amateur gardener. Allowed to ripen and come to maturity these seed potatoes may be planted and will produce a new variety of potato. It seemed too good to be true, that a double crop was to be expected on the same vine.

TOMATOES PLENTIFUL ON LOCAL MARKET

Home-grown tomatoes predominated on the market in Belleville Thursday varying in price from 15c the small box to 50c the basket; the fruit is large and firm. Cauliflowers sold for 10c for the small heads to 25c for the large. A few late peas, were offered by the grower at 45c the quart. Green corn has dropped to 35c per dozen ears and reports indicate an abundant crop. Potatoes remain at the maximum of 57c a peck and ripe eating apples sold for 50c the half peck. Blueberries brought 35c the quart, and a few raspberries at 40c. Marrows brought 5c and 10c each and cucumbers were three for 5c and 40c the basket for the small pickling kind.

KIWANIANS PAINT SIGNS FOR WINDOWS

Early risers in the city found themselves greeted with neatly painted signs on most of the Front Street store windows. The signs announced the dates of the Kiwanis Street Karnival and urged the public attendance at the Karnival.

These early risers were also greeted with bright splashes of the paint used in these signs which, and they missed the sign itself would have told them that the busy gentlemen had been that way for the sidewalk, from Victoria Street to Dundas is not so neatly painted. However, the cause is worthy and the paint will soon wear away.

Pte. R. Bradford Wounded in Sicily

Private Robert Bradford, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Bradford, of Corbyville, residents of Belleville until about two years ago, is officially reported wounded in action, presumably in Sicily.

The official telegram from Ottawa received by Private Bradford's mother, stated that information of the nature of his wounds was not available and that further information would be at once forwarded on its receipt at Ottawa.

Private "Bob" Bradford has been a member of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment since the earliest months of the war. After training at Picton he went overseas early in 1940 and until the departure of the regiment for the Sicilian operation he had been in Britain. This unit has been prominent in the invasion of Sicily.

"Bob" is well known in the city and the numerous friends of the young soldier await anxiously further news regarding his condition.

He is a member of a family which has given and is giving notable service in the defence of the Empire and freedom. Mr. David Bradford, his father, is a veteran of the First World War. "Bob" has two brothers serving in the Canadian forces, Jack in the R.C.N.V.R., and Norman who is overseas in the Royal Canadian Air Force, after a course of training in Canada in which he achieved high standing. His sister's husband, Flight Sergt. M. H. Lepard, is in the R.C.A.F.

Friday the 13th Beware! Beware!

This Friday will be an unwelcome day for some and a welcomed day for others, according to whether they are superstitious or not. Undoubtedly something will happen to somebody just as something happens to somebody every Friday, or any other day whether it's the 13th or not.

There has never been anything historical or authentic, statistical or otherwise to prove that Friday the 13th is any unluckier for human kind as a whole than any other day; in fact, lots of people have found it a very fortunate day for themselves personally.

Perhaps its rarity has a great deal to do with its meaning both ways. This bogeyman trick of the calendar appeared three times last year, in February, March and November. Tomorrow is its only appearance for 1943 and again next year it will appear only once, in October, but in 1945 it is down for a return engagement in April and July.

To those who will not walk under a ladder on an ordinary day, beware; to those who will walk under a ladder at any time, beware, too. And the only harm that can come from evading a black cat is if you step into the path of a car.

Wage Rates For War Prisoners

Ottawa, Aug. 12 (CP) — Wage rates for prisoners of war engaged in work in Canada outside internment camps will be calculated when possible on an incentive basis with a view to obtaining "maximum production results," said an order-in-council announced today.

The order said that Labor Minister Mitchell now is authorized to establish wage scales for prisoners either on the basis of not more than 50 cents a day for an eight-hour day, or piece-work wage rates, appropriate to the nature of the work, which will permit of earning on a producing basis equal to about 50 cents a day.

Trenton —(Special)— Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hyatt, 69 Water St. have received word that their son, Pte. Harry Homer Barton Hyatt, 28, known to all his friends as "Tiny," has been wounded in action, presumably in Sicily.

"Tiny" enlisted with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment on May 7th., 1940, and went overseas in July of the same year. During the summer of 1941 he married Miss Doris Davies of Hespeler, Surrey, England.

The extent of his injuries has not been learned.

Pte. Hyatt was popular in amateur hockey and soft ball circles before leaving Trenton.

Mrs. J. E. Cote, 207 Dufferin Ave., has received a cable from her son Sergeant John Cote, presumably from Sicily and reading "All well and safe, please don't worry, all my love." Sergeant Cote has been overseas since December, 1939, and enlisted with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment prior to the outbreak of war. More than a year ago he was awarded the Canadian Efficiency Medal for Meritorious Service.

Ambassadors Confer With Stalin

London, Aug. 12 — (CP) — Premier Joseph Stalin conferred with the British and American ambassadors in Moscow yesterday in talks which appeared to be closely linked with the forthcoming meetings between Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt.

In making the announcement, the Moscow radio offered no comment, but the timing of the meeting, coinciding with preparations in Quebec for the sixth Churchill-Roosevelt war conference, left little doubt here as to its nature.

It had been previously announced that Moscow was being informed closely of all developments in the Italian situation.

Prime Minister Churchill's trip to Canada to continue his personal war conferences with the President produced the confident hope in Britain of Italy's quick surrender and a grand offensive against the Germans before the end of 1943.

Stalin's absence, however, brought some comment from the British press.

"Other means of personal consultation must be found" if the Russian Premier cannot leave his own country, the London Times commented.

The Daily Telegraph said that "the practical inconvenience" of Stalin's absence was no barrier to associating the Russians closely with the talks.

Premier Stalin will be given detailed accounts and will send his comments, said the Daily Express, which added that the Russian Premier had been invited to attend the conferences but was unable to accept.

Five Young Men Charged With Gas Thefts

Five Belleville and district residents appeared in County Police Court before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd at the Court House here today charged with the theft of gasoline from the private commercial gas pumps on the Montrose Dairy property owned by George K. Graham, Sidney Township. The accused appeared but were not asked to plead as the cases were enlarged for one week at the request of their counsel, R. D. Arnott, K.C., and Robert Pringle. Their names were given as Harry Whitmarsh, John Turner, Garth Sharpe and George Asselstine of Belleville and John LaTone, R.R. No. 3, Belleville.

The multiple charges were preferred by Provincial Constable C. W. O'Brien after Mr. Graham complained that during the months of July and August gasoline had been missing from his pumps on the farm premises at different intervals. No evidence was adduced in court today and Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., set the bail at $250 in each case, except that of Whitmarsh, who was allowed his freedom upon his own recognizance.

Convicted of Speeding

Otherwise cases in the court were few although Clarence Poole, Belleville, paid $17.50, including costs, after being convicted of speeding under the War Measures Act, Traffic Officer W. G. Milton preferring the count. Two inebriates also fattened the coffers of the court by paying fines levied under the L.C.A.

Police Probing Windsor Report

Windsor, Aug. 12 —(CP)— Police today were investigating a report of a Windsor resident that Eckhert Brosig, 22-year-old German parachutist who escaped Sunday from an internment camp at Monteith, Ont., was in this city Monday.

Police said they were informed the suspect was wearing a new zipper jacket and bore a deep scar on his left cheek. He was stopped by two men of his own height, one of whom walked with a limp, the resident said, and after walking a short distance they separated.

Brosig, 22, who escaped in June, 1942, and made his way as far as New York before being captured, was described by officials at the Monteith camp as five feet eight inches in height, weighing 147 pounds, with brown eyes, dark hair, dark complexion and a scar on his left cheek.

Report Germany Halts Shipments Into Italy

Berne, Aug. 12—(AP)—A report from the German frontier said today that Germany has halted shipments of all types to Italy.

Inside Italy, in the meantime, Premier Pietro Badogliog's government appeared to be awaiting developments on other fronts that might alter the Italian situation and provide a chance to take Italy out of the war.

Italian newspapers, giving prominence to the conference, declared the Allies appeared uncertain whether the Casablanca formula of unconditional surrender applied to the political as well as the military field.

Policemen in some country districts of England are being issued with wooden soled shoes.

PRIME MINISTER

A few moments later Mr. Churchill made his appearance and the small crowd cheered. Wearing a grey fedora, a light grey summer suit, with cuffs on the trousers, he had the inevitable cigar in his mouth and carried a cane. As he descended the steps of the railway car, he gave the familiar V sign.

After the welcome by Mayor Inglis, the party—followed the press cars—drove through beautiful green Queen Victoria Park to Table Rock House at the edge of the Horshoe Falls.

Flowers Presented

A hastily-selected bouquet of gladioli was presented to the Prime Minister's daughter by Mrs. Charlotte Barton, hostess at the Park Commission restaurant. Mrs. Barton accompanied the party on the trip along with Maxim T. Grey, general manager of the Parks Commission.

Between gasps of delight at the sight of the wild green water tumbling over the precipice, Mary told Mrs. Barton the flowers were "perfectly lovely."

With Niagara Falls as a whole apparently unaware of the distinguished visitors, the party drove from the Falls beneath the Rainbow Bridge and along the river road to the Whirlpool. Hardly anyone stood along the roadside to watch.

From the whirlpool they went to Queenston Heights where the party saw from the verandah of Queenston Heights restaurant the broad vista of the Niagara moving towards Lake Ontario.

Climb Too Much

Scarcely a glance did Mr. Churchill cast at the towering shaft of Brock's monument commemorating General Sir Isaac Brock, who was killed trying to storm Queenston Heights in the War of 1812. He told someone it was no stranger to him and when asked if he would like to climb the 175 steps to the top replied: "Wouldn't be good for me at all."

Like any tourist, Mary selected a group of souvenir postcards in the restaurant but James Brown, the man in charge of the card counter, would not let her pay.

"I'll send you a book as a souvenir," said Mr. Churchill and he asked for Brown's address. With shaking hands, Brown scrawled it out. Mr. Churchill handed the card to an aide and said: "Send him a book and a photograph."

The Prime Minister bent down and picked up a mignonette from a big bed of the flowers at the entrance to the restaurant as the party left. The motorcade swung away from the restaurant and back up the river road to the lower arch bridge which Mr. Churchill and his party crossed at 9:45 a. m.

Later the special train also was taken across the river to Niagara Falls, N. Y.

QUINTE W. I.

The Quinte W.I. held their August meeting at Mrs. N. Brown's home on Tuesday, Aug. 10th, with an attendance of twenty-two.

The meeting was opened by the president, Mrs. A. Greatrix, who led in prayer for peace, followed by the Lord's Prayer. The minutes of the last meeting were read by Mrs. G. Bradsha and approved. Some business matters were discussed.

"Neighborliness" was the theme for the meeting and as Mrs. S. Anderson could not be present, Mrs. Greatrix continued with the program which was as follows: War poetry, Mrs. N. Brown; paper, "Feeding the Family in War Time," Mrs. Roy Clazie; humorous reading, Mrs. G. Palmer; paper prepared by Mrs. S. Anderson on "Education and Training of Children," given by Mrs. J. Garbutt; "Completion of Old Sayings," Mrs. A. Greatrix; solo, Mrs. F. Parrott.

Mrs. A. Mitchell spoke of seeing the presentation of the two mobile kitchens at Toronto last Friday to the Civil Air Raid Service, to be used in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. One mobile kitchen was given from the W. I. Central Fund and presented by the provincial president, Mrs. C. Holmes. The other kitchen was presented from the Women's Institutes and Junior Farmers of Middlesex counties. Mrs. Brown and conveners served lunch and a social time was enjoyed by all.

PRESIDENT

King Cabinet

Possibly they will have worked out together some basis of operation before they sit lown in the conference chamber amid the army of technicians and high officials.

Meanwhile Prime Minister Mackenzie King and the nine members of his cabinet who met with Mr. Churchill yesterday are staying here. In addition to their war conference yesterday they held a routine cabinet meeting to deal with urgent orders which must be sent back to Ottawa for approval of the Governor General.

There have been many occasions when His Excellency temporarily occupying the Vice-Regal residence in the citadel here, has given approval to Orders-in-Council passed in Ottawa and sent here for assent. Probably never before was the situation reversed as it is now. Mr. King is occupying the citadel residence where he was host to Mr. Churchill, Mrs. Chuschill, their daughter Mary and Mr. Churchill's immediate party, all of whom will make the ancient fortress home their quarters while in Quebec.

Extra air raid precautions have been taken in the form of anti-aircraft batteries, and gun crews have been established on the grassy slopes of the citadel and the Plains of Abraham at its foot, while extra military planes are reported to have been brought into the area.

Bees are so sensitive to atmosphere that an air raid warning has been known to kill an entire swarm of 60,000 through their efforts to protect their queen, J. B. Palfram, Yorkshire, Englang beekeeper, reported.

Eight Birmingham doctors have closed their surgeries, pooled their practices and set up a central health service.

The War Today—
United Course Imperative to Allies In War And Politics of Europe

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst)

This column yesterday suggested that one of the problems likely to be discussed in the forthcoming conference between Messrs. Churchill and Roosevelt is what policy will bring the best post-war co-operation among Britain, the United States and Russia in particular, and all the Allies in general.

This great issue, as I see it, contemplates the likelihood that the Soviet Union will emerge from the war the dominant power in Europe, and perhaps in the Orient as well. That's the way the cards are falling at present.

Now of course I don't know whether that subject will come before President Roosevelt and Premier Churchill. I just think it's so pressing that it almost inevitably must arise. Next to the winning of the war, there's no question of greater importance today. Vice-President Henry Wallace of the United States pinned the thing down with startling bluntness last March when he declared:—

"Unless the Western Democracies and Russia come to a satisfactory understanding before the war ends, I very much fear that World War No. 3 will be inevitable."

Mr. Wallace isn't the only one who foresees the possibility of conflicting interests. I found it all the way from England, through the Middle East, to Chungking, during my recent 35,000-mile tour. Now on the eve of the Allied conference we see this idea cropping up significantly in the British press.

United Course

The Yorkshire Post says Premier Joseph Stalin was invited to attend the conference but wasn't able to accept. The paper then warns that the "hour is at hand when it will be imperative for the United Nations to pursue a united course not only with regard to military operations but equally with regards to the politics of Europe."

The London Times — "The Thunderer" — stresses the necessity for unity among the Americans, British and Russians, and gives a gloomy alternative "a fresh calamity for Europe." Lord Beaverbrook's London Evening Standard expresses regret at Stalin's absence from the Washington conference. The London Daily Herald says the "time has come when Britain, America and Russia should be announced with a single voice their program for the restoration of political liberty to Europe."

What's the exact point of all this anxiety as the war rushes towards its end? We get many expressions of fear but people seem to be terrified of taking a peep into the closet to see what's there.

Actually, there's no dark secret involved, and no reason why it shouldn't be discussed. Better understanding of the problem might help solve the difficulties—if any.

Position of Russia in Post-War Europe

The point is that many astute observers throughout the world believe Russia will, as already stated, dominate Europe and maybe the Far East. Because this would represent a volcanic political upheaval, a lot of countries are afraid of the consequences. They are particularly fearful lest communism should be thrust upon them.

Russia is the world's largest country in area, occupying one-sixth of the earth's surface and having a population of nearly 200,000,000. It is virtually self-contained, possessing almost every natural resource known to man. It stretches from Europe through to the Pacific—a two-continent Empire.

Militarily Impregnable

Already it possesses a titanic strength which potentially would seem to be unlimited Militarily it's virtually impregnable. Its position as a military power has been established by sensational achievements on the battle field.

All these circumstances combine to make Russia heir to the politico-economic-military domination of central and eastern Europe which Hitler threw away when he started out to beat the world. The Soviet influence in the Far East long has been great, and the war will enhance it.

So there in a very sketchy way are the fundamental facts of the situation. The problem is to work out some agreement among the major powers which will prevent the circumstances from developing adversely.

Picton, Aug. 12 — Leslie Arnold, 22, of Carrying Place, Ont., last night escaped from Picton jail where he was being held on a charge of theft of $270 from his employer. He has not yet been recaptured.

Officials said he made a rope of his bedding and fashioned a hook which he caught on the eavestroughing, enabling him to scale the wall. Arnold also hauled a prison bench into the jail yard placed it leaning upwards towards the top of the wall, which assisted in his escape.

The 22-year-old Carrying Place farmhand was arrested by Provincial Police on a charge of stealing $270.00 from his employer, Arnold Babcock, of Carrying Place. Prince Edward police authorities organized posses and blocked all exits from the county, but Arnold remained at large early Thursday morning. "There is no doubt he is hiding out in the county some place and it should not be difficult to track him down sooner or later," stated County Constable James Lovelace of Bloomfield today.

How long is 3 weeks, Ivan?

● Hitler boasted he would smash Russia in three weeks . . . Ivan's courage, resourcefulness and fighting skill have already spun those three weeks into a third year.

What is three weeks . . . what is Time itself to Ivan but a succession of minutes, each one marked by the fall of a Nazi soldier.

We have helped Ivan destroy Hitler's time-table by sending planes, tanks, guns, shells, food. It is a proud thing to share even a little in Russia's triumph to this hour.

We who make high-proof alcohol for the smokeless powder in Ivan's high explosives also have a special way of measuring Time. In our plants, wholly converted to war production, we mark the passing of each hour by the thousands of gallons of high-proof alcohol flowing from our giant stills. Three weeks, three months, three years . . . it will go on flowing until the last Axis soldier has laid down either his body or his arms . . . in unconditional surrender!

THE HOUSE OF SEAGRAM

ALCOHOL FOR WAR IS USED IN SYNTHETIC RUBBER, MEDICINES, SHATTERPROOF GLASS AND OTHER PRODUCTS. EVERY SEAGRAM PLANT IN CANADA AND THE UNITED STATES IS ENGAGED 100% IN THE PRODUCTION OF HIGH-PROOF ALCOHOL FOR WAR.

—CANNED FOODS ARE AS IMPORTANT AS AMMUNITION

WOMEN OF ONTARIO
Your Help is URGENTLY NEEDED

WITH more and more Canadian Troops going into active service as the Allied Forces press the attack, Canned Foods become as vitally essential as bullets.

5,000 Ontario Women and Girls will have to replace the workers who usually man the Canning Factories each season. These workers are now almost entirely employed on year-round war jobs, but the canning crops of Ontario still must be saved for Victory.

Ontario's youth has volunteered and has been organized to harvest the abundant crops of tomatoes, corn, peaches and grapes from fields and orchards of Ontario. Ontario's Mothers and Sisters—housewives and unemployed girls, from 16 to 60—most of whom have never seen the inside of a canning factory before, are URGENTLY NEEDED in the canning factories of this province to save every ounce of precious food in the next 12 weeks.

NO WORKING PERMIT IS REQUIRED FROM EMPLOYMENT AND SELECTIVE SERVICE FOR THIS WORK. Current wages will be paid. The work is not hard and good living quarters will be arranged for if you are employed away from home.

Do YOUR Part: Act NOW! Today, before you forget. Apply at once to the superintendent of the nearest canning factory, if you live near one, or see the Agricultural Advisor at your nearest Employment and Selective Service Office, for full information. If neither is convenient to you, write direct to Farm Service Force, Parliament Buildings, Toronto.

IF

Canadian Armed Forces are to be properly fed on the battle line.

Canadian Homes are to have sufficient Canned Fruits and Vegetables this Winter.

Mr. Churchill in Canada

Canada again welcomes Prime Minister Churchill on a visit to confer with Prime Minister King and to meet Canada's War Committee. Later in his trip to the Western World he will hold conference with President Roosevelt at Quebec City, once capital of New France and now for the time being, virtual capital of Canada.

The Canadian people through Prime Minister King are proud to be hosts to Mr. Churchill, Mrs. Churchill and their daughter, Mary, member of one of the British women's service organizations.

While he was in Washington at one of the conferences with Mr. Roosevelt Mr. Churchill came to Canada and visited Ottawa, where he spoke before the assembled Houses.

Mr. Churchill's presence in the Western World will be freighted with immense possibilities as the conflict in Europe moves more and more swiftly to the climax and the victory of which the Allied Powers are confident.

World-shaking events of a favorable kind have taken place in the past eight or nine months, events which have thrown Mussolini into the discard and will have forced Italy out of the war and have marked the beginning of the last stages of the war against Germany. These are momentous times. Victories have come in air, on land and in the sea to the United Nations while the Axis satellites are aware of their precarious position and realize the impossibility of German victory and the coming "unconditional surrender" of the Axis and Germany is being pounded in her war industries in a way which must be playing havoc with the German strength.

Not All-Powerful

The dictators and tyrants are in the final analysis not all-powerful. Mussolini who ruled Italy from 1922 to 1943 has been kicked out and the party that held him in power is broken up. All these tragedies to Mussolini came in spite of his desire that they should not be.

Hitler will be in a similar state. When he thought he found his generals running short of ideas in a military way he chose one for the supreme command who he though knew more of war than the German generals—himself. But losses before the Russians last year was a setback and the German generals again took charge of the war. But Hitler's woes are not ended. There is said to be something doing in Germany of great importance. An unconfirmed report says the generals have taken control of the Reich out of Hitler's hands and are using him only as a figure head after substituting Goering in his place.

These men with the great limitations of aggressors have had violent careers and will have violent ends. Mussolini has had a taste of his, and Hitler is getting a taste of the supreme violence which is to end his miserable public career. Hitler who has allowed the German people to attach almost divine power to his miserable self will meet the fate such a vainglorious, selfish, cruel figure deserves.

As An Example

Will theatre audiences and movie house patrons in ages yet to be see Mussolini, the Duce, strut his part as a supreme example of the boaster and the pomposity of a dictator. Saturday Review of Literature says that "for the novelist or playwright the career of Mussolini is almost bottomless in its dramatic possibilities."

The man who loved pomp and display and who thundered before the Roman populace gathered before his balcony is no doubt destined to point a moral and illustrate a tale of the tragedy of the boaster in public life.

There can be no doubt that Mussolini will go down as the grasping, selfish, boasting leader, full of pomp. It was indeed a fact that one of the earliest plays in history was one in which a boaster was the chief character.

Life has strange ways of dealing judgment to men. In this age Mussolini has sent thousands of Italians to their death. He has caused the deaths of Allied servicemen through his glorification of self and has gone, no one knows where, until the inner circles of Italians reveal where he is held. The man that bound millions of Italians in the shackles of Fascism and sold his country in the hope of gain through treachery with Hitler against France and Britain and the rest of the Allied world, is by destiny of fate held in durance for the present as far as known and has still to face the world court.

Future ages will see in him the awful example of selfishness and self-glory. He will be made the mockery of wits and critics, he will be held to scorn. Even his name may become a by-word.

The world has seen two scoundrels in action, Mussolini and Hitler, and can see in their careers how punishment is brought about for those who flout the laws of human conduct. Possibly no period in history has seen in public men such awful examples of the working of evil in human hearts.

The lives of these two men, enemies of humanity, surely depict how man's ideas and ideals and thoughts swell out into the world, and if they are of evil, cause a great harvest of evil. The Bible is full of lessons on human life and the consequences of evil. Hitler and Mussolini in secular history are examples of the way of evil that leads to destruction and death.

Dog's Journey

(Sarnia Canadian Observer)

T. A. Fee, a Vancouver architect, shipped his Canadian Airedale from his British Columbia home to his brother-in-law, Thomas Paton, at Ardrossan, near Edmonton, Alberta.

About six weeks later, the dog walked into Mr. Fee's home in Vancouver. He was "thin and tired and footsore, as if he had been travelling without a rest." Buster had covered a distance of 770 miles. From Edmonton to Vancouver, there was no travelled road — only the railroad track, over three chains of mountains. For most of the way, the route was broken only by the occasional railroad section house.

How had this faithful Airedale been able to pick the right one of 12 railroads out of Edmonton; how had he managed to find food through all those long weeks and how, strangest of all, had he known those steel tracks would surely lead him home?

Blueberry News

(Saint John Telegraph-Journal)

The blueberry requires a minimum of sugar and rationing of this commodity will not affect the consumption of this berry so much as others. But the shortage of pickers may cut the supply offered for sale. Just at present it is surmised that the blueberry will be one of the minor casualties of the war. Fortunately some patches of the berries are close to the towns and cities so that residents may pick fruit for themselves, if they have the opportunity. Even a small cut in the production will be a matter of wistful regret on the part of many people.

What What

(Vancouver Sun)

It takes seven pounds of corn to make a pound of pork on the hoof. But you can make 238 muffins from seven pounds of corn. The lesson in this is that civilians must eat more grain and vegetable products, less meat. The idea is to substitute direct consumption of field crops for indirect consumption in the form of meat.

JUST FOLKS

NOSTALGIA

'Tis home that matters most of all
 If but the facts be had,
Where wait with welcome in the hall
 The mother and the dad,
And if you doubt that this is so
 With strangers go to stay
And look for gladness, high and low,
 A thousand miles away.

You may not, when they're always nigh,
 Full value as you should
The mother's cookies, cake and pie,
 Although you think them good,
But absent be for long months through
 Then, with some other aches,
Will come a yearning deep to you
 For things your mother makes.

Oh, you may think the garden small
 And right perhaps you are,
But you will magnify it all
 If you must dwell afar,
And every blossom there will be Remembered day by day
If home in mem'ry you must see
 A thousand miles away.

Ask any lad who fights today,
 On land or sky or sea,
If he could only have his way
 Where he would choose to be
And he will say, when battles cease
 And done the need to roam,
He only wants to be at peace
 And with the folks at home.

Etna line collapsed with the fall of Centruipe and Aderno and the enemy pulled out from the Catania front.

Along the road were dozens of German graves marked by crosses and German helmets. There were British graves too, and wrecked German 88-millimetre guns, tanks and Bren carriers.

The Nazis had lined the plain with pillboxes, many of them smashed to pieces by British shells. The enemy also had strong points in houses, haystacks and slight knolls along the 12-mile plain between Catania and the line of hills to the south. In hills west of Catania the enemy had a series of gun positions commanding the plain.

It was a scattered but formidable defence, thoroughly planned. But the move from the mountains of Central Sicily by British and Canadian infantry, tanks and guns, in columns converging on Aderno, partially outflanked this line.

Driving into Catania I felt like a bush-shirted Rip Van Winkle coming down from the hills. It was the first large city with shops, office buildings, and broad avenues I had seen for two months.

Yellow-painted desert trucks of the 8th Army were moving through the streets and British Tommies were at every corner. The people seemed timid but cordial.

On a kiosk was a poster of Prime Minister Churchill with the words, in Italian, "No matter what the difficulties and tribulations there will be born a new liberty and glory for all humanity." One citizen took pains to point it out to me.

The Sawdust Runs Out of Caesar

(An Editorial in The New York Herald Tribune)

The sawdust Caesar has collapsed in the ruins of his pasteboard empire, and the first light of the dawn is breaking through the cloudy darkness over Europe. Mussolini is out; his failure, and Fascism's, manifest to the world. An aging figure slips into the shadows, while Italians are cheering foreign troops on Italian soil, delivering their verdict on a regime that has brought them only shame, slavery and destruction. They were told to believe, obey and fight. The foundations of their belief in Fascism and its leader have been destroyed; they will no longer obey, and it remains to be seen how long any of them will fight.

What the fall of Mussolini will bring to Italians is obscure now. The new government of the King and Marshal Badogilo is rallying them to the defence of Italian soil, trying to tap those sources of Italian patriotism which could no longer find hope or inspiration in Il Duce and his crumbling, vicious system. The war will continue, the Marshal tells the Italian people. Italy will remain true to her pledged word. Perhaps, then, this is just the old Fascist Italy, the old German puppet show, with the new characters in the leading roles. But the same stern facts which brought Mussolini low—the war's unpopularity in Italy, the Allied strength in arms—will still militate against any effort to make a successful defence of the country in Germany's interest. The Italian people know these facts; the King and the Marshal cannot be blind to them. The palace revolution in Rome may have been planned as the last desperate effort to keep Italy in the war, or the first overt action to take her out. In either case the final collapse cannot be far off.

The rule of force and fraud in Italy which found its epitome in Benito Mussolini has failed, miserably—failed to hold the loyalty of Italians or to fight efficiently against foreign foes. The Fascist line in Europe is breached at last, and all the lands awaiting liberation—all the captive peoples, the satellite nations bound, no less in victory than in defeat, to Hitler's ear—must see the coming of the new day of freedom.

CAT RETURNS CANARY

Toronto, Aug. 12 (CP)—Maybe it has all been a mistake about cats and birds not getting along together. Or maybe a Persian cat belonging to C. O. Sellers, of Toronto, is the exception, for the cat was responsible for the safe return of a canary escaped from Mrs. A. McCarten, its owner. The bird was brought back with only an injured wing bu his feline retriever.

PREACHER BREAKS UP DICE GAME

Palestine, Tex., Aug. 12 (AP)—When a group started a dice game after a businessmen's barbecue they thought all the preachers were gone. But the Rev. AMERICAN CONSTITUTION

When Thomas Jefferson first saw a copy of the constitution of the United States he was not particularly impressed with it.

From Paris, where he was American minister when the constitution was drafted and submitted to the states, Jefferson wrote to S. S. Smith:

"There are very good articles in it, and very bad. I do not know which preponderate."

But within a few years he had revised upward his opinion of the document. In March, 1789, he wrote to David Humphrey:

"The Constitution . . . is unquestionably the wisest ever yet presented to men."

In a narrow sense the federal constitution was the work of the delegates to the Philadelphia convention; in a broader sense, the document was largely the product of political evolution.

William E. Gladstone, the great British statesman, in an article in the North American Review in 1878 wrote:

"As the British Constitution is the most subtle organism which has ever proceeded from progressive history, so the American Consituation is the most wonderful work ever struck off at a given time by the grain and purpose of man."

But Wendell Phillips, the famous orator, had said seventeen years earlier:

"All that is valuable in the Constitution is one thousand years old."

"We are under a constitution, but the constitution is what the judges say it is," declared Charles Evans Hughes in a speech at Elmira, New York, May 3, 1907.

In a radio speech delivered March 2, 1939, Franklin D. Roosevelt said:

"The United States Constitution has proved itself the most marvelously elastic compilation of rules of government ever written."

Three years later, when he was inaugurated President of the United States, F. D. R. said:

"Our Constitution is so simple and practical that it is possible always to meet extraordinary needs by changes in emphasis and arrangement without loss of essential form."

On Leave In England Charmian Sees Cornwall, Folkestone And The Queen

By Pte. Charmian Sansom, CWAC

The other night I stood on a cliff on the Cornish coast, watching the sun sinking into its bed of pink and mauve clouds. Above, the gulls wheeled and soared in the wind, and below the sea dashed itself against the rocky shore. The only reminder of war, was the trim silhouette of an aircraft against the evening sky.

Pte. Charmian Sansom

Dad and I had been fortunate enough to be able to spend a week's leave together and he couldn't have picked a more wildly beautiful spot.

I was amazed to find that the accent of the Cornish people is more like that of Canadians than any other I have heard in England. During one of our rambles, we had a chat with a very friendly farmer who might have lived in Ontario all his life to judge from his speech.

The village nearby was quite fascinating. The streets were so narrow that when a bus came by, I felt quite sure that it would scrape the houses on either side. The houses are nearly all whitewashed, which gives the village a very clean appearance. Dad was looking for a barber, but his search was fruitless. The barber, they told us, had joined up, and now, if you wanted a haircut, you had to wait until Thursday night, when a barber came around from another town! I saw my first thatched roof, and heard my first cuckoo here.

English Ignore the Shells

I must tell you about my visit to Folkestone On a clear day you can see the coast of occupied France from this south-east coast town. In peace-time, it must have been beautiful and gay, but now its gardens are neglected, its houses battered, and its parks mutilated by trenches and bomb craters. Grass is growing up between the pavements.

During the night I was there, two shells landed in the area fired by guns on the French coast. We went to view the damage the next day. One shell had landed in the middle of a road leaving a huge crater, and breaking windows and scarring houses for some distance around. The other had come down in a garden doing no damage.

There was a little boy making mud-pies in the crater it had left. Hardly a day goes by that this coast-town has not had at least one "Alert." But the people who stay on, doggedly refusing to leave their homes for a safer place, remain cheerful and philosophic through it all. The English are wonderful people!

The most thrilling thing I have to tell you about though, is the recent investiture at Buckingham Palace, where I watched men from all parts of the British Empire being decorated by the Queen in recognition of their services.

Close to the Queen

I was lucky enough to have a place directly in front of Her Majesty, who looked so beautiful that I was completely spell-bound, and also amazed for this enchanting and yet completely regal little Queen, had a smile and a few words for each of the 211 men and women she decorated.

The first to come before her was Wing Commander Gibson, nick-named "Dam-buster," who received his V.C. for his unparalelled gallantry and courage. Then came men and women from all corners of the free world, and I was proud to see many Canadians among them.

Never a dull moment in London! I was having lunch in a restaurant the other day, when I noticed a man sitting at a nearby table. The waitress assured me that it was Ian Hunter, the movie actor.

I could hardly wait to tell my room-mates about it. "Hmph," scoffed Cpl. Cecilia Fleming, of Ottawa, "that's nothing. The other night when I went to see the play "The Watch on the Rhine," Winston Churchill and his wife and daughter sat two rows in front of me!" You just can't win!

WEDDINGS

FLEMING—DONAHUE

The Church of the Assumption, Erinsville, was the scene of a very pretty wedding Monday, June 7, at 9.30 o'clock when Rita Doreen, daughter of Mrs. Catherine Donahue and the late Michael Donahue, of Tamworth, became the bride of Peter Justin Fleming, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Fleming, of Stoco. The marriage was solemnized by Rev. John A. Powell, of Erinsville. Baskets of summer flowers and streamers adorned the church.

The bride, who entered the church on the arm of her brother, Michael Donahue, to the strains of the Wedding March from Lohengrin, played by Miss Clara Mulroney of Stoco, looked lovely in a floor-length gown of white chiffon with an embroidered bodice. She wore a finger-tip veil caught with orange blossoms and fern and carried a bouquet of American Beauty roses.

Miss Rita Mary Fleming, of Rochester, N.Y., cousin of the groom, acted as maid of honor. She was wearing a long gown of light blue faille and a shoulder-length veil of matching blue and yellow daisies. She also carried a bouquet of American Beauty roses.

Mr. Benedict Donahue, brother of the bride, was best man. The ushers were Mr. Leo Donahue, of North Bay and Mr. Francis Fleming, of Stoco. Mr. Gerald Tracey, of Stoco, soloist, sang Schubert's "Ave Marie."

The bride's mother was attired in a gown of navy blue sheer crepe with matching accessories and corsage of red roses. The mother of the groom chose a transparent sheer blue dress with a large white hat and a shoulder corsage of pink carnations.

After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served for the immediate families at the Superior restaurant in Napanee.

Out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. Leo Donahue, of North Bay, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Donahue and family of Newburgh, Miss Anne Donahue, Mrs. Gerald Esterheld and family and Miss Rita Fleming, all of Rochester, N.Y.

Mr. and Mrs. Fleming will reside in Stoco.

FISHER—PERKINS

A lovely summer wedding was solemnized on Wednesday afternoon, July 28th, in St. James' Church, Perth, at two o'clock when Ida Phyllis Perkins daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Perkins, of Perth, became the bride of Frederick John Fisher, son of Mrs. Fisher and the late C. J. Fisher, of Belleville, the Rev. J. Carnish, cousin of the bride, officiating. Gladioli and various other summer flowers in colorful hues, adorned the church for the occasion.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was an exquisite picture in her wedding gown of white brocaded satin, fashioned on princess lines with sweetheart neckline, long tight fitting sleeves and full skirt. Her floor-length veil of bridal tulle illusion fell in graceful folds from a coronet of white gardenias and she carried an arm bouquet of Sweetheart roses and baby breath.

The bride's attendants were Miss Margaret Perkins, sister of the bride, as maid of honor and Misses Kay Smith and Betty Horribou as bridesmaids. They were similarly gowned in charming dresses of mauve sheer, fashioned in long torso effects with full skirts, sweetheart necklines and long tight fitting sleeves. Their shoulder-length veils of yellow were caught to their hair with headdresses of yellow summer flowers. Arm bouquets of flowers in hues of yellow and mauve completed their ensembles.

Mr. Allan McCreary, of Belleville, acted as groomsman and the ushers were Bob McMillan and Cavan Darragh, both of Oshawa.

For the reception at the Vanity Fair, the bride's mother was attired in mauve sheer with cream accessories and corsage of sweet peas. The groom's mother was wearing turquoise sheer with beige accessories and corsage of sweet peas.

On the wedding trip to Muskoka, the bride selected for travelling a white flannel suit and white accessories.

Out-of-town guests at the wedding were from Ottawa, Kingston, Toronto, Oshawa and Belleville.

The Experts Say

(By The Canadian Press)

OTTAWA (CP)—Hints for home front housewives from experts:

SALADS AND FRUITS — Raw vegetable salad and fresh fruits should take a prominent place in Canadian dinner tables this summer. Marion Harlow of the Health Department's nutrition service says those foods provide the ammunition which helps you resist such home-front foes as the common cold, sore throat and other minor ailments which go toward sabotaging working efficiency.

BABY WELFARE — The Prices Board has the welfare of Canadian babies at heart. Proof of their interest was shown in the recent order restricting the sale of canned fruits and vegetables which specifically exempted the strained foods that go to make up the diet of babies from six to 16 months.

THE COFFEE RATION—Now that a large percentage of the country's tea drinkers have become coffee-consumers, the chances of increasing Canada's coffee ration are extremely slim. R. T. Mohan, Prices Board administrator of tea, coffee and spices, says that coffee consumption has risen more than 15 per cent over the pre-war normal, while tea consumption has declined almost 50 per cent.

SOUR MILK—The Agriculture Department says that just because milk and cream sour quickly in hot weather is no excuse for waste. Sour milk and cream is grand for baking and may be substituted in any cake, cookie, biscuit, muffin or griddle cake recipe—if you know the rules. And here they are, as given by Laura C. Pepper, chief of the department's consumer section:

Use one cup sour milk or cream to replace one cup sweet milk. For each cup of sour milk used, decrease the amount of baking powder called for by two teaspoons and add half teaspoon baking soda. The soda must be added to the dry ingredients, not to the sour milk.

If sour cream is being used to replace sweet milk in a recipe, the rules for decreasing the baking powder and adding the baking soda are the same but because cream contains so much more fat than milk, the amount of fat in the recipe can be cut by two to three tablespoons for each cup of cream used. An additional two tablespoons of liquid (sweet milk or water) will be needed for each cup of sour cream to give the proper consistency.

PLAY SUITS — Do father's red flannels go for dusters and scrub cloths? They needn't, says the Prices Board consumer branch, if you follow the suggestion of a prairie mother. She wrote that the union suits took to dye successfully and when the desired shade was reached could be cut into small boys' woollen suits, with long-sleeved pullovers and shorts. As for a pattern, an old suit may be used successfully.

Open Air Concert Raises $76.05 For War Victims

The lawn at the home of Miss Barbara Jean Diment, 101 Lingham Street, was gaily decorated with bunting and flags on Wednesday evening for an open-air concert which netted $76.05 for the British War Victims' Fund.

The Kiltie Band with their bagpipes, led by Jamie Clark, paraded up and down the street before marching into the lawn to give a colorful opening to the concert. Jack Campbell acted as master-of-ceremonies but had to leave during the evening, when his duties were very capably taken over by Flying Officer M. W. Harvey.

The program of songs, instrumental numbers and dances was excellent throughout and was much enjoyed by those present, as evidenced by the fact that several requests have already been received to have the program repeated at some later date.

During the evening a cushion donated by Barbara Diment, was drawn for. The winning ticket was drawn by Donna Cameron and the ticket number was 448, held by S. G. Gayton, Bloomfield.

Those assisting Barbara Diment in planning the concert were Teresa Lorimer, Joan Toms, Marian Kerr, Patricia Kellett and Shirley Reynolds. Barbara Diment wishes to thank all those who took part and helped to make the concert such a success. The program was as follows: Community singing led by Mrs. Harry Rollins, accompanied by Mrs. Grace Calvert; "Danny Boy" Smith, electric guitar; Joan Toms, song; Mrs. Charlton, reading; Bruce Sills, accordian; Lois and Agnes Tebworth, harmony singers; John Fenn and Barbara Diment, trumpet and piano duet; "Danny Boy" Smith, ventriloquist act; Barbara Hanna, song; Donna Cameron, Highland dance accompanied by Jamie Clark; Loreen Fralick, song; John Fenn, trumpet solo accompanied by Mrs. Grant; bagpipe duet, Jamie Clark and Frank Scriven; Angela Pauline, song; Helen Grant, Bells solo, accompanied by Mrs. Grant; Barbara Diment and Madeline Walden, comedy dance; Mary Acerra, song; Bruce Sills, musical saw; Kiltie Band, God Save the King.

Zomba, Nyasaland — (CP) — Spinning wheels are being encouraged in the schools of the protectorate for making thread which can be knitted into garments.

Where Women Serve Long Terms

(By E. E. of The Ottawa Journal's Editorial Staff)

It's a neat business office and the young girl who sits at the typewriter looks as efficient and pretty as our own Civil Service stenographers. But this girl is serving a life-imprisonment sentence. The office is in the penitentiary for women at the village of Portsmouth, just outside Kingston. There are 51 convicts at this penitentiary, the only one for women in Canada. Three of them are "lifers." The others are serving two years and up.

This reporter, visiting the institution by permission of the Department of Justice, meets the three "lifers" and they are all smiling. If there is a murder in their past you'd never know it from their faces. But that's only one of the disarming things about this place. Once you pass the outside gate it takes on the appearance of a comfortable hotel. There are rugs on the highly-polished hardwood floors.

The convicts have a reception room for visitors which in color decorations and furnishings is a treat for sore eyes. A prisoner is allowed to embrace her husband of children in this room. But no "boy friends" are allowed to visit.

The large workroom in the basement has high windows and is flooded with sunlight. The convicts sit at sewing machines and make pillow slips. They have made 70,000 pillow slips for the Canadian Army. They also intend making body belts for dive-bomber pilots. Thirty-six have given blood to the Red Cross.

The convicts do all the housework there. At the invitation of Miss M. E. Robinson, chief matron, the reporter sampled an apple pie just baked by one of the prisoners and is convinced that despite her previous crime or crimes the woman is a grand cook.

It is hard to believe that some of these women and girls have taken part in murders, have been decoys in bank robberies or guilty of theft. Sitting quietly in the kitchen is the young woman who is alleged to have married six times before one of her husbands became suspicious. An 84-year-old woman, the oldest convict here, is in a large room upstairs sitting on a bed in a silk dressing gown. Now she is in a childhood stage again, begs to be surrounded by trinkets and picture frames.

You have to go upstairs to realise that it is a prison after all and not a summer home. There are the cells. But they are only slightly smaller than the ordinary bedroom and the beds inside are all white with fresh linen. Much of the bric-a-brac you see in any woman's bedroom is there, too, even pictures of movie stars. Most of the prisoners wear rouge and lipstick in becoming style

The building was erected in 1930 with Kingston's famous stone quarried by inmates from the men's penitentiary just across the road. It has high walls around grounds so large that twice around is a trip of one mile and provides the women with opportunities for long walks. The prisoners tend a chicken farm which has 700 Leghorns and provides most of the eggs used in both penitentiaries. In the grounds there is an immense victory garden, kept by the convicts.

Romance doesn't stop for the young girls who must pay for the crimes they committed against society. They are allowed to correspond by mail with boy friends, if engaged, and some have been known to marry directly upon their discharge.

150 Attend 17th Annual Reunion Of Grills Family

On Thursday, August 5th, the seventeenth annual reunion picnic of the Grills family was held at Sarles' Beach, Oak Lake. The weather being favorable, about 150 of the Grills' and their friends were present for dinner, with several coming later. Dinner was served at one o'clock, after which a short period of business was conducted. Mr. Harry Grills, of Thurlow, extended a hearty welcome to each and everyone present. A two-minute silence was observed in memory of the ones who had passed away during the year.

The prize for the oldest member present was presented to William Grills, of Belleville; for the youngest present to Enid Chadwick, Campbellford; for the one who came the farthest that day, Al Ford, of Hastings. The lucky draw went to Mrs. George Ingram, of Campbellford. The same officers are to act for another year.

After the business was finished, the sports committee conducted a fine program, also peanut and candy scrambles and a tug-of-war for the men. The picnic for 1944 will be held the first Thursday in August at Sarles' Beach, Oak Lake.

TOO GREEDY

San Francisco, Aug. 12 —(AP)— Myron T. Jacobsen, pleading with OPA officials for extra mileage ration stamps, fumbled for a paper in his pocket and out fell coupons good for 100 gallons of gasoline. Assistant United States Attorney Valentine G. Hammack filed an information in Federal court charging Jacobsen with illegal possession of the stamps.

Even the robins are helping in this war. In the village of Little Berkhamstead in Hertfordshire, England, the village blacksmith, F. G. Mudge, raised $45 for the Red Cross from "peeps" at robins' nests in his smithy.

For maliciously killing a cow, an English soldier was sentenced to three years penal servitude.

BABY'S CONSTIPATION SERIOUS IF NEGLECTED

BABY'S daily movements are something of which absolutely accurate track must be kept. When he misses something must be done at once. Constipation is serious for baby.

Mrs. John T. Advice to the Lovelorn

Common-Law Marriage Gives Man Servant at Cheap or No Wages

"Dear Miss Fairfax," a mother writes me. "My three boys are children of my legal marriage; when my husband and I were divorced he took two of the boys and I kept the youngest.

"For the past four years, I've been living with a man as his common-law wife. We have two children. As he doesn't like children, he suggested we allow his sister to adopt the two boys, one the child of my marriage and the other his child. He wants us to keep the little girl of whom he is fond.

"When I ask him to get a marriage licence and make our relationship legal, he says he can't afford it or some such reason. We have a nice apartment and plenty to eat. If I need money for clothes or essentials he tells me to ask my mother to give it to me but she is unable to do so. He gives his own mother money every week and the balance of his pay envelope, not needed for food and rent, he spends on his own clothes or for beer to treat the entire neighborhood.

"The job I had before my marriage is still open to me. It would be sufficient to support my little girl and myself, and my mother will take care of the baby while I go to work. If I take a job, I'll have to leave this man, as he does not approve of women working away from home. He never takes me anywhere. Do you think I ought to take the job now, or stay on and see if he'll marry me? "We're both under 30; he is a low category, so I know he'll never be called."

When I get a letter like this, I can't help wondering — and that with plenty of sympathy — what ever induces a woman to accept a common-law marriage. Its so often a case of umping from the frying pan into the fire.

This correspondent doesn't tell me why she left her husband for this man. Plenty of other women who've written me similar letters have declared they left decent homes and husbands because they imagined they were more in love with the man who offered them a common-law marriage.

Let's look at this case realistically. She is not getting even necessary clothes or an allowance for essentials, though this man has money to treat the neighborhood to beer. If he employed a domestic, he would not only be forced to give her food and shelter but wages as well? This common-law marriage provides him with a woman to do his bidding at less than it would cost him to have a paid servant. And that may be his very way of looking at the matter. If there was any genuine love on his part, he'd have no hesitancy about marriage, of course.

To her I say: take back the job you had before you were married. At least you'll be paid for it. But, of course, if you're going to delude yourself any further about this so-called common-law husband, you have no use for my advice.

She Disapproves My Ideas

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Usually I agree with everything you say about love, marriage and domestic relations, but take exception to your encouraging soldiers' marriages. You've only to see girls hanging on these boys' necks to realize it's only the monthly allowance they're after. I have no son or grandson, but think it's the mothers who should be entitled to the soldiers' allowances. Don't worry about the children; there'll be millions and millions of them after the war. Just advise the boys not to marry.

M. A. L.

If you follow my column, you must know that before advising a girl to marry her soldier sweetheart I weigh the case, for and against, carefully. It is certainly better for soldiers who perhaps have loved more well than wisely, not to let the girls bear the brunt of consequences alone, and there are certainly other circumstances under which marriages of service men are wise.

He Doesn't Like Girls

Dear Miss Fairfax:

For the past year I have been in love with a man who doesn't care anything about girls and doesn't even like to talk about romance. I have been praying that I would forget him, but every time I see him I fall twice as hard. Please tell me how to forget him, or perhaps even win him.

A. A. H.

Better keep on praying until your prayer is answered. It's natural for men to like girls. As Oliver Wendell Holmes has said: "Nature makes all man love all women." And when they don't, there may be something eccentric about them. This would make them pretty hard to live with. The best way to forget him will be to turn your attention to somebody else.

Wants Girl Friends as Ushers

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm going to be married to a young lieutenant in the Navy in a few weeks. He is going to be given a furlough, but that does not include a furlough for his classmates and best friend at his naval training station. I don't want to ask boys with whom he is not acquainted, to act as ushers. Someone told me that, owing to the dearth of man-power, it is proper to have one's girl friends act in that capacity. Is that true?

L. B. W.

Nowadays it's perfectly proper to have girl friends act as ushers at a wedding. And I heard of one the other day, where the six girl ushers were WAVES dressed in their summer uniform.

A Widower's Problem

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My wife died when our baby was born. Her mother, a really splendid woman, took the little boy and has brought him up beautifully. She is a woman of considerable means, and my son will be her heir.

Six months ago I married a second time, influenced strongly by the thought of having a permanent home for my son, as my mother-in-law's health had begun to fail, and she can't live very long. My second wife doesn't want my boy in our home, saying, If we should have children, I should probably care more for the first born. On the death of the boy's grandmother, which will be in the near future, she having an incurable cancer, I don't know what provision to make for my son. If his stepmother were unkind to him, I shouldn't want him in our home. Could you recommend a good school, or what would be your suggestion?

W. B. D.

The situation of the jealous stepmother is old as time—you remember Cinderella's difficulties, don't you? If your wife can't be talked out of her wholly unreasonable attitude, boarding school would of course, be the best solution. I could not take the responsibility of recommending a school, unless I knew more of the family history, and your religious preferences. Has the boy been baptized in any faith? How much would you care to pay, or how much could you afford to pay? What is the boy's age? What are his talents? Before cutting yourself off from the society of this child, which means so much to you, I should try, in your place, to talk the wife over to a more reasonable attitude, or consult a psychiatrist.

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Showing An Army Private How to Get Over Self-Consciousness on Dance Floor

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I'm an army private, and since I realize that I don't dance very well (although I'm certainly fond of dancing), I've hesitated about going to the dances here at camp. But now I'd like to begin going and try to get over my self-consciousness about dancing. Will you please answer a few questions for me, to give me some reassurance?

1. Just what should I say to a girl when I ask her to dance?
2. What if she refuses my invitation to dance?
3. Who makes the first move to leave the floor?
4. Is there anything I should say when the dance is finished?
5. Should I apologize for my poor dancing, or for a miss-step? If so, how?

Art.

Congratulations to you for "making" yourself go to the dances . . . . you'll quickly defeat that ol' debbil self-consciousness, and your love for dancing and some practice will work wonders.

1. "May I have this dance?" is the usual way for a man to invite a girl to dance. Or you may ask, "Would you like to dance?"
2. Now, sir, this is an unnecessary worry for you to have on your mind! The girl won't refuse to dance with you . . . unless she has already promised that dance to another partner.
3. Unless it is apparent that there is to be an encore, it is the girl who makes the first move to leave the dance-floor, and when she does, you escort her to her seat or join the group in which she was when you asked her to dance.
4. Yes. Either on the dance-floor when the dance is finished or when you leave her after the dance, you should say, "Thank you for the dance," or "Thank you. I enjoyed that dance so much," or something similar. And don't feel hurt or self-conscious when she doesn't thank you for the dance . . . she isn't expected to do this.
5. Don't apologize for poor dancing . . . . that self-conscious thought will affect your feet and your rhythm and keep you from progressing with your dancing and from having a good time. Just go gaily and bravely on, putting your thought-emphasis on your love of dancing (an enormous asset in being or becoming a good dancer!) Since you will enjoy it, look as if you were enjoying it . . . that's a great help too, to both you and your partner.

However, if you do make a mis-step or bump into another couple, you are the one who does the apologizing, whether it's your fault or not. But don't make too much of it or think very seriously about it . . . just quickly say, "I'm sorry," forget about it, and "on with the dance." Keep your mind free of self-consciousness, or worry about mis-steps, and about keeping up a dance-floor conversation too, and your feet will be free to "give" in the right directions.

Courtesy Tip

One of the most belittlin' and maddening remarks you can make (and it's a habit rampant in many families) is to say sarcastically when someone in the family does you a courtesy or gives you an unexpected attention, "Why the politeness?" or "This is too sudden. You must want me to do something for you." This a sure way to encourage future discourtesies.

HEALTH CHATS

President, Chicago Board of Health.

Many Ailments Respond to Physical Therapy

Your doctor recommends the use of heat and massage just as he recommends drugs, depending on the condition he is trying to correct. Physical therapy, or massage, often is useful in the treatment of arthritis. This treatment includes the use of such things as heat, light, massage and exercise. Massage given in the early stages of arthritis or inflammation of the joints will help avoid wasting of the muscles. It improves the general chemical processes in the body. It speeds up the circulation and gets rid of excess fluid which may have collected in the tissues. Exercise used together with massage will increase the benefits.

Dr. George Morris Piersol of Philadelphia thinks that ultra-violet light treatments will help to increase the number of red blood cells and the coloring matter in the blood and help the patient's general nutrition, particularly if he is bedridden.

These same types of treatment also are helpful in patients who have inflammation of the muscles and connecting tissues. These disorders are known as myositis and fibrositis. Following severe infections, such as pneumonia or influenza, the patient often feels weak and has difficulty regaining his strength. In addition to giving such patients vitamin preparations as well as iron-containing drugs to improve the blood, massage and exercise will also help to speed up recovery and overcome weakness and depression.

Many diseases are accompanied by restlessness and sleeplessness. Physical therapy, particularly the use of warm baths also is helpful in overcoming these conditions.

To patients with heart disease, graduated exercise is extremely useful. In this type of exercise, the patient does a little the first day, and gradually increases the amount of exercise taken. This tends to restore strength to the heart muscles and improves its action. Heat, such as with hot water bottles, electric pads or the electrical treatment known as diathermy, is helpful in improving the circulation.

Circulatory difficulties often are present in older persons, particularly those who have hardened arteries and varicose or dilated veins in the legs. Contrast baths—immersing the legs first in warm water and then in cold water for a few minutes at a time — also are beneficial in this type of condition.

Thus, physical therapy has many weapons which will help restore the sick to normal activities.

CREATED WITH A THOUGHT to softening the severe lapel of the strictly tailored suit is an ornament inspired by the Victorian nosegay. The flowers are of hand-molded plastic in many delicate colors and are surrounded by a real lace ruffle.

JUST A GLANCE at the gloves being prepared for fall and winter, shows that originality is working overtime. An 8-button dress glove of suede has a grosgrain ruffle in a serpentine effect from wrist to top. Another glove has bracelets embroidered in rhinestones and tiny colored stones.

A FINE SELECTION for dress-up afternoons and evenings is the black satin suit. A smart model has a tailored jacket that has a flaring peplum in back. Rhinestone and black enamel buttons fasten the jacket which is worn over a pale pink lace and chiffon blouse.

FOR NEATNESS, easy handling and simple smartness is the coat frock. Beige woolen makes a smart model with high neckline and diagonal side closing with amber buttons, from neck to hem and a piping of amber brown satin.

STARTING OFF with a simple black wool suit one can go through the season in fine style. For daytime wear, simple little satin blouses but for evening a halter blouse entirely of sequins. These halter blouses have no sleeves, low backs and an important after-dark formal look.

Libby's has weathered other wars: The problems of this one are different, more acute, but not unsurmountable.

Meet the Canadians

(By J. B. PRIESTLEY)
(BBC Press Service)

I am going to tell you about the First Canadian Army, which I have visited recently. Apart from odd encounters with Canadian officers and men in places like trains, I had seen nothing of the Canadian Army here and that was why I was delighted to accept an invitation to pay this visit. It was a fairly strenuous visit, for there was much to see and discuss, and I seemed to be moving around, staring, listening, talking, from early morning until late at night, but I enjoyed it all.

I was allowed to see various sections of the Army engaged in advanced and most realistic exercises. Thus, I saw a company of infantry—from Ontario—carry out an attack by platoon, over rough country, using rifle and machine gun fire, and light mortars sending over both high explosive and smoke bombs. It was a quick neat job, robbed of much of the confusion we knew in the last war because of the elaborate use of short-range wireless for signalling and communications. There was plenty of ball cartridge used, sometimes very close to the men who were moving forward, but they didn't seem to mind.

Then I saw an infantry battalion of French-Canadians attack a steep hillside. These fellows seemed to be experts at mortar fire. They laid down smoke screens with the most extraordinary precision, and plastered the hillside systematically with high explosive mortar bombs until it seemed as if the whole landscape had burst into a gigantic fit of coughing. Here, again there was much machine gun fire that just HAD TO BE ACCURATE, otherwise there might have been plenty of casualties. But there weren't any. The French-Canadian lads—agile, brown, dark-eyed—went about their noisy business like veterans.

In this war, troops cannot be eased into the fighting, as they were in the last, when they were always put into quiet sections of the line at first. Now, you may jump at one bound into the grimmest possible fighting—as those Canadian lads did at Dieppe—so it is necessary that troops should be toughened and hardened by the most realistic exercises, even if it means taking certain risks.

There was more drama still when I left the infantry divisions for the armored units. I stood by the side of a high lonely road running thru' a wood. Hidden in clumps were various groups of men who had worked out, with happy enthusiasm, some anti-tank devices. We waited, and then the tanks came thundering along the road. Trip wires came into action; bombs exploded; mines went off; and one tank after another was judged to be out of action. The happiest man up there was a corporal who looked like a younger version of Wallace Beery and would be of great value in any film. Surrounded by wires and detonators and explosives, he was living the life of Reilly.

In a later exercise that day, we had a tremendous unrehearsed effect. I was shown a new device—a Canadian invention—for enabling tanks to cross a gully, deep stream, or wide anti-tank ditch. This obstacle was signalled back, and there came two tanks carrying bridges in front of them, and they neatly dropped these bridges across the deep, wide ditch and then went rolling across. Other tanks came charging down the hill and went across to. But one of the last tanks—a heavy tank going at full speed—misjudged the exact centre of its bridge and went clean over the edge, with its turret deep in the mud. It looked the nastiest kind of accident, but out through the escape hatch come the four lads inside, covered with mud and oil but otherwise quite uninjured and not even showing any traces of shock. For the benefit of the record—and for the folks at home—and perhaps for a wondering posterity—I declare here and now that those four lads who suddenly found themselves upside-down in a tank but came out uninjured were: Corporal Frank Ryan, of Toronto; Troopers H. A. Booth, of Kelvington, Saskatchewan; Cecil Hoover, of Toronto, and Leslie Hawgood, of Oil Springs, Ontario. And Saskatchewan and Ontario may rest assured that when they sent us those lads, they sent us the right stuff.

But the last exercise of all that I saw was really the most spectacular. It was put on by an Armored Car regiment, which has, incidentally, one of the youngest colonels—and one of the keenest and ablest—I have ever met. He and I rode to the high point where we could see the exercise, standing in an armored car with the top open—and I must say I had a magnificent feeling of conquest and grandeur as we rolled along the road, high up, in this massive vehicle; it made one feel like General Montgomery.

We looked down from this high point on a wide wooded valley, where, in a copse, the Germans were awaiting our advanced Armored Car unit. And there the Germans were uniforms and all. There were shuddering explosions all over the valley. Machine gun fire rattled out. Smoke came pouring from the mortar bombs. Like beetles, our jeeps came running forward, only to be halted. They sought cover, while the men inside them came hurrying out, to work along the flanks. Later one could even see prisoners taken and marched away to be interrogated.

This was a show—and such a good show that I thought it a shame the general public had no chance of seeing it—but of course it was also a lot more than that. It was an elaborate advanced exercise in conditions as close to the real thing as possible. This First Canadian Army is, after all, as General McNaughton wisely insists, an army in the field.

It happens that, apart from the desperate day of Dieppe, the war has taken a course so far that has kept these Canadians out of the fighting overseas, has kept them here perfecting their training, guarding wide stretches of this island, and forming the nucleus of our anti-invasion force. If the German General Staff had succeeded in landing an army here—and they might easily have tried that instead of going to the rescue of Italy in North Africa—then this Canadian army would have been up to the neck in hard fighting long ago, as, I believe, sooner or later, they will be up to the neck in it. It just happened—and nobody was to know about it in advance—that the war went the other way. Which has been very tough luck on most of these fellows, who have been training and waiting, waiting and training, doing a hard thankless job a long way from home. But you feel this is an army in the field, ready to take and give punishing blows, a lean stripped army.

In view of the long wait they've had, their MORALE is astonishingly high. Some sensational wide reporting of a murder case—which might have come from anywhere—has led some people to imagine that these men are now so restless and dissatisfied that crime is rather common among them, but the facts show that this is far from being true. Crime among the Canadian troops is extraordinarily low, lower in fact than it is among our troops or our civil population. There are several good reasons that explain this surprisingly high MORALE.

This is a very democratic army, which helps a lot. Its leadership is sound and wise. There is a good relationship between officers and men. And there has been time and opportunity to find first-rate young officers and to promote them to the commands of units. Yes, this is a young army. Many of its colonels, commanding battalions, are in their early thirties, and one of them I met was only twenty-five. Officers of this age, who have gone through everything their men have gone through, understand their men, and this produces the good relationship I mentioned earlier. General officers are older, of course, but even generals commanding divisions—such as Major-General Burns and Major-General Stien—and I had some good talks with both of them—seem surprisingly youthful, vigorous, alert men in their physical prime.

I was fortunate enough to have some talks with all three of the leading commanders. I could only catch General McNaughton between two important engagements he had—for army commanders are busy men these days—but I heard him talk, with characteristic enthusiasm of new weapons and felt the force of his cool scientifically trained mind and that attraction of his simple direct personality. And I understood why his junior officers light up at once when they mention his name. He is very much a real person, this Canadian soldier with the short ruffled grey hair, the thoughtful face, the heavy lidded eyes.

I found General Sanson at his Corps headquarters, a burly soldierly man who knows his own mind, and with whom I had some good talks and could have had much more, if a heavy program of visiting had not taken me away too soon. In this respect, I was luckier with the other Corps commander, General Crerar, for I happened to spend a night at his headquarters and so was able to talk at greater length with him. He struck me as being very much the modern type of senior officer, the cool intellectual type, with much wider interests than one expects to find in a professional soldier, and an excellent informative talker on a good range of important topics, including, of course, Canada and the all-important relationships between Canada, the United States and Britain.

If I don't mention fifty other officers, met at the various headquarters or out at exercises, it is simply because I don't want this broadcast to degenerate into a list of names and a vote of thanks. But the impression was always the same: comparative youth, a direct sensible and democratic outlook, great keenness and alertness, a universal desire to get straight on with the job, and a supreme care and concern for the men.

I caught a glimpse now and again of the Canadian Army in the last war, and we all know what that army did, for it had a great record. But I feel that this is a better army still, more highly trained, more professional, better integrated. I like the way in which it regards itself—and so organizes itself—as an army in the field. I like the way in which, in spite of the higher standard of living in Canada and Canadian tastes in food and other things, it does not claim any special supplies but lives on British rations. I like its genuine democracy, with a certain give and take, a certain play in the military machine, that we here find it hard to achieve. There is discipline for its own sake, which I believe to be unnecessary in a modern citizen's army that has replaced masses of foot-sloggers and cannon-fodder with highly trained and largely technical units. I like the way in which both officers and men, on leave or going to various parts of this island for special courses, are coming to know Britain and the British, which is something that the Canadian forces in the last war, hurried to France, hardly ever did. There's grumbling of course—you can't expect fellows to be away from home and families, year after year, and kept to a high level of military training, not to grumble—and I know that in their place nobody would grumble harder than I would. Nevertheless, I believe the presence here of this army—quite apart from all that it has done and will yet do to win this war—will bring Canada and Britain much closer together.

You folks in Canada have created a magnificent war effort; you have—as I can personally testify from what I know about my wife's hostels—been consistently kind and generous, nobody more so; and you may rest assured that, in spite of occasional chit-chat and idle gossip, you are finely represented here by your men in uniform, and that we in Britain, though we may not say much, may not indeed say half enough, are aware of all this, are grateful and more than grateful, and that in our hearts and minds, in the peace to come as well as in the war, Canada will be there.

Atlantic Convoys

(By
COMMODORE D. A. CASEY,
O.B.E., D.S.O., D.F.C.)
(BBC Press Service)

As a sailor I have often wondered whether the people of England and the Empire realize how much the Empire has been formed by merchant adventure and merchant seamen (and how little by the politicians of the past or the statesmen of the present.) What was true in the past ten centuries remains true today. The life-blood of the British Commonwealth is its ability to trade freely together in war as in peace. This we are still doing despite the machinations of the enemy in the form of submarines, aircraft, raiders and other forms of Nazism, which make the sailors' lot unenviable.

I should like to give you the outline of a convoy from the time it leaves abroad to the time the goods are delivered into British ports and from thence either to your breakfast table or to the guns.

Starting at the beginning. As Commodore of the convoy I am informed that a conference will be held tomorrow. Accordingly, next day I arrive at the office, discuss the convoy with the Port Director, look over my route, and thence to the conference. Sixty masters of merchant ships of the Allied Nations are present. Looking round I recognise many faces. A number of these captains have been with me before, some possibly on my outward bound trip. The Port Director opens the conference by giving us a summary of the standing orders, ships' destinations, etc. I then give them more detailed statement of what we are likely to be required to do on the passage home. We go straight on board our ships and are off at crack of dawn next morning. A big convoy leaving port is a most impressive sight . . . The Commodore leading in a chosen merchant ship, his broad pennant flying, and behind him stringing out for a distance of ten miles or more, a procession of ships hurrying along to take up their appointed stations. The day is fine and clear and our escort of destroyers, corvettes and sloops, who have gone out previously, are weaving a pattern ahead of us to ensure that no enemy submarines are in the neighborhood. In addition, the sky is partly filled with aeroplanes and "blimps," all working to the same purpose of rendering the convoy submarine proof during the necessarily slow operation of forming up. When clear of port, the Commodore makes signal to form convoy on a broad front and immediately a scene of great activity occurs.

The convoy is now changing from a long string of ships to a more compact body with anything from 10-20 columns with 5-6 ships in each column. To the layman this would look like a children's game of "General Post," but to the sailor it is a very well-ordered manoeuvre, every ship knowing where it has got to go and getting there as fast as he can. Once formed up, the Commodore gives the signal to increase speed and as the flags flutter down, the convoy may be said to have started on its transatlantic voyage.

All general signals to the convoy are made by flag, individual ships answering by repeating the Commodore's signal. When it is seen that all ships have received this, the pulling down of the flags is the executive command for carrying out the manoeuvre. By now, daylight is fading fast and the convoy is settling down to its first night at sea. The lights of the port we have just left—which are naturally fewer in wartime—have disappeared, and the convoy itself is showing no lights at all. This is a quiet night for all of us and the principal preoccupation of all ships is to recognize and keep in touch with their next ahead. The moon does not set until midnight and this is a great advantage to the convoy is silhouetting their neighbors. Had there been no moon, the difficulties of the first night would have been magnified as the exact speeds of the ships have not yet been discovered and their appearance is also unfamiliar to the Officers of the Watch.

We have a quiet night with no alarms, but as dawn breaks and the sun starts to rise, we get the first damp feeling and see those wisps of mist that make us certain that we are in for a patch of fog, which is a too frequent occurrence in this part of the world. By 8.00 o'clock we can see our neighbors with difficulty. The Commodore is now blowing his siren, which is being answered by the remainder of the convoy. This enables the ships to retain their station and adjust their positions as may be necessary. The strengthening sun does nothing to improve conditions, and the sailor with his usual optimism presumes that the fog will disappear at sunset. Unfortunately this is not the case.

The difficulties of navigation are now increased by the knowledge that 30 ships coming from another port are to join the convoy at daylight, and dawn finds us still in thick fog. We know that our escorts ahead will pick up the joining ships before they can be a danger to ourselves and within a few minutes the searchlight is flashing at us through the fog. This is from the senior officer of the escort who has closed to tell me that the joining portion is now on my port bow. We continue as before hoping that all our ships are still keeping in touch, and by the afternoon our neighbors begin to take shape. Before sunset, 15 or 16 ships can be seen and half-an-hour later we are steaming through a brilliant sunset with the fog rolling away like an enormous blanket on our port quarter. Great activity now takes place. The Commodore's Yeoman of Signals and Staff are busy "counting heads."

It is not clear enough yet to see any great distance, but 65 ships can already be counted. While this is 20 short of complement, it shows the Commodore that the bulk of the convoy have held together throughout the fog, and daylight tomorrow will probably bring the stragglers home to roost. At dawn the following morning, stragglers are coming in, many from ahead of the convoy who have overestimated the speed during fog, and by noon all our ships are present but two. The senior officers on joining convoy signals that these failed to leave harbor, one due to engine defects and one not completed loading, so we are now all present—83 ships; and the Commodore takes the opportunity of fine weather to inform all ships by signal of his intended movements during the next 24 hours.

We carry out some anti-aircraft gunnery practice and generally settle down, all ships by now having their speeds adjusted to the Commodore's ship, which is to the fleet in the van of the central column.

The Commodore and the senior officers of the escort have now a chance to tell each other their troubles; the Commodore informing the senior officer of the waywardness of some of his ships in regard to speed, smoke making, etc.; the senior officer passing to the Commodore weather reports and any news he may have of local submarine activity.

This is our fourth night out and we are now well clear of the coast and expecting—but not looking forward to a certain activity. At 9 o'clock a dull thud is heard, and immediately afterwards a signal received "S. S. Nonesuch torpedoed." This is immediately followed by the more powerful noise of the escort's depth charges, and the sky is illuminated by hundreds of rockets throwing a light nearly as strong as sunshine over an area extending well out beyond the convoy.

Everybody is now looking out for submarines. Ships on the starboard quarter of the convoy can see a shape, on which they immediately open fire with every type of gun on board. Though it is very improbable that one of the merchant ships has succeeded in hitting the retreating target, their fire has had the effect of directing the escort's attention to the submarine, and within a few minutes she is forced to dive and is being depth charged by the escort.

After an uninterrupted night the senior officer of the escort signals that a probable kill was made last night. This would mean that some direct evidence in the form of flotsam, or large quantities of oil, has been sighted, and is not based on the optimistic opinion of the gunners alone. As no further enemy activity has been encountered in the next 24 hours, we now hope that we have shaken off any possible attack by the pack hunting in this area, and worsening weather conditions, poor visibility and snow make the probability of attack less likely.

By now we are working our way well north and are keeping a good look-out for another enemy of the convoy—ice. A certain amount of loose ice is being passed through, but this in itself does not distress the merchantman but we know that once clear of the ice floes we are very likely to meet bergs. The convoy is still steaming at full speed. At two in the morning the moon is now setting, and the Yeoman of Signals reports a curious looking white light on the port bow. There is some difficulty in making out what this is, but as it gets nearer it has the appearance of a great white sail. This is a hundred foot iceberg with the searchlights of the escort playing on it. The convoy again turns away so as to bring this clear of their path, and the escort continues to illuminate the berg until the convoy is clear.

As day breaks, 14 icebergs of various sizes are in sight of the convoy, and we consider we have been lucky to have avoided any incident. At breakfast time, aircraft is reported and all guns are manned, but escort signals "Aircraft friendly," and can now be identified as Catalinas. This, to us, is rather like what the seaweed was to Columbus and the dove to Noah, as it shows that we are now nearing our own home bases. The sailor is by now becoming an expert in determining his position at sea by the type of aircraft that he sights, and is nearly as proficient as a member of the Observer Corps or even an eight-year old schoolboy in naming the different craft.

By now the pervading interest in the convoy is their destinations, and when this comes through by signal from the Admiralty a reshuffling takes place in order that ships may drop out of the convoy in bad weather or at night without getting foul of their neighbors

The convoy will now be splitting up in accordance with their destinations, each section proceeding individually with its own escort. As we now feel that the submarine menace is past, ships are flying kites and balloons to make themselves as unpleasant as possible to any enemy aircraft who may close the convoy. Convoy gunnery has now become so deadly that enemy aircraft give all ships in convoy a wide berth.

Once again we reform the convoy, this time back into its snaky single line. Pilots are picked up, the Commodore's flag flutters down. The convoy is safe, and the escort signals "Well done, convoy," to which the reply is made "Good luck and good hunting," and the ships proceed up harbor to their individual berths.

The convoy is over. This has been a particularly quiet trip, and is only an example of what is taking place almost every day of the year.

Japanese Targets In Burma Hit

New Delhi, Aug. 11 — (AP) — Medium bombers of the U. S. Air Force raked Japanese targets in Burma from the Arakan coast to Mandalay yesterday, blasting installations at Akyab and Pyawbwe and destroying enemy transport on the Irrawaddy River, a communique announced today.

Eighteen tons of bombs were dropped on Akyab in one of the heaviest concentrations of the Burma campaign.

A single bomber B-25 destroyed two 200-foot ferry boats and a 50-foot steamer in the Irrawaddy river. Another blast capsized an 80-foot barge.

On Aug. 9 major damage was inflicted on the railroad reversing station at Sedaw, east of Mandalay, according to delayed reports, the communique said.

THE EXPLANATION
why
WHITE SWAN TISSUE
may be "out of stock" at your dealer's.

You go to your dealer for your regular supply of WHITE SWAN and find him temporarily out of stock. Naturally you are disappointed, but please don't blame him, as he is only too anxious to keep on supplying you with Canada's most popular toilet tissue.

It is simply a question of supply and demand. He cannot keep enough WHITE SWAN in stock because we cannot supply him fast enough. We cannot supply him fast enough because our mill, in turn, cannot meet the increased demand from Government, war industries and the public.

We would like to be able to make more WHITE SWAN than we are turning out now, but war needs come before our requirements for new equipment. So, until the present crisis is over, we ask you to bear with us. We will do our utmost to see that any dealer out of stock for the moment will soon receive his supply.

"Wild Bill" Longson Retains World's Title Although Held To Draw By John 'Killer' Katan

Bout Went Hour Limit With Both Wrestlers Winning a Fall

McCREADY WINS

True enough Referee Phil Lawson held "Wild Bill" Lawson's hand aloft and declared him "still champion" before 2,500 keen wrestling fans at the Hume Arena last night, but it wasn't before "Killer John" Katan, the Canadian challenger, hadn't established himself as the No. 1 contender for the world's heavyweight wrestling championship.

As a matter of fact Katan won a moral victory as he actually outroughed the Salt Lake City titleholder at every turn in a draw bout that saw each man win a fall and the full hour-limit time all but save Longson's crown as Katan proved the aggressor and was well on the way to dethroning the champion on the mat, when the final gong sounded.

Don't make any mistake, "Killer John" was out to annihilate the Utah champion and was well on the way towards his fondest dream, when the final bell stopped the strongest bout ever seen in the local palace de sport. Katan was in the business of winning a title bout from the earliest ringing of the timer's bell, being the aggressor early and often. However, Longson proved to all and sundry just why his monicker is "Wild Bill", as he retaliated at every turn of Katan's roughness to keep the patrons well entertained. Twice Longston failed in applying his famed "pile-driver" hold after Katan had ferociously attacked the champion with a series of leglocks and toe-holds. Finally Katan resorted to other tactics and attempted to twist Longson's left leg from its socket. Little appreciation was shown by the champ, who nursed his sore limb slightly and then really applied that "pile-driver" hold that made him famous. Result — Longson won the first fall after 35 minutes of rough and tumble antics.

Didn't Appreciate Punishment.

Naturally "Killer John" didn't appreciate such physical punishment and returned to the squared circle very, very pugnacious and carried the fight not only to Longson, but practically into Salt Lake City itself as he evened matters with his famed "unconscious chinlock" to leave Longson flattened on the canvas wondering just whether his lofty world wrestling crown was perched on his noggin or nay.

With matters all even and Katan eagerly grasping for the world's title, the Palermo assassin attempted new tactics early in the final round as he tried to ruin Longson's right arm by beating it over the ropes, ring posts and once across Referee Lawson's noggin. So ferocious did Katan become that "Official Phil" had to mount him from the rear, but Lawson came out second best on this strategy, as he was hurled afar and left writhing in pain along the ropes as Longson turned villain and the fans howled in glee. That's when he looked his best.

Road- Hard On Longson.

"Killer John" rode hard on Longson so pugnaciously he forced the champion to hurdle the ropes in protection of his crown and that's really something in a small wrestling community like Belleville. After viewing the situation Longson returned to the ring and was again taken to the mat by Katan as the final bell sounded and it's safe betting Longson doesn't want any more of Canada's "Palermo farmhand". It actually marked the first time in Canada that "Wild Bill" Longson, the heavyweight wrestling champion of the world, has been held to a draw and it established John Katan as the No. 1 contender for the championship today.

Both Counted Out.

The fun of the night's show came in the curtain-raiser when both principals, Jerry Monahan and Doc Felice were counted out by Referee Cliff Fox as they battled and slugged each other about outside of the ring. However, the boys returned to the squared circle and continued their roughness regardless as to the decision until Monahan actually picked Felice up and threw him into the ropes so forcibly that the middle strand snapped in pieces as the result of the impact. During the intermission the ropes were repaired.

In the semi-final go Earl 'Moose' McCready delighted the patrons by trying to tear off Al (we all hate him) Dunlop's fingers one by one. Naturally Dunlop objected to such practices and tried to rough matters with the Aurora farmer, but ha! that's where he made his life's error. McCready leaped high, gained a flying scissors hold and that was that for Mrs. Dunlop's husband in exactly 23.11 minutes. And if the fans didn't get their money's worth last night, maybe they will next Wednesday when Promoter Tunney will try some new kind of a ring wrinkle to please or displease the fans as the case may be.

"KING KONG" LEADS HOMER PARADE NOW

Couple of guys, one named Joe, are the only things that have prevented New York player, Charlie Keller, from leading the home run parade for the past several seasons. Now his rivals, Ted Williams of the Red Sox, LEFT, and Joe DiMaggio, RIGHT, are in the service so "King Kong" is right up there at the top of the slugging list. He already has hit 17 round-trippers this season.

'PEE WEE' COLDEN THROWS 3-HITTER TO BEAT SWACOS

Bristol Lassies Win Game 5-3 and Also League Leadership

SMART CONTEST

Behind "Pee Wee" Colden's three-hit pitching, the Bristol Aircraft gals captured first place in the Belleville Ladies' Softball by downing SWACO 5 to 3 in a sudden death play-off game before the season's largest gallery of spectators at the armouries Wednesday night. By taking first place the Bristol girls meet the loser between Friday night's play-off game between Bell-Sargent and Reliance.

Although SWACO scored first in the initial frame as the result of a walk, error and fielder's choice Bristol evened matters in the third on hits by Elliott and Bee Zebdee and a double by Waite. Norma Corneal scored for SWACO in the fourth and Dot Rowbotham hit for the circuit in the fifth for SWACO's third and last run. Pauline Colden helped her own cause in the fifth to drive in N. Benn, to knot the count after Carter had scored in the fourth.

(PAULINE)

After a scoreless sixth Bristol broke out with a batting splurge in the top half of the seventh to score two runs and coast in to the league leadership. Bee Zebedee opened the frame with a single and scored. Pee Wee was safe again on an error and scored on Miss Carter's subsequent hit. SWACO went out in order in their half of the last inning.

Pauline Colden struck out 12 of the 21 players retired by the winners and walked only five. Norma Corneal was on the hilltop for the SWACO's and gave up 13 base hits, of which her opposing position player counted three to lead the batters and also help her own cause.

The lineups:

Bristol: Elliott 1b; Zezedee 3b; Waite ss; Benn c; Colden p; Calcutt 2b; Carter cf; Hubbs rf and Vickers lf.

SWACO: Fralick 2b; Colden lf; M. Zebedee c; Rowbotham 1b; Nelson 3b; Corneal p; Ronsky rf; Allin ss and Jackson cf.

Umpires: Young, plate; St. Louis, bases.

GUNDER HAEGG DEFEATS DODDS IN FINAL RACE

Runs Mile in 4:06.9 but Not Close to Record Made Two Weeks Ago

WILL RETURN HOME

New York, Aug. 12 — (AP) — Having written two new American records into track and field annals in the course of chalking up eight successive victories in a coast to coast tour, Sweden's Gunder Haegg is ready to return home and renew his duels with Arne Anderson—the Swedish school teacher who lowered the international mile mark to 4:02.6 while Gunder was whipping this country's best.

Haegg completed his all victorious United States campaign last night by again taking the measure of Gil Dodds, Boston Divinity student and Bill Hulse, New York chemist, in a mile race at Randall's Island.

The stage was all set for what Amateur Athletic Union officials hoped would be Haegg's greatest performance but the time of 4:06.9 was somewhat of a disappointment to the estimated crowd of 5,000. Last night's gate was expected to bring the receipts of Haegg's tour to $130,000 — all of which goes to the Army Air Force Fund. Although the time was 1.6 seconds off the American record Haegg hung up in beating the same pair in Boston, the race was one of the most thrilling as the flying Swede registered by two yards over Dodds with Hulse another three yards back. Dodds was clocked in 4:07.2 and Hulse in 4:08.2.

Haegg, who also lowered the American standard for two miles to 8:53.9 at Los Angeles, said he hoped to leave for home the week of Aug. 23 and arrive in time to match strides with Anderson at Gottenberg on Sept. 13.

PHILLIES REFUSE TO BE IGNORED IN NAT. LEAGUE

Win Six Straight Under New Management of Fitzsimmons

YANKS BLASTED

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

Philadelphia Phillies returned home yesterday for their first appearance in Shibe Park under the management of fat old Freddy Fitzsimmons and promptly swept a doubleheader from Pittsburgh Pirates to extend their present winning streak to six games—matching their best string under the piloting of capable Bucky Harris — and stole the spotlight in the National League once more.

The bargain bill started at 10:30 a. m. and attracted 11,129 fans, a remarkable turnout that was enough to capture the immediate attention of baseball men. But in addition the Phillies beat Truett (Rip) Sewell, the leading pitcher of the year, 2-1 in the first game and followed through with a 2-0 shutout in the second to knock the Pirates out of their exclusive hold on second place in the senior circuit.

Five errors contributed to the downfall of Sewell, who had won 17 and lost three previously, but the four-hit hurling of Lynwood (still called Schoolboy) Rowe was a factor of some importance to the outcome. Richard (Kewpie) Barrett officiated at the whitewashing in the second session with six-hit pitching that sparkled with eight strikeouts.

Harris, incidentally, was in the stands and cheering for the Phillies.

Reds Tie For Second.

The setbacks for the Pirates enabled Cincinnati to move into a tie for second even though the Reds were beaten 5-2 at Brooklyn. Whitlow Wyatt and Ray Starr started out to have a pitchers' duel, but the Dodgers went on a rampage for five runs in the seventh inning to end their 10-game losing streak with a dramatic flourish.

New York's woeful Giants turned back St. Louis Cardinals 3-2 on two home runs by Nick Witek, the second coming in the 10th inning after the Redbirds had tied the score in the ninth. Chicago Cubs divided a doubleheader at Boston. Hiram Bithorn pitched a 3-0 shutout for the Cubs in the first game, but the Braves came back to win the nightcap 6-2 behind Red Barrett for their first victory of the season over the Cubs at Braves' field.

Yankees Walloped

In the American League New York Yankees were walloped hard for the second straight day by St. Louis Browns, 9-1, and for the third time this season were held to one hit. The only blow off Steve Sundra was Charley Keller's 18th home run.

Paul (Dizzy) Trout pitched five-hit ball as Detroit downed Washington Senators 3-2 with the help of Rudy York's 19th home run in the eighth inning.

Cleveland captured a twilight slugging session from the Philadelphia Athletics 10-5 with Manager Lou Boudreau and Oris Hockett each batting in four runs and then bagged a pitching battle 2-1 in the night game that followed.

JERSEY GIANTS EARN A SPLIT WITH TORONTO

Leafs Win First With Pinch Single in Ninth Frame

By The Associated Press

Rufus Gentry won his 15th game of the season for Buffalo Bisons of the International League last night after being given two chances.

He started the first game of a doubleheader against the Newark Bears, but was knocked out in the first inning after facing only seven men. After the Bears won, 7-4, Gentry started the second game and pitched the Bisons to an 8-4 triumph for a split of the twin bill. Given a four-run lead in the first inning of the nightcap on Frank Heller's triple with the bases loaded, Gentry scattered eight Newark hits and fanned seven.

Montreal Royals made royal with the Baltimore Orioles in winning, 18-4. Royals scored 13 times in a big third inning. They made only seven hits, one a homer by Bob Ortiz, but were helped by five Baltimore errors.

Toronto and Jersey City split a doubleheader. Maple Leafs came from behind to take the opener, 4-3, on a single by pinchhitter Jimmy Gruzdis with the bases loaded in the ninth inning. In the nightcap Bob Wells shutout Toronto, 2-0. He limited the Leafs to seven hits and fanned five in chalking up his first victory of the year.

Syracuse defeated Rochester twice, 4-3 and 2-0, in two hard-fought struggles. The opener went 14 innings before a two-run homer by Hank Sauer decided the issue. In the nightcap Jim Konstanty turned in a two-hit shutout for the Chiefs.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

The damage suit had dragged on for two years, during which time the traffic victim had spent six months in braces, six months on crutches and was just beginning to be able to get to work more or less regularly when he called at his lawyer's office to learn the outcome of his suit. He was overjoyed when the lawyer told him the case was settled in his favor and he had been awarded $5,000.

Lawyer—And here's the balance after deducting my fee.

The lawyer handed him a check for $1,000.

Client (looking at the check puzzledly and then shaking his head)—Well, this beats me.

Lawyer — What's the matter? Aren't you satisfied with the settlement of the case?

Client (candidly)—Well, it isn't that so much, but I was just wondering who got hit by the car, you or me?

Thanks, Mr. Morganson

Commenting on the winning of the Canadian National Congress of Baseball championship by the London Army team, A. J. "Bunny" Morganson, sports columnist on the Toronto Telegram, had the following comment to make: "The London Army team is the best senior ball club to appear in Toronto since the days of the famous Oslers."

No doubt the London Army team is a strong senior calibre ball club and deserves such credit. However, Mr. Morganson makes mention of the "famous Oslers," a strong ball club out of Toronto in the early 20's. If the Oslers were so great, then the old Belleville Nationals were even greater because they not only beat the famed Oslers with Joe Spring pitching, but eliminated them in their hey day from senior O.B.A. competition.

True enough, Freddie Hamilton had a strong Osler club, but we saw the Toronto Hillcrests beat Spring and the Oslers at the old Island Stadium in Toronto one September day in 1923 to the remarkable tune of 16 to 0. It was a drastic day in the annals of Osler baseball history.

However, after beating the Oslers a couple of years previous, the Belleville Nationals showed they were no flash in the pan as they eliminated the great Toronto Hillcrests in senior O.B.A. playdowns in 1923. So for Mr. Morganson's information we might say that when it comes to famed baseball teams of the past, just count Belleville in the picture.

Incidentally two of Belleville's famed lefthand pitchers were on the mound during this period. Freddie Goyer pitched the Nationals to victory over the Oslers, while Jack "Chief" Williams subdued the mighty Hillcrest power-packed team of swatsmiths that included batters like Lionel Conacher, Harry Batstone, Duke Hennessy and others too numerous to mention. "Remember, Mr. Morganson?"

On the Spot

"Spike" Pryke's Reliance mushballers are on the well known spot tonight. After suffering two reverses at the hands of the No. 5 I.T.S. nine a third successive loss would prove most drastic.

Twice Skipper Pryke has sent Johnnie Bawden against the Flyers and twice the veteran Belleville softball pitcher has failed to silence the youthful Flyers' bats. Of course the Reliance team in general didn't give Bawden the same sterling support afforded in the regular schedule, but then again FO. Warren's Flyers are a vastly improved nine.

Pryke won't announce his starting pitcher until game time tonight, but he has Bill Anderson, Freddie Vasil and Ding Luffman in the barn aside from Bawden. On the other hand, FO. Warren has Bill Bancroft, who won the first game of the series, Bill Kurylak and Steve Borovitch, his newest mound acquisition from Detroit for pitching duties. The Reliance squad is smarting under two defeats and hope to move into striking distance tonight, but they'll have to better their play of the last two games considerably.

Katan Fools 'Em —

For years John Katan, that unpopular Canadian wrestler who came out of the west to farm near Palermo, has been anything but the patrons' idea of what they'd desire as a champion, that is speaking for Hume Arena fans. However, last night Katan came as close to winning the world's heavyweight rassling title as he may ever enjoy when he battled "Wild Bill" Longson, the champ. from Salt Lake City, to a draw after each took a fall in the full hour limit. Actually Katan was the aggressor and established himself as the No. 1 contender for the title from this day until he either meets Longson again or the Utah champ. is dethroned. When the full hour gong sounded Katan had Longson flat on his back and as the saying sometimes goes, "the bell saved the champ." In between times, however, Longson proved to the fans just why he's dubbed "Wild Bill" — simply because he roughed matters with the Palermo roughhouse when he might better have been resorting to the business of eliminating a contender he'll not soon want to see again.

No. 5 Sport News

FO. Warren's No. 5 I.T.S. "Flyers" moved into the Bay of Quinte finals in the No. 1 R.C.A.F. Command softball playdowns by soundly trimming the Central Flying School, (Trenton), on their home diamond last night. The local Flyers were much too good for the C.F.S. mushballers and ran their score into the double figures. Last year the No. 5 team advanced to the finals in the Command softball playdowns when Bell was their ace hurler. They lost out to St. Thomas 3-2 in the finals. The local Flyers should win the Quinte district honors and go far again this semester.

At an invitation track and field meet sponsored by the Picton R. A. F. yesterday the No. 5 I.T.S. relay team was second in the district when pitted against the cream of all the R.C.A.F. and R.A.F. relay teams in Eastern Ontario. Sharkey, Rachnor, Walker and Lopez made up the local Flyers' relay team. Incidentally, Walker and Lopez are from Trinidad and Walker was third in the mile run while Rachnor finished third in the 220. Nice going, lads.

This and That

It was pretty much all "Pee Wee" Colden as the Bristol Aircraft lassies finished up first in the Ladies' Softball League last night. The petite Miss Colden not only fired a three-hitter, but struck out 12 of the 21 batters retired during the seven innings of play and then wasn't satisfied; she helped her own cause with three hits, drove in a run and scored the cincher counter herself. . . . And if that isn't enough for one softball game it will do until something better comes along. . . Steve Sundra got revenge on the New York Yankees for trading him down the river to the St. Louis Browns. . . Yesterday Sundra pitched a one-hitter over his former team-mates to win 9 to 1.

'TEEN-AGERS IN DEMAND

Fort William, Aug. 12 (CP)—Since Junior hockey players have become subject to military call, 'teen age boys now are in demand by hockey talent scouts.

It was reported that Port Colborne juniors have signed Colin McKay, defenceman, and Alex. McLennan, centre, both of last year's Port Arthur North End Midgets, and Eric Ketola, left-wing of Port Arthur West End Juniors.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 143

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

The mule who walks like a man no rule will learn, though he can. Though you beef and grumble, he will give you no tumble—the ornery chip-of-a-gun.

He cares not what he is doin'. Your hours of bridge he will ruin. Though you plead and you wheedle, he just gives you the needle: "I only play bridge for the fun."

Bridge is a partnership game you must know what you are showing your partner. You must know what partner shows. It may be fun for some selfish egg not to know. But it is no fun for partner.

Responders rules are easy. Pass with not more than two tricks. Bid something if you have more than two tricks with two high cards. A high card is an ace or a king or a queen.

Bids follow the order in T-A-N. That means take-out, assist, no-trump. As soon as you decide whether to T or A or N, you decide whether you will jump or not.

You jump only when you see tricks enough to help make a game. If you also have two sure tricks, you one-jump at once. Unless you also have the two sure tricks, do not jump until the second round.

Any one-jump is forcing to game. A non-jump takeout to a new suit is forcing for one round. Any other non-jump (assist or no-trump) does not force. Each non-jump raise shows another trick.

You have this hand:

♠9 5 2
♥K 7 6 3
♣A Q 7 4

Suppose partner starts with an opening bid of one diamond or one spade. Your first response is two clubs. If partner then bids two hearts, your third round bid is an assist raise to three hearts.

Get your partner's praise with an honest raise.

LESSON NO. 144

There is a war on. One group insists that a simple assist is a weak response. Another bunch claims that it shows additional strength. Is it one, or both, or neither?

Most players started their bridge in the middle. They never learned a simple foundation. Consequently even when positive in some belief, they are unable to prove if they are right.

Horse Sense shows you how to prove what is correct. It gives you the reason for every bid you make. It tells you which bid to select first in every case.

You have this responding hand:

♥K 7 6 3
♣A Q 7 4

Your hand contains four suit tricks and a biddable club suit. Before you bid, you are assumed to have two tricks. Each raise shows another trick. Bids follow T-A-N; takeout, assist, no-trump.

Suppose partner starts with an opening bid of one spade or one diamond. Following T-A-N, you first look for a takeout. Your first response is a takeout to two clubs.

Your two club response admits that you have more than two tricks. Your raise consumes the third trick. You still have an unconsumed trick. It may be shown later, if necessary.

Suppose partner bids two hearts on the second round. Again you follow T-A-N. Now, you have no more takeouts. So you look for an assist. You have it with adequate support in hearts.

Therefore, your second round response is an assist raise to three hearts. Each raise shows an additional trick. So partner now knows your hand contains four tricks.

Thus, an assist does not show weakness. It denies having a takeout. It admits having adequate support for partner's suit and another trick.

When you look at bridge that way, you understand what you are doing. Leave out the complicated bunk.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Silver Spurs"

The story hinges round an oil project which is being financed with the hard earned money of small farmers and the like, and the success or failure of the undertaking is subject to their being able to obtain a "right of way" through the swank ranch belonging to a playboy by the name of Jerry Johnson, who is being influenced against signing by Lucky Miller, a crooked gambler, who has plans to get the oil rights for himself plus Johnson's ranch.

Roy, who is Johnson's foreman, tries his best to help the local people get their right of way, but Lucky Miller has the cards stacked against him, and matters are further complicated when a girl reporter of a city newspaper comes into town to get the story and is made to believe that Roy is not only disloyal to his boss, Johnson, but wants to help himself to the oil rights as well.

How Roy outwits the crooked Miller, and proves himself to the girl reporter is told in a story which grips interest all through the picture, and in addition to some very fine outdoor photography, several great performances are turned in, not only by Roy himself, but by Phyllis Brooks as the girl reporter, John Carradine as Lucky Miller, Smiley Burnette as Frog Millhouse and Jerome Cowan as Jerry Johnson, Joyce Compton plays a comedy character part and the Sons of the Pioneers are seen and heard to great advantage in a number of their musical offerings.

Second big hit on the weekend program is "Keep 'Em Slugging," featuring the Dead End Kids. The latest edition of the Associated-British News reel completes the program.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Happy Go Lucky"
(In Technicolor)

A treat to eye and ear is on the screen of the Capitol Theatre in Paramount's gay, refreshing "Happy Go Lucky," the Technicolor musical which is now showing.

The picture sparkles with delightful performances by Mary Martin, Dick Powell, Betty Hutton, Eddie Bracken and Rudy Vallee, all of whom lend their many talents to making "Happy Go Lucky" the cheery, tuneful entertainment gem it is.

The story is set in one of the garden spots of the world — a romantic resort island in the Caribbean.

Five hit songs, plus a couple of extras, enliven proceedings which are lively enough to stand on their own feet even without the aid of music. The songs are "Happy Go Lucky," "Let's Get Lost," "Murder, He Says," "The Fuddy Duddy Watchmaker" and "Sing a Tropical Song." Keep your ear peeled for Sir Lancelot, the famous Calypso singer; he's sensational.

"Riders of the Northwest Mounted"

Red-coated Mounties, hard-riding outlaws and heart-stirring ballads of the range are reported to highlight Columbia's "Riders of the Northwest Mounted," new outdoor adventure drama scheduled tonight as the added hit at the Capitol Theatre. Directed by William Berke. The western stars Russell Hayden in the leading role as a two-fisted Mountie, while Bob Wills, famous singer of cowboy songs, heads the supporting cast.

A color cartoon and Zane Grey's "King of the Mounties" make up a very entertaining program for all to see.

AT THE BELLE

"China Girl"

A beautiful girl, defying violence anl terror, and a daring Yank, flying and fighting for victory, provide an exciting romantic adventure story against a flaming background of war in 20th Century-Fox "China Girl", which arrives today at the Belle theatre.

Gene Tierney and George Montgomery, teamed for the first time, are co-starred with Lynn Bari, 115 pounds of curves, crookedness and kisses caught in the battle-scarred east. Victor McLaglen, who tops the featured cast had the rugged type of role that made his name synonymous with hot and heavy action. The burly veteran appears as a two-fisted soldier-of-fortune who pedlles his loyalty to the highest bidder.

Opening with a thrilling escape from a Jap prison by Montgomery, an American newsreel cameraman, and McLaglen, the film takes in territory as newsworthy as tomorrow's headlines. Montgomery lams it to Burma, with the Japs hot on his trail because he refused to photograph the Burma road for them. Here George meets Gene Tierney, a patriotic Chinese girl, and falls in love.

The climactic sequences are said to have some of the most realistic bombing scenes ever filmed.

Also featured in the film are Alan Baxter, Sig Rumann, Myron McCormick and Bobby Blake.

"Dixie Dugan" on Screen

Putting her best foot forward, America's sweetheart of the comic strips steps out of the funnies and onto the screen in 20th Century-Fox's "Dixie Dugan," her first motion picture adventure.

In the rollicking comedy announced as the second feature, Lois Andrews, a pert and pretty newcomer from the Broadway beauty parade, plays the title role. It's Lois' as well as Dixie's, first film escapade and, from all reports, she makes the most of the hilarious occasion.

All of the beloved Dugan clan are on hand. Pa is played by Chas. Ruggles, Ma by Charlotte Greenwood, and they have their hands full as Dixie goes gallivanting in wartime Washington, sabotaging saboteurs and foiling fifth columnists. Ann Todd appears as Imogene, Dixie's mischievous little sister.

The picture is said to be rife with romantic possibilities for Dixie with James Ellison and Eddie Foy, Jr., present. But on the scene, too, is socialite Jean Patterson, Dixie's formidable comic strip rival, in the person of blonde Helene Reynolds.

The fun begins when Dixie, in a surge of patriotism, determines to do something concrete for Uncle Sam by taking over a man's job. In a word, Dixie's debut is dynamic.

"Valley of Blossoms" a gorgeous technicolor screen miniature completes the program.

Just the picture you've been clamoring for!

Free from war, and worry . . . a wonderful relief in these hectic times!

Umpire-ess Raymond Believes She Can Do as Good as Males

(By The Canadian Press)

There's a whale of a lot of conjecturing going on at Wichita, Kas., capital of sandlot baseball, and a 20-year-old girl is the cause of it all.

The fans are wondering just how that Umpire-ess Raymond (Hap) National semi-pro tournament will handle herself when the going gets rough.

Dumont himself is skeptical. The head man of the semi-pros explained today his decision to use Miss Lorraine Heinish, Kenosha, Wis., arbiter, was in the line of experimentation and insurance.

Miss Henrisch, 5 feet 4 and weighing 124 pounds, told Dumont, "I believe women can do as well as men umpires. They're taking their places in the factories and can do as well in athletic contests when it comes to decisions."

Dumont said she would be wearing the same attire as three male umpires—brown trousers, blue caps and coats and black shoes.

The Wisconsin girl will find herself officiating in a tourney top heavy with service clubs, many of them sparkling with former major leaguers.

Ted Atkinson rode three winners at New York's Belmont track yesterday and came within a photograph of taking a fourth, the camera deciding his horse was second in the eighth and closing races. Atkinson brought in both ends of the daily double, which paid $52.50, and his third winner was Magdala, in the seventh, at $14.30 for $2.

The first upset in the U.S. Women's Western Golf Tournament was the victory of Miss Mary A. Wall of Menominee, Mich., over the favored Kay Byrne with a 2-and-1 decision yesterday at Evanston, Ill. The co-favorite, Catherine Fox, of Glen Ridge, N.J., defeated Mrs. Lawrence Selz of Chicago 3 and 1.

Without a spare infielder when third-sacker Ken Keltner was spiked last Sunday, Cleveland Indians rushed through a $7,500 cash deal yesterday for third-baseman Jimmy Grant of the Chicago White Sox. Grant played for St. Paul of the American Association last year.

Ten winners in two days was the record hung up Tuesday and yesterday at the Steubenville, O., race track by Jockey F. Sheaffer, 21, Spring Grove, Pa. In yesterday's card he booted home the winning horse in six successive events. He has been riding four years.

Taking two hours to play nine innings, Waterloo and Brantford were deadlocked 6-6 at Brantford last night in an inter-county juvenile playdown fixture, the frame being called on account of darkness. Waterloo had previously won 13-1 at Waterloo.

The eighth annual Canadian racing derby attracted a field of eight harness horses at New Hamburg yesterday and the winner was Pine Ridge Alex, owned by Alex Parsons of London, Ont., and driven by Lou James. H set a new track record of 2:06¼.

Formerly in International League Company, Pitcher Sal Maglie, Welland, blanked St. Catharine-Merritton Combines 6-0 in the Niagara Senior Baseball League at Welland last night, allowing only four hits. It was his fifth successive shutout for the steelmen.

Three contestants each earned a brace of victories in the annual track and field meet of the Canadian Army Trades Schools at the Civic Stadium in Hamilton, Ont., yesterday. Sapper S. Klains won the two sprints; Pte. Urquhart won two fiel devents and Sapper R. J. Wilson captured the 880-yard race and four mile run.

To keep his 30-year playing record intact, Catcher Irish Miskimmons of Stratford Nationals, who was injured in the last inter-county fixture, took his place in the outfield of the final scheduled game at Galt last night in the ninth innings. The Nationals defeated the Terriers 5-3.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By CHARLES EDWARDS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Toronto, Aug. 12 (CP)—Must be that Montreal Canadiens are worrying about who will carry the puck for them next National Hockey League season. Baz O'Meara of the Montreal Star, discussing the proposals for hockey rule changes, commented: "Anyway, changing the hockey rules isn't the most vital necessity of hockey at the moment. The greatest necessity is hockey players who can play well enough to interest the public." And, handling the report that one of Coach Dick Irvin's pigeons had flown a record 1,700 miles, the Montreal Herald commented wistfully: "Too bad Irvin's pigeons can't skate, too."

Rear Vision:

Jimmy Ball, former Winnipeg track star, is getting a bit fed up on the story he lost the 400 metres race in the 1928 Olympics at Amsterdam by glancing back over his shoulder at the American, Ray Barbuti. Jimmy says he never looked back at Barbuti because he was never at any time out in front. Jimmy told Tony (Winnipeg Tribune) Allan the story had its origin in a photograph which caught the runners a few yards from the finish line and taken from an angle which erroneously made it appear Ball was in the lead. It also showed Jimmy's head slightly turned in Barbuti's direction.

Hall of Fame:

City of Kingston has mailed to Canada's hockey officials a four-page pamphlet outlining Kingston's claim for establishment of a hockey Hall of Fame in that city. The pamphlet contains a sketch of a tablet suggested for the Hall of Fame as tribute to the organizations which helped develop the game. The tablet is decorated with crossed N.H.L. the S.C.A.H.A., all provincial N.H.L. the S.C.A.H.A., all provincial associations, the U.S.A.H.A., American League and American Association are included in the honor roll.

Incidentally:

After reporting to army authorities here last week, Ralph McCabe of Belleville, Ont., was rejected on medical grounds and has returned to his pitching chores with Albany ....Archie Wilder, former amateur hockey star at Saskatoon, has won his R.C.A.F. wings and commission ....Frank Sargent of Port Arthur, President of the C.A.H.A., reports the amateur hockey executive job has been quieter this summer than for many years.

VOLO SONG WINS HAMBLETONIAN IN LAST TWO HEATS

Trotted Fastest Mile in First Heat but Lost to Worthy Boy

HEAVY WAGERING

By SID FEDER
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Aug. 12 — (AP) — Volo Song, the Hambletonian "hit tune" who can run like the hot licks on a trumpet, is in the same spot today as the guy with a thick, juicy steak — but who can't eat it because he's mislaid his store teeth.

For, the $5,000 bargain-son of Volomite won the Hambletonian and a bankroll of $23,263.92 yesterday by taking two out of three heats. But in the heat he didn't win, he trotted the fastest mile in the 18-year history of the Corn-tassel Derby — and it doesn't count.

This was in the first one-mile whirl around the Empire City track, where the buggy-whip classic was run this year because wartime transportation troubles forced it out of Goshen's county fair setting for the first time in 13 years. Worthy Boy, the first Hambletonian starter for Mrs. James B. Johnson, Jr., of Rochester, Mich., won the dash in the track record trotting time of 2:02½—a mark Volo Song duplicated in knocking off the second heat, before coming bac to waltz home with the third in 2:06.

Broke at Start

But in that opening spin, Volo Song broke stride just at the start. Before driver Ben White — better known as Mr. Trotting — could get him moving the way the book prescribed the rest of the pack was so far in front Volo looked lie an early arrival for the next race. He took out after the others like Casey Jones bringing old 69 in on schedule, made up more than 10 lengths and hit the wire in third place, only a length and a half back.

Since the winner was caught in 2:02½, Volo, naturally, must have zipped a lot faster. No official bothered to put the clock on him, but White apparently carries his own stop-watch and word reached the press box later that Ben's timepiece showed the tall, dark and handsome gee-gee had ripped off the eight furlongs in 2:00½.

GIRL IN THE GREEN COAT

by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

CHAPTER 1

It was my second February in the old Rollar building, on Post St. and I vowed it would be my last. But I had been threatening to move for so long that nobody, not even I, believed it any more.

For one thing, it takes money to move and I never had any money. Neither had anyone else who lived in the Rollar building except Peggy Hudson (Interior Decoration, 502-506) and Jan Proust (Piano Studio, 204-208) and they did not want to move.

I was scared to death at least half of the time I lived there, but it wasn't until the very end that I got the courage to mention it to Peggy. At first I didn't want to admit that I had made a mistake in moving in, and later I liked it so much, except when I was scared, that I tried to brazen it out.

Peggy and I lived in a sort of Bohemian luxury up there in the fifth floor studio that I shared with her. We had a big, airy living room (really Peggy's show-room) done in pale apricot and off-white, a smaller bedroom with twin beds and two dressing tables, a grand up-to-the-minute bath and a cute kitchen.

All this because Peg was a decorator by profession and the rent was cheap. Whenever I sank into one of those down cushioned armchairs or settled down to a little intensive primping at my very own, perfectly lighted dressing-table I thought, without nostalgia of all the musty, cramped little rooms I'd lived in the last five or six years since my dad died and I was on my own, a newspaper woman in San Francisco. And I gave thanks for the day that Peg said, "Well, if you like it, why don't you move in? I'm sick of sitting around and listening to the walls creak at night. I'll be glad to have company."

It was the only admission to the walls creaking I ever heard her make and later she said it was just figurative.

When I moved in, at Peg's invitation, I hadn't an idea in the world that there was anything queer about it. I knew that the building was not intended for housekeeping, of course, but Peg had gone to a lot of expense to make the fifth floor over to suit her needs, and Jan Proust, the concert pianist, had living quarters in connection with his studio on the second floor.

I didn't know that no one was supposed to sleep or cook in the building, and for that matter the management never made any attempt to prohibit it until I had been there a week and had spent my next two weeks' salary on a ritzy typewriter desk that matched the rest of the furniture.

It was an old, run-down studio building, though the location was good, right in the heart of the shopping district, and the ground floor was occupied by one of the town's smartest florists. The foyer, all marble, with heavy plate-glass and bronze doors was not bad, but once you stepped into the rickety old elevator or began to climb the worn, winding stairs you knew it for what it was. There was always a "Studio for Rent" sign in one of the front upper windows and a general air of poverty and decay about the whole place.

Except for Peggy and Jan, the prosperous tenants had moved long since to newer, better kept buildings. Peggy took advantage of the falling rent which allowed her to "spread out" over the entire top floor, and Jan, of course, is so important that he does not have to keep up appearances. People come to Jan Proust no matter where he lives. Most of the newcomers were what Peggy called "shabby genteel," terribly poor and with one or two exceptions, not very talented.

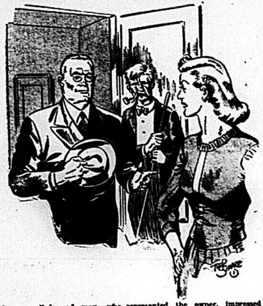
Mr. Grant, the seedy old building manager who wore shiny white collars two sizes too large for his thin, wrinkled neck, was really elevator man and janitor as well, but he ran the elevator with his worn derby on his head and swept the halls with his coat on.

"Well, I'll run you up," he'd say with friendly condescension when you stepped into the elevator, and sometimes he would take out his large gold watch and look at it anxiously, as if it were high time for the real operator to arrive on the job.

But when he was busy with mop and pail he just pulled the derby down over his eyes and pretended he did not see you.

If Madame Hurd, who taught singing, or Mr. Fissel, the violinist, tapped on your door to borrow an egg or a pat of butter, it was always with the laughing excuse that there was just time between pupils to snatch a hasty bite. Most of them spoke vaguely of a room somewhere else and nobody admitted doing all his cooking on the premises. But every studio had its lumpy couch and its home-made cooler on a back window-sill.

When the "No Housekeeping" sign was hung, after I had been there about a week and poor Mr. Grant, accompanied by a large, well-dressed man who represented the owner, made the rounds and impressed it upon us that they meant business, everyone threatened to move, but no one did. There was a lot of argument and bickering but it did no good. Positively no more housekeeping.



A large, well-dressed man, who represented the owner, impressed the rule upon us.

Maybe it was a fire ordinance, or something about the plumbing, which was weak enough heaven knows, or maybe the building was condemned. All I know is that Mr. Grant was instructed to lock the doors when he left at nine and to turn out all the hall lights at that time and there would be real trouble if anyone was discovered sleeping in the building.

Jan Proust, who paid the biggest rent and made the biggest fuss, was first to acknowledge the inevitable. He took a room for himself at the St. Francis, just a few blocks away. The others also accepted defeat, in their own way. They stayed away for a few nights or a few weeks. But soon the familiar smells of coffee and bacon, cauliflower and onions began to seep through the cracks of closed doors and slippered, stealthy feet scuttled through the black halls at all hours of the night and early morning.

Housekeeping was soon going on as usual, but in secret, except for Jan, who plodded patiently back and forth from the hotel, and for us. We did it openly.

Peggy figuratively thumbed her nose at the management.

"If they don't like it," she said "let them put us out, but with half a dozen vacant studios on their hands already I don't see them asking me to vacate the entire fifth floor!"

I admired her nonchalance.

We all admired it.

I wished I were brave like that. I wished I were even brave enough to tell her that I wanted to move. Heaven knows I wanted to. The halls that had been shabby and dim because of the old-fashioned, inadequate lighting, were black and menacing after nine o'clock now, and the steep, narrow stairs were really dangerous after the lights were out and the elevator had stopped running.

Churchill Studies Queenston Heights

Niagara Falls, Ont., Aug. 12 — (CP)—Prime Minister Churchill, student and exponent of war, was puzzled at historic Queenston Heights today as to why Gen. Sir Isaac Brock attempted to scale the heights in the war of 1812 with a handful of men.

This was one of the subjects he discussed while on the verandah of the Queenston Heights restaurand, it was disclosed by Maxim T. Gray, Niagara Parks Commission manager.

Mr. Churchill inquired also why no big monument had been erected to Gen. Sir Roger H. Sheaffe who recaptured the heights from the Americans although a tall column had been placed on the heights to honor Gen. Brock who lost his life in the attempt. It was explained to Mr. Churchill that a small marker had been erected by the Historic Sites and Monuments Board to honor Gen. Sheaffe.

Mr. Churchill suggested that no large monument had been erected to commemorate Gen. Sheaffe's exploit "because he wasn't killed."

Churchill Leaves One of His Famous Cigars Behind

Smiling, the Prime Minister drew out his gold cigar case, extracted a cigar and tossed it to the lad. Earlier, in boarding the train, Mr. Churchill handed a little girl the band off a cigar.

Tipped off apparently by his visit to Niagara Falls, Ont., a large crowd cheered the Prime Minister and he responded with the "V" sign.

Screen in Oakes' Room Under Guard After the Murder

By E. V. W. JONES
Associated Press Staff Writer

Nassau, Bahamas, Aug. 12—(AP) —Maj. Herbert Pemberton of the Nassau police testified today that he left a strong guard over the room where the body of Sir Harry Oakes, millionaire Baronet was beaten and burned to death the night of July 7-8, was found.

He told of meeting Alfred De Marigny, Sir Harry's son-in-law who is charged with murder, on the first floor of the estate where the slaying took place and instructing him:—

"Under no circumstances are you to go upstairs."

Previous witnesses at a preliminary hearing for De Marigny have testified that a fingerprint of the son-in-law was found on a screen near Sir Harry's bed where the body was found.

Capt. E. W. Melchen of the Miami police quoted De Marigny as saying that he had not entered the estate, Westbourne, for three years until he hastened there upon learning of the killing.

Melchen added that the screen was under guard when he took De Marigny upstairs July 9 for an interview.

Pemberton said the screen was left in the death room until Melchen and another Miami officer, Capt. James O. Barker, arrived on the scene.

Alfred F. Adderley, special prosecutor, asked Pemberton whether De Marigny went upstairs during the 19 hours that the officer remained on duty at the estate after the crime was discovered.

"No, sir," Pemberton answered emphatically.

The small courtroom again was crowded for the continuation of the preliminary hearing.

Steps to Prevent Worsening Of Paper Scarcity

New York, Aug. 12—(AP)—Immediate steps are necessary to prevent a worsening of the present paper scarcity, members of a House of Representatives Investigating Sub-Committee have reported to United States newspaper publishers, whose use of newsprint paper already is curtailed.

Increased pulpwood production, Chairman Lyle H. Boren (Dem.-Okla.) said yesterday, appears to be the only answer to the paper scarcity. More wood, in turn, depends on more manpower.

Boren estimated that, as far as American newspapers are concerned, the current availability of 210,000 tons of Canadian newsprint monthly would continue through September. For the final quarter of this year, however, a supply of only 10,000 tons a month appears likely "unless positive steps are taken" and for 1944 the estimate was 148,000 tons monthly.

Seventy per cent. of the newsprint used by American newspapers originates in Canada, while Canadian mills also provide large quantities of wood pulp which is processed in the United States.

Boren said that placing the Canadian industry on the essential list "might be a large step toward solution of the problem."

Little Benny's Note Book

My air raid warden whissle got out of order from overwork and I was sitting on my front steps trying different ways of blowing into it to make it work again, which it wouldn't, and Sam Cross came up throwing his tennis ball and catching it again, saying, What's you doing, wont it blow?

Giving me an idea how to pay him back for being the biggest liar around, and I said, Sure it'll blow, that's just the thing, this is a puzzle whissle and the puzzle is to blow into it the exact right way or else it wont blow

Well show me how, let's see you blow into it right, Sam Cross said, and I said, Like fun, nothing doing, do you think I want everybody to catch on how to do it?

Thinking, Oh, boy it worked, he believes it, oh boy wait till I tell the fellows.

And I had another idea, saying, I wouldn't swap it for that tennis ball no sir, not on a bet.

Why what's a matter with this tennis ball, Sam said, and I said, I didn't say anything was a matter with it, it's just not worth it, that's all. Oh well, I might change my mind if you swap real fast, I said.

Okay, hurry up and swap, Sam said.

And he quick handed be the tennis ball and I quick handed him te wissle, and I said, Hay, this ball has a crack in it, hay.

Sure it has that's the thing, it's a puzzle ball and it wont bounce unless you throw it the exact right way, but dont ask me to show you how unless you show me how this whissle blows, Sam said.

Proving most bargains have 2 sides and anyways there's no use trying to beat somebody at what they're best at.

U. S. BOMBERS POUND ROME SECOND TIME

Railroad Freight Yards Principal Daylight Targets

Allies Emphasizing Recent Warning To Italy That Raids Would Be Resumed

NO ADVANCE NOTICE

(By RELMAN MORIN)
(A.P. War Correspondent)

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 13 (AP) — An American air armada of possibly 500 planes swarmed over Rome shortly before noon today, smashing the San Lorenzo and Littorio railroad yards, key hubs of the Axis communications system in Italy.

The first waves of heavy bombers from Major-Gen. James H. Doolittle's command roared over the San Lorenzo yards a little after 11 a.m., while medium bombers were coming in at low level over the Littorio yards, bombing and pouring tracers into the already burning target area.

The number of bombers participating in the mass attack was said to equal those that raided the Italian capital July 19, when 500 heavy American bombers and 200 fighters took part. A total of 1,100 tons of explosives was loosed then.

The attacks today brought home to the Italian people recent warnings that the mass attacks were about to be resumed.

Escorted by Fighters

The huge fleet was escorted by American fighters.

While it was not officially stated, it was believed the attacking force probably encountered heavier fighter opposition than in the previous raid, when few Axis interceptors and almost negligible anti-aircraft fire were found over the target.

There has been indications that the German air force has had to send new fighter squadrons into Southern Italy in an attempt to bolster their shattered strength over Sicily.

As far as was known, no statement or explanation was radioed to the Italian people this time as was done before.

The new attack was a warning that the Allied threat to bomb Rome again would be maintained.

The raid on the Italian capital was disclosed shortly after London announced that Britain-based bombers, attacking Northern Italy in greater strength than ever before, raided Milan and Turin last night.

At the same time, swift R. A. F. Mosquitos struck at Berlin, so both Axis capitals felt the sting of Allied air power.

The damage to the German capital was not immediately announced.

London dispatches said probably more than 1,000 fighters and bombers were in the air in the heavy attack on the northern Italian industrial section.

The air ministry announced that 13 bombers were missing from the night attacks, two of them Canadian.

Berlin, bombed 67 times previously, is being partially evacuated in preparation for Allied mass raids.

Turin, which houses Fiat aero engine factories, the Italian Royal Arsenal and chemical and other plants, has been bombed 30 times previously. Milan was last raided Saturday night. It houses the Caproni Aircraft and Breda Armament works and tire and aircraft engine factories.

Rome was bombed only once before, when 500 American heavy bombers concentrated on the attack. Two hundred fighters were engaged in the operation in which five planes were lost.

San Giovanni Raided

R.A.F. Halifax and Liberator bombers from the Middle East Command early yesterday contributed their share of the Allied aerial effort to force the Italians from the war. They heavily attacked railway sidings at San Giovanni, on the toe of Italy just opposite the Axis Messina bridgehead on Sicily.

The first waves of heavy bombers ran over Rome this morning and hit the San Lorenzo yards a little after 11 a. m.

Almost simultaneously, medium bombers began bombing the Littorio yards.

It was an All-American raid again, the bombers coming from the strategic air force which is commanded by Maj.-Gen. James H. Doolittle.

As before, the pilots were carefully instructed before going out to avoid hitting churches or historical objects.

Milan And Turin In Northern Italy Pounded in Heavy Attack; Berlin Hit

11 BOMBERS LOST

By ERNEST AGNEW
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 13 — (AP) — One of the war's most destructive night and day aerial assaults against key Axis citadels thundered to a climax today with both Rome and Berlin attacked in the same day and Milan and Turin pounded in the heaviest attack ever made on northern Italy.

American bombers of the Northwest African Air Force struck by daylight in their second raid on the Italian capital after Britain-based R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. night bombers hit the northern Italian industrial cities and swift Mosquitos stabbed at the German capital.

Making good the recent Allied threat to rip into Italy again for failure to capitulate, fleets of four and two-engined bombers blasted Rome's vital railway yards in a repetition of the initial assault on the capital July 19.

A special air communique from North Africa gave few details, but it was believed that the blow at least equalled that of last month's attacking formations of 500 bombers and 200 fighters, the greatest ever to take the air in the Mediterranean.

The air ministry said the long-range attack on Northern Italy was made "in greater strength than ever before."

11 Planes Missing.

First reports said 13 bombers were lost in all the widespread night operations but a late air ministry announcement disclosed that two of these had landed safely. R. C. A. F. headquarters said two Canadian aircraft are missing.

Hammering home Prime Minister Churchill's warning that Italy would be "seared, scarred and blackened from end to end" if she remains in the war, the night's operations probably put 1,000 or more fighters and bombers into the air.

The heaviest onslaught of the war against Northern Italy coincided with an attack on Berlin by swift Mosquito bombers. Damage to the German capital was not immediately announced. It came a few hours before today's raid on Rome, announced by Allied Headquarters in North Africa.

U. S. OFFICIALS WILL AUGMENT STAFF AT QUEBEC

Sixth Wartime Parley Between Roosevelt And Churchill Likely To Start Next Week

CHURCHILL IN U. S.

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Quebec, Aug. 13 — (CP) — High-ranking United States officers are expected to arrive in this old St. Lawrence city soon to augment the expert military staffs already conferring on major strategy matters to be brought before Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt when they come here for their sixth wartime conference — probably next week.

The British and Canadian Chiefs of Staff already are in Quebec, along with some American officers. But the chief American military officials had not arrived late last night. It was anticipated they will precede Mr. Roosevelt to Chateau Frontenac, big hotel commandeered by the Canadian Government as conference headquarters.

Prime Minister Churchill yesterday crossed the border into the United States at Niagara Falls after an overnight stay at the Citadel, summer residence here of Canada's Governor-General. Newspapermen were not permitted to speculate on his present whereabouts.

It was anticipated, however, that he will return to Quebec in a few days to resume conferences with Prime Minister Mackenzie King who is remaining here with a quorum of his cabinet.

Known as Quebec Conference

Once Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt are both here, the meeting likely to be known in future as the "Quebec Conference" will get down to business.

Tuesday Mr. Churchill and the Lord President of the British council, Sir John Anderson, representing the British War Cabinet, met here with the War Committee of the Canadian Cabinet in a joint session lasting nearly three hours.

It was officially stated after that meeting that "a further joint session will be held at a later date."

What was discussed at the Tuesday meeting still was hidden behind a barrier of secrecy. It was considered possible, however, that one subject was the future role of the Canadian Armed Forces in the developing global war; another, the London, Aug 13 (CP Cable)—Canadians apparently are no longer fighting in Sicily and it is believed in London they are the subject of Canadian-British discussions now on how they they should be used—as a complete Canadian army or broken up and integrated into British armies in future actions.

I think it can be said that Canadian authorities are desirous that their troops be used as a complete army.

In any event this is a tremendous question for the Dominion which all along has believed it would be represented in the field by the Canadian army as a whole.

It is considered here that this question may have been the reason why Col. J. L. Ralston, Canadian Defence Minister, raced home after only a few days in Britain. When the Minister arrived it was believed he would stay some time and it is understood here the business is still to be cleaned up so he is likely to return shortly.

While it has not been announced just what disposition has been made of the Canadian 1st Division which made such a fine showing in the first few weeks of the Sicilian campaign, it is obvious they have not been in recent action.

From Algiers, Louis V. Hunter, Canadian Press War Correspondent, has written that the Canadians are believed to be resting. In the London bureau the first question our editors asked was, "what is Hunter trying to tell us?" Maybe he was not trying to tell anything, but it was realized he was writing against censorship and security and was unable to say much, and if the Canadians are not fighting it is obviously factual that they are resting.

But here and there there is a feeling that there is something more to the Canadian inactivity than the need of rest and perhaps some grounds for conjecture that the Canadians were pulled from the line while discussions took place as to their ultimate disposition in the armed line-up of the United Nations.

There is a feeling among Canadian army men who have recently participated in one exercise after another in Britain—some of them secret—that they will be used as an assault against Hitler's European fortress.

Undoubtedly the use of the Canadian army must be high on the agenda of Mr. Churchill's discussions with Canadian leaders at Quebec.

Canadian war correspondents who move with the troops in Britain say the men want to fight as a whole and feel they will eventually. On all sides army men ask correspondents what the Canadians are doing in Sicily now and are as puzzled as anybody as to why the Canadians are not included in reports of the Sicily clean-up assaults.

PRICES BOARD REVISES RENTAL REGULATIONS

Minimum of Six Months' Notice to Vacate Will Replace Year's Notice

EFFECTIVE OCT. 1ST

Ottawa, Aug. 13—(CP) — The Prices Board announced today that revisions in wartime rental regulations regarding housing accommodation will become effective throughout Canada Oct. 1, and will provide, among other changes, that a minimum of six months' notice to vacate will replace the minimum of one year's notice now required if landlords want to live in tenanted accommodation purchased by them after Dec. 10, 1942.

The revised order, the board said, maintains the ceiling on rents but is designed to make easier the part of tenants and landlords in the administration of rent control and "give greater certainty of position to each."

The revised order provides that an application for an increase in rent will be more generally limited to situations where the tenant is receiving more value for his rent than he was on the basic date, and authorizes appointments of "local rentals appraisers," who are empowered to deal with applications for changes in rent.

Persons on a weekly tenancy of self-contained units will be given the same protection as those on monthly or yearly tenancies, and roomers and boarders will be brought under the price ceiling in a section known as "shared accommodation."

Placed on Same Basis

Previously, landlords who acquired accommodations before December, 1942, were fixed with a minimum of three months' notice; now new and old landlords are placed on the same footing. For personal occupancy, a landlord previously could be required to go to court and prove he needed the accommodation.

Under the new order, a bona fide owner may occupy his own property as a residence merely by giving the prescribed length of notice. To prevent abuses, it is provided that an owner will not be permit-

PARTICIPATION NEVER PLANNED SAYS MOSCOW

London Believes Conference Will Deal With War on Japan

STALIN ADVISED

London, Aug. 13 — (CP)—Moscow announced officially today that Soviet participation "was not and is not envisaged" in the forthcoming Churchill-Roosevelt conference at Quebec, and first London reaction was that the talks would deal primarily with the war on Japan.

In a broadcast recorded here by the Soviet Monitor, the official Soviet news agency Tass said it had been authorized to state that foreign reports Russia would attend the conference "are based on a misunderstanding."

"The Soviet government," the statement said, "did not receive an invitation to be present at the meeting, and because of the nature of the conference the participation of anyone representative of the Soviet government at the meeting in Quebec was not and is not envisaged."

Nature of Conference.

Some London quarters thought the reference to the "nature" of the conference significant.

Since Russia is not at war with Japan, it is not likely that the Soviet would be invited to any conference concerned chiefly with fighting in the Pacific.

The wording of the Moscow announcement made it seem clear, however, that Premier Stalin had been given advance details of the conference. In this connection, it was recalled that the British and American Ambassadors conferred with Stalin this week.

As a matter of fact, there was some thought the ambassadors may have warned the Soviet Marshal of the possibility of an impending Japanese attack on Russia.

Japan 'Secret Weapon'

Gen. Sir Douglas Brownrigg, writing in the London Evening News two days ago, said it probably was not too far-fetched an idea to suggest the Japanese constitute "the secret weapon" at which Reichmarshal Hermann Goering had been hinting.

Canadian Troops in Great Britain Hope For Chance to 'Crack' Enemy

By DOUGLAS AMARON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

London, Aug. 13 (CP Cable) — The Canadian troops in Britain, hardened, well-equipped and confident their road leads to Berlin, have reached the zero hour of preparations for invasion.

For a month they have watched with envy and pride the achievements of the 1st division in Sicily, at the same time undergoing training, some of it secret, for operations which will match those of their fellow-Canadians.

The days of conditioning are over for most of the troops in this country. Their training is pointed now to a definite objective, suggesting the part the Canadians are to play in the invasion of Europe's mainland has been decided.

Asked if one Canadian armored division would require a further long period of training before being sent against the enemy, Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, commander of the Canadian army, replied: "I would be ready to put this division into action tomorrow."

Where the Canadians will be used still is a matter only the highest political and military authorities know, but Prime Minister Churchill's visit to Canada, following the visit to this country of Col. J. L. Ralston, Canadian Defence Minister, is viewed by the average Canadian soldier, as an indication something is brewing for the divisions here.

Many of the troops in casual conservation have expressed the hope they can "crack" the enemy from the west rather than from the south. The lads who fought at Dieppe have a score to even on that front and feel that "an invasion to stay" will give them the chance they want.

Col. Ralston during his visits to the troops earlier this month reiterated time and again that there is much fighting to be done before the war ends. Sicily is but the beginning, he said, and Europe still has to be cracked both north and south.

The men to whom Col. Ralston first gave this warning—troops of an armored division—had just completed a tough exercise in which the opposition was a Polish armored division part of which was used to help prepare the Canadian 1st division for the Sicilian campaign.

For three days the Canadians and Poles waged "war" on barren moors, tanks against tanks, infantry against infantry. Conditions were as realistic as they can be during training.

Gen. McNaughton, Gen. Sir Bernard Paget of the British army, Lt.-Gen. E. W. Sansom, commander of a Canadian Corps, Maj.-Gen. F. F. Worthington, commander of a Canadian Division, and other high-ranking British and Allied officers spent some time watching the scheme and Gen. McNaughton in an interview spoke highly of the Canadian troops.

In many ways, he said a scheme such as this presented greater problems than actual combat, for movement was restricted by farmland areas in which there could be no fighting. As a result there had to be rigid umpire control which led to artificiality.

Gen. McNaughton said the Sicilian campaign showed that the Canadian army's training methods were "eminently correct." Senior army officers with whom he conferred in Sicily told him to "carry on" this type of training.

'V' MARK ON EACH FOOT

Halifax, Aug. 13 (CP)—If Robert John Bailey gets the barefoot habit he will leave the sign of victory behind him wherever he walks. Parents of the two-months-old boy, Mr. and Mrs. John Bailey, say he was born with a clearly marked 'V' on the sole of each foot.

POPE VISITS BOMBED AREAS

London, Aug. 13 — (CP) — The Rome radio said that Pope Pius XII visited the areas of the Italian capital bombed in today's Allied aerial assault.

The Pope made his visit immediately after the planes had departed, the broadcast said.

BATTLES AROUND KHARKOV NEAR THE FINAL STAGES

Red Army Approaches To Within 5 Miles Of City as Enemy Defence Weaken

CHUGUEV CAPTURED

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Aug. 13 —(AP)—Battles around Kharkov, great German Ukraine base, approached final stages today as German defences about the city crumbled under the blows of the Red army.

Counter-attacking fresh German reserves were unable to dislodge Soviet troops threatening the city from the north and east, which had advanced at one point to within five miles of the city. The Russians were said to be gathering for a final assault.

(The Berlin radio reported the Russians were throwing in "ever new divisions, tank brigades, artillery regiments and airforce squadrons" as fighting on the whole eastern front was "increasing in violence.")

Path Cleared

The fall of Chuguev, main enemy bastion, 22 miles southeast of Kharkov, cleared the path for encirclement of the Ukrainian centre.

The newspaper Red Star reported the main battles were raging along the Kharkov-Poltava rail line. The enemy here was throwing in fresh reserves, including all sorts of special units operating as infantry to stem the Soviet advance.

Soviet tanks operating ahead of the main masses of troops gave the Germans no breathing spell or a chance to arrange their forces.

The capture of Kilontaev, 30 miles up the Vorskala River from Poltava, threatened that German base. Operations there run along a wide bulging front stretching west from Kharkov and jutting across the Kharkov-Poltava railroad and back to the district west of Akhtyrka.

Dispatches on the Chuguev battle described strong fortifications through which the Germans supplied their defences of the western bank of the northern Donets. Soviet troops forced the river far north of the city and closed in through the forest after capturing several settlements along the route.

The city was finally taken when other Soviet units crossed the river in the region of the city itself after a violent three-directional assault.

The local population, armed with German weapons, assisted Red army groups in capturing Germans hiding in forests and ravines around Kharkov.

Sir John Anderson Returns to Britain

London, Aug. 13 CP)—Sir John Anderson, Lord President of the Council, has returned from Canada, it was announced today. Sir John was with Prime Minister Churchill in Quebec earlier this week.

Sir John, a member of the War Cabinet, disclosed he had been in Washington, also, talking with War Secretary Henry Stimson and Gen. George C. Marshall, U.S. Chief of Staff.

In Quebec he discussed war problems with Mr. Churchill, Prime Minister Mackenzie King and the War Committee of the Canadian cabinet.

Gain of 8 Miles Made by U.S. 7th Army Along Coast

Nazi Evacuation Quickens With 35 To 50 Vessels Seen At One Time

WIDE DISPERSION HELPS

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 13 — (AP) — Allied authorities announced today that the United States 7th Army had captured Cape Orlando, the German coastal stronghold which was outflanked by an American landing from the sea Wednesday.

The fall of the Cape, little more than 40 miles west of Messina, came after American troops to the east and west had established a junction and overrun the adjacent towns of Naso and Brolo.

Over 130,000 Prisoners

Axis prisoners now exceed 130,000, it was announced.

Among the captives was a General Fiumara, Second in Command of the Italian Napoli (Naples) Division, who was reported captured yesterday "with donkey." It was not stated whether Fiumara was riding the beast.

The Americans went forward 8 miles along the northern coast through Cape Orlando while the British 8th Army advanced four miles on the east coast, threatening Taormina.

Both Allied wings were within 35 miles of Messina, whose beaches were the scene of an increasing enemy evacuation movement in Italy.

Randazzo, the central anchor of the Germans' rear guard line, was menaced from the flanks.

Early Fall Randazzo Expected.

The occupation of Randazzo was in sight.

Allied troops fought with the Germans on the outskirts of that mountain-top town, which was littered and broken by repeated aerial bombardments and steady shelling from artillery batteries.

Allied airmen who cruised above the sector yesterday reported they saw exchanges of small arms fire close to the town. The German garrison, by its tenacious stand, apparently is inviting on a small scale the same fate that befell the Nazi army at Stalingrad.

The enemy's evacuation to the Italian mainland quickened its pace yesterday afternoon, when from 35 to 50 vessels of various kinds were seen at one time in the narrow, heavily defended straits. The withdrawal started at least ten days ago.

(Ross Munro, Canadian Press war correspondent, said in a dispatch from the 8th. Army front that a considerable portion of three mauled divisions—the Herman Goering, the 15th. Armored and the 29th. Motorized—apparently might get away.

No Cape Bon

(Munro said that the northeastern tip of Sicily "is certainly no Cape Bon," that narrowness of the strait, heavy anti-aircraft concentrations and the wide dispersion of the troops on the beaches were in the enemy's favor.)

The veteran British 50th. Northumbrian Division crashed through four miles on the east coast just below Taormina after British naval guns had raked the enemy's positions at Cape Ali, which is on Messina Strait between Taormina and Messina.

A famous American division ripped off the eight mile gain on the north coast, occupying Cape Orlando, Naso and Brolo, while American warships steamed ahead and wrecked enemy railway and highway communications as far east as Marina Di Patti, 28 miles due west of Messina.

Of the campaign total of more than 130,000 prisoners, about 100,000 were taken by the Americans.

Picture Bright

With enemy resistance at Randazzo obviously in its last hours and the sea-girt German flanks crumbling rapidly, the overall picture appeared bright with the promise of swift and final conquest of the remaining fragment of Sicily.

Incessant Allied attacks ground down the rear German troops, who have been fighting without relief one of the fiercest rear guard actions of the Mediterranean war.

Control Vital Road

The fall of Cape Orlando and Naso gave the Americans control of the lateral road running south to Randazzo and reduced escape routes of the Germans at Randazzo to one—the highway eastward. The British advance up the east coast was an evergrowing threat of complete entrapment of this Nazi force.

Development of small arms fire about Randazzo indicated that British and United States forces were closing their trap from three sides, north, west and south.

A field dispatch filed by Joseph Morton, Associated Press correspondent, from an advanced American air base in Sicily said the Allies bomb-safety line was shifted late yesterday to a point east of Randazzo.

Thus ended the aerial attacks by British and American fliers, who have literally blown the town to pieces with loads of explosives totalling more than 200 tons in the last seven days. The bomb-safety line, denoted on terrain maps, protects Allied ground troops from accidental bombing by friendly planes.

An Allied officer expressed doubt that the enemy evacuation of Sicily had yet reached the "full scale," but said the Allied Air Force and warships seeking to halt the traffic had an extremely difficult task.

Huge Gun Concentration

The Germans have concentrated hundreds of heavy and light guns along both shores of the channel, which is only two miles wide at one point, for defence against both air and surface raiders.

R.A.F. officers have said that the anti-aircraft fire sent up by these batteries is equal to that in the Ruhr Valley.

Nevertheless, both airmen and sailors of the Allied forces are defying this artillery to stab repeatedly at the stream of troops and equipment moving through the bridgehead.

There is virtually no organized resistance by Italian troops remaining in Sicily. One Italian detachment surrendered voluntarily yesterday, pleading lack of transport to escape.

In one week's fighting the front has been trimmed from 45 miles in length to 30 miles.

The Germans need fewer men for the shortened line and are concentrating their machine-guns and mine-laying operations on the fewer approaches to their positions.

"The Germans undoubtedly are growing weaker, but at the same time the terrain is becoming even more treacherous and difficult for our advancing forces," said a competent source.

Part of Nazi Govt. Machinery Reported Moved From Berlin

Berne, Aug. 13 —(AP)— Reports reaching here said today that a substantial part of the Nazi government machinery had been transferred from Berlin to Vienna for safety from Allied air raids.

These reports also claimed that Nazi authorities were considering proclaiming their capital an open city in an effort to save it from the same fate which struck Hamburg, Cologne, Duesseldorf and other German cities.

German reports indicated that more than 1,250,000 civilians of a total of 4,250,000 have evacuated Berlin, chiefly to Pomerania, eastern Prussia, Brandenburg and lower Silesia. Leipzig, Madgeburg and Brunswick also are reported being evacuated

Railroad yards are said to be crammed with evacuation trains, waiting for instructions where to go. Evacuees often are being kept waiting in crowded coaches and trucks for days at a time without adequate feeding and sleeping arrangements, reports said, resulting in a further increase in ailments and lowering of morale.

Propaganda Minister Goebbels, according to reports reaching here, is one of the first to suffer a severe curtailment of power in the revision of the Reich's government now in progress, due to divorcing the home and foreign propaganda systems. The latter now is under Ribbentrop's foreign office.

As a result, it was asserted Goebbels is not free to discuss foreign or military policy without obtaining permission from the foreign office.

St. John Ambulance Occupies New Headquarters

Dr. J. J. Robertson Donates Large Room for the Brigade

A large and enthusiastic group of members of the St. John Ambulance Brigade and Nursing Division met jointly for their regular meeting at a new headquarters which have been offered for their use by Dr. J. J. Robertson, Pinnacle Street. The generous offer of this large room which has a fine fireplace and is to have cupboard accommodation for equipment and supplies, ends many months of wandering by the Corps. For months past, the Brigade and the Nursing Division have met wherever there was an open door, the Court House, the Collegiate, the Armouries, the Hospital, the Blood Donors' Clinic and even in the busy office of Dr. Robertson. These elastic arrangements left much to be desired in the matter of storage of supplies and definite place of meeting. The new arrangement should give a real impetus to the work of the Corps. Dr. Robertson has offered to alter, re-decorate and equip the room at his own expense and supply heat and light in order to further the war efforts of the local group.

Centrally located, the headquarters is ideally placed for its purpose of providing emergency aid for this district, should an emergency render such help necessary. Not only will there be at this point medical supplies and equipment, to be purchased by funds raised in its tag day, but there will be also a group of members well trained in the use of this material.

Among the many topics on the agenda for the discussion period of the meeting was the matter of attendance at the Belleville Fair. This year, as last fall, the Brigade is to be in attendance, to offer first aid, should it be required. Again a booth is to be fitted out, and members will be in attendance to describe the courses, responsibilities, of the St. John organization. The booth will contain, among other equipment, a hospital cot.

A part of the proceedings which gave a great deal of satisfaction was the presentation of nine first aid certificates to a growing list of holders of these coveted awards.

The members of the men's division learned that their leader, Mr. J. W. Hodgson has joined His Majesty's forces, and will retire from the brigade. Announcement was made, however, that Mr. T. R. Franklin, is now to take charge, and the members are anticipating an active fall and winter under his guidance.

POLICE COURT

Soldier Given 6-Month Term

Pte. Delbert Jiggins, of the Governor General's Foot Guards from Ottawa, was sentenced to five to six months in the Ontario Reformatory by Magistrate J. L. Lloyd after being convicted of the theft of a radio and electric iron in city police court today.

"This man is not only a deserter from the army, but has a most regretable crime sheet. I would suggest he be sent to penitentiary," stated Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., as he read Jiggins' record of previous convictions in civil as well as military life. Jiggins denied the civil convictions, however.

The accused man was charged with stealing a radio and electric iron from Gerald Hineman, of this city. Jiggins pleaded guilty, but stated he was intoxicated at the time.

"Frankly, I don't know whether this is a case for imprisonment or the Ontario Mental Hospital," commented His Worship before passing sentence.

Speeders Fined

Two speedsters, George Thomas and Elmer Shorey paid $7.50, including costs, for violations of the Traffic Bylaw, while Allan McKenzie was assessed $22.50 after being convicted on a careless driving count.

Jailed for Intoxication

"I hope the newspaper reporter spells this name properly in the press," commented Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan with a smile as he read a charge of intoxication against Lawrence Doonan, of Perth. In default of paying the fine, Doonan will spend the next fortnight as a guest at the local bastille.

Case Dismissed

A charge of obtaining goods and money from the Lincoln Shoe store by false pretenses was dismissed against Pte. John Ousterhout of Camp Borden. Charles A. Payne, K.C., appeared for the accused and when prosecution witnesses could not identify Ousterhout, Mr. Payne moved for a dismissal, which His Worship granted.

Given Twenty Days

Apprehended in a local department store earlier in the week on a charge of shoplifting, Ella Morris, 11 Willard St., was today sentenced to serve twenty days in the common jail. There were actually two such charges and after the woman pleaded guilty, Magistrate Lloyd made the sentences run concurrent.

Feed Grain Should Be Bought And Stored Now For Future Use

Foxboro, August 12th.

To The Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

Through the colums of your paper which is widely circulated in the County of Hastings, I wish to draw to the attention of the farmers, the critical state of the feed grain situation, and the effect it will have on our production of cheese, bacon, and poultry products in 1944.

Needless to say we all know the demands made upon us from our Armed Forces, British Isles and Industrial workers for food, and our bounden duty to supply the same.

Due to adverse weather conditions in seeding and harvesting, over which we as farmers have no control, it is estimated the grain crop in Hastings County is 50 per cent of average, or 40 per cent of last year's crop. The only way to rectify this, is to order western feed grain now in order that the county's output of food remains normal. We have been warned that owing to transportation difficulties, this opportunity will not present itself in winter and spring months.

Every farmer has storage facilities for from 5 to 20 hundred bushels of grain. If he has not the necessary capital at the moment, to finance this, any bank manager will give him favorable consideration.

This grain is available for ordering now, in carload lots, and the prices net are as follows: Barley $28.00 per ton, oats $30.00 per ton, and feed wheat according to grade. Few farmers can store a car load, but there is no reason why a group cannot easily make up the amount.

The American market is bidding higher than our ceiling prices, and let us act now, while the grain is available, and take advantage of the Federal and Provincial subsidies.

It is the patriotic duty of every farmer not to sacrifice breeding stock, but to keep up his production and not allow the 1944 quota of food-stuffs to be lowered. Hastings County has always been to the fore, so let us maintain its high standard and see the global struggle through to a successful conclusion.

Mr. Fair of Stirling, the Agricultural Representative, will give all the details, either personally, or by correspondence. He has already written to the presidents of all cheese factories, and secretary treasurers of all school sections in the County of Hastings, pointing out the need for action, at once.

We do not wish anyone to be unaware of this situation, and to be in a position to state that had they known, they might have planned differently.

This is the people's war, we are all in it, and let us all do our part.

Thanking you for permitting me to bring this critical phase of farm production to the attention of your readers,

I am.
Yours truly.
Roscoe Vanderwater.
Secretary-Treasurer Hastings County, Federation of Agriculture.

Reports out of Germany to neutral countries, too, have indicated that something of a bombshell is in the wind, and there appears much doubt that Germany herself is in any position at the moment to strike effectively.

Brownrigg pointed out that for a year "Japan has done little to help Germany" and then asked:—

"Is not now the moment for the idle armies of Japan in Manchuria to do their stuff — to make Stalin take his eye off the European ball, to make him falter in his offensive and is it not in Japan's own interest to strike while Germany still stands?"

(Although there will be no Russian representation at the Quebec conference, a CBS London correspondent broadcast that he believed "a high-ranking Russian" would reach London in September and "be empowered to negotiate on matters of the greatest importance." There was no official confirmation.

CANADIAN-BRITISH WAR PARLEY HELD IN QUEBEC

Quebec, Aug. 13 — With new Russian and Allied advances under way, British and Canadian war leaders met at Quebec's Chateau Frontenac Wednesday in a mood of friendly cheerfulness. Prime Minister Mackenzie King was the first one to shake hands with Mr. Churchill as he stepped from his car. Introduced to the Canadian Cabinet, Britain's Prime Minister stood with them for a few moments on the steps smiling and waving at the crowd. LEFT to RIGHT: Air Minister "Chubby" Power, Mr. Churchill, Naval Minister Angus L. Macdonald, Mr. King, Sir John Anderson, M.P., Mines and Resources Minister T. A. Crerar, Finance Minister J. L. Ilsley and Defence Minister J. L. Ralston. — (National Film Board Photo).

official position to be accorded to the French Committee for National Liberation, headed by Gen. Charles deGaulle and Gen. Henri Giraud.

Canada Vitally Interested

While no official source would comment on the French problem, there was reason to believe that Canada — with a large French-speaking population, concentrated chiefly in Quebec province — is vitally interested in the handling of the matter.

This week's conferences between Mr. Churchill and Mr. King are considered to be of the utmost importance to the Dominion, but the general impression is that they are separated to some degree from "the Quebec Conference."

Discussion now being held among British, Canadian and some American military authorities—the leading American officers had not arrived last night — are considered to be of a preliminary nature.

Not Equal Party

It was recalled that during the last session of the Canadian Parliament, Mr. King told the House of Commons in a reference to the Casablanca conference that Canada—as only one of more than 30 united nations—could not expect to be an equal party with the United States and Britain at meetings between Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt to which all the United Nations were not invited.

There has been no indication that this conference is different from the five which have preceded it in this respect. To most observers here the fact the conference is being held in Canada is incidental—that this Quebec meeting is one of the wartime series of Roosevelt-Churchill conferences and that primarily it is a United Kingdom-United States affair.

Mr. Churchill—and probably Mr. Roosevelt, too—are certain to keep in close touch with Mr. King, their host at the citadel. That much is taken for granted. But the concensus is that the big decisions will be matters for the British Prime Minister and the President, in consultation with their combined chiefs of staff.

It was noted, in this respect, that the original official announcement of Mr. Churchill's arrival on this side of the Atlantic referred specifically to "discussions" with Mr. King and to a later "conference" with President Roosevelt and the combined chiefs of staff of the United States and the United Kingdom.

That some joint British-American-Canadian sessions may be held was considered a probability, however.

ted to rent to another party or sell within a year of getting possession without first obtaining a permit from a rentals appraiser.

These permits, the Board said, will be granted where, through a change in the landlord's circumstances during the year, hardship would result otherwise. Provision is made for applications for increased maximum rentals where the annual rental is less than twice the total of taxes and water rates payable by the landlord.

The order provides that tenants may be dispossessed for three reasons — personal occupancy by the landlord or members of his immediate family; a division of the accommodation so it will house more people; and obnoxious behaviour by tenants or their sub-tenants.

No Evictions in Winter

The revised order provides a 10 per cent increase in maximum rental where the tenant is sub-letting more than two rooms. Applications for increases of maximum rental also may be made if the rental of any unit in a multiple family dwelling is less than the rental generally prevailing for similar units in the same building, or if the landlord spends 10 per cent or more of the assessed value of the accommodation for reservations.

If a landlord desires accommodation as a home for at least a year for himself, his father, mother, son, daughter or daughter-in-law — the last because of the number of women whose husbands are overseas — he must give his tenant a minimum six months' notice to vacate.

"But eviction," the Board's announcement said, "cannot take place in the winter in the case of a monthly lease. Special forms are provided by the Board for these notices, and the accommodation must not be sold or rented during the one year without the rentals appraiser's permission.

MILAN AND TURIN

nights, had been bombed 67 times previously, the last time in May.

Part of the German capital's population is being evacuated in anticipation of the forthcoming assaults, and air raid trenches are being constructed hurriedly within the city to supplement the inadequate shelters. The government itself is reported to be preparing to leave the capital.

Turin, with its Fiat aero engine factories, the Italian Royal Arsenal and chemical and other factories, has been bombed 30 times before.

Milan, one of Italy's most heavily defended cities, is the site of the Caproni Aircraft Works, the Breda Armament Works, tire factories and aircraft engine factories. Great damage already had been caused in nine previous raids, the last on Saturday night.

Following that raid reports from the Italian frontier said crowds paraded in the streets with renewed demands for peace.

The British announcement said that both Italian attacks were well concentrated.

Dispatches from the Swiss border said the raiders were over Milan for more than an hour and that explosions could be heard plainly and a glow lit up the skies.

Milan was the principal target of the great force of bombers.

Big planes from the Canadian bomber group participated in the smash at Milan, it was learned, while other Canadians, notably those serving with the R.A.F. Stirling squadrons, flew on a raid against Turin, also in Northern Italy.

Berlin also was attacked during the night, the communique announced. Thirteen bombers were reported missing from the night's operations.

The German capital was attacked by speedy Mosquito bombers.

Industries Objectives

Industries and communications of Milan, Italy's second largest city and chief industrial centre, were the objectives of the heavy raid on that city, the Air Ministry report said, and first reports showed that both the Italian attacks were well concentrated.

Swiss reports said the hour-long assault on the Northern Italy city resulted in explosions that could be heard on the border and the glow of raging fires could be seen plainly.

British intruder planes struck at the continent last night, attacking Axis shipping and airports in France, it was announced.

The night raids followed daylight attacks on three German Ruhr and Rhineland cities yesterday by American heavy bombers.

2 Canadian Bombers Missing

Two of the Canadian bombers raiding Milan failed to return to their bases.

At the same time R.C.A.F. fighters on intruder patrol attacked, without loss, airfields in northern France.

The daylight raids were directed at synthetic oil plants at Gelsenkirchen and Wesselring and industrial targets at Bonn.

Providing protection for the big planes were R.A.F., R.C.A.F. and other Allied fighters, with a Canadian squadron being credited with downing one Messerschmitt. It was shared by Wing Cmdr. J. E. Johnson, English leader of the squadron and Flt. Lt. Walter Conrad, of Bedford, Que.

That pair also shared one damaged, while Flt. Lt. R. D. Phillip of Toronto damaged two others.

Britain Raided

German planes hit back at England last night, bombing the coastal district of East Anglia and causing some damage, it was announced. There were no reports of casualties.

During R.A.F. night sweeps across the channel, 19 locomotives were shot up by intruder patrols and two enemy vessels, a mine sweeper and an E-boat were sunk by fighter-bombers in the Dover Strait, the Air Ministry news service announced.

One Mosquito pilot penetrating inland as far as the Rhone Valley damaged eight locomotives and caused one entire train to explode.

Airfields at Dijon and Saint Dizier and blast furnaces near St. Omer were bombed.

IN MEMORIAM

LANG — In loving memory of Mrs. Hilda B. Lang, who passed away August 13th., 1942.

In sorrow we waited day by day,
And watched her suffering there;
Slowly but surely passing away
From the pain she scarce could bear.
And then God called from His throne above,
Her suffering and pain is past.
We know she has gone to realms of love,
And in Heaven has peace at last.

Canadians Guard King And Queen

By DOUGLAS AMARON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Somewhere in England, Aug. 13 —(CP Cable) — Canadian infantrymen and anti-aircraft gunners helped guard the country estate at which the King and Queen spent five days recently with the Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose, it was disclosed today.

It was not the first time Canadians have taken over the Royal Guard for the Dominion's troops were previously posted at both Buckingham Palace and Windsor Castle.

During their stay the Canadians were quartered on the estate and many of them met Their Majesties personally.

On the Sunday before they returned to London, the King and Queen inspected the Guard, the Gunners and a company from a Central Ontario Irish Battalion. The Princesses accompanied Their Majesties as they walked through the ranks, talking with many of the troops.

Sgt. F. Pearse of Cobourg was one of the Gunners to whom the Queen spoke. Her Majesty also chatted with L.Sgt. Robert Davis, an Irishman who lived in Sudbury, Ont., from 1936 until he came overseas.

Quebec Spotlight

By J. F. SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Quebec, Aug. 13 —(CP)— Walking down St. Jean Street, with ears open:—

Rumor Department — For days, Quebec has known all about this conference. For instance; The Pope is coming with a peace offer from the Badoglio Government in Italy. . . . A barber down the street definitely and positively shaved Joseph Stalin. . . . "Maybe Stalin isn't coming but know for sure that Molotov will be here." . . . and, of course, Chiang Kai-Shek will make it four. . . . The King and Queen, the Princesses and the whole government of Britain, together with all members of the House of Commons and House of Lords are moving to Quebec which will become the headquarters of the British Commonwealth. . . . The Allies are going to hold their first public trial of a war criminal: Mussolini.

Yes, all this in Quebec — the rumor-mongers said it.

A Contrast — The last big day in Quebec's long and storied history was the arrival here of the King and Queen in 1939 to start their tour of Canada and the United States. When they arrived, a newsroom functioned on the dock, cameras clicked and lights flashed —every moment was a story.

When Prime Minister Churchill arrived in Quebec last Tuesday, not a newspaperman was present, there were no pictures, no radio descriptions — all in the name of security. A laconic communique told the world—but you couldn't prove it among the 150 newspapermen assembled in Quebec who had been kept at a distance.

The Press Room — Walking through the lobby of the Claredon Hotel, among newspapermen from many parts of the world, drawn to Quebec by the conference:—

There's Frank Noel, Associated Press photographer, telling of being torpedoed by a Japanese submarine in the South Pacific and six thirst-tortured days in a lifeboat.

And there's the American newspaperman who is trying to figure out how he can hire one of Quebec's famous caleches, take a ride around the city and get away with it on his expense account.

Native Bearers Ease White Man's Burden, Including Airmen, In India

(By Staff Reporter)

"Bearer!"

From Bombay to Chittagong, from Karachi to Trichinopoly, throughout the length and breadth of India, and down into Ceylon, you hear that cry a hundred times a day. Like as not it will be an LAC. of the R.C.A.F., who does the shouting.

For in India, bearers, as native servants are called, come cheap and veterans in this theatre of war, will tell you that it's a positive saving of money to hire a bearer. Salaries vary considerably from place to place and have jumped about 500 per cent since the war, but on the average a bearer gets about 10 to 13 dollars in Canadian money. Shared between several airmen the cost becomes negligible.

General Factotum

An Indian bearer is pretty much of a general factotum. He will wash your hair, book theatre tickets, sew on buttons and darn socks, send out your laundry, fan you when the heat is close and humid, serve your meals, shine shoes and buttons. A personal bearer is your surest precaution against being overcharged by the native merchants. He will know just how much to tip a coolie; if your shoes are wearing thin he will diplomatically suggest he knows of a good place in the bazaar where you can get new ones cheap; and he will make certain that you are smartly turned out at all times. Bearers take a personal interest in the appearance of their masters.

Your native bearer is usually newly-christened when he enters the service of some officer or airman. Indian names are often tongue-twisting, and so many of them are called Ali that confusion tends to set in. At one RAF station, for example, there are a couple of bearers who answer to the names of Wellington and Napoleon.

Simplifies Travelling

Bearers do not as a rule carry anything. On a journey with his master, a bearer will hire a porter to carry the baggage, his own included. But when you travel, it's wise to take your bearer along. He will travel in a special servants' compartment and at way stations where you couldn't even find a glass of water he will pop up with a steaming cup of tea.

He will keep your thermos filled with reasonably pure and cool water and make up your bed at night. (On Indian trains there are no sleeping cars as such. You carry your own bed-roll, sheets and blankets, and open it out on the seat.)

The White Man's Burden weighs lightly—even on LAC's.—in India, and many a wife or mother may find her Johnny making unheard-of demands for service when he comes marching home.

WARNING
COAL WILL BE SCARCE NEXT WINTER !!!

Prepare your home now for adequate warmth with smaller fuel consumption

TO SAVE COAL CHECK THESE POINTS

✓ HOW TO GET MORE HEAT
Pipes and furnaces must be clean, and grates in good order. If one or two rooms are hard to heat, you are wasting fuel. A minor adjustment can probably remedy this. Have a competent man check your heating system, and make necessary repairs. Insulate your furnace and pipes where necessary.

✓ HOW TO AVOID HEAT LOSSES
Storm windows and doors must fit snugly and be weatherstripped. Lack of storm windows can cause as much as 20% heat loss. Caulking should be done around windows, doors and in cracks in brick work (some hardware stores have caulking guns for rent). Broken glass should be replaced, and loose panes puttied. Small expenditures on such work will save much fuel.

✓ HOW TO SAVE STILL MORE
You can save fuel and money by having your home properly insulated. It is a proven fact that in many homes lack of adequate insulation (including storm windows) results in unnecessary consumption of fuel—up to as much as 50%. Watch for later instructions on how to fire your furnace properly.

HAVE YOUR HOME INSPECTED FOR HEATING AND INSULATION DEFECTS

Get advice now! Skilled workmen and supplies are scarce. If you delay in getting your home ready for winter you may not be able to get the services you need.

In Old Quebec

To travel from Britain that was an embattled citadel of the freedom of the world in those years, when Britain stood alone against the Nazi aggressor, to the historic citadel of Quebec, the fortress towering above the St. Lawrence River which was and has been known as the Gibraltar of America is the latest experience of Britain's wartime Premier. In this historic area so rich in memories of the French and British people of Canada he and President Roosevelt will again meet to further their design for Allied victory. Such a leader as Mr. Churchill who knows what fortitude of the British people meant in the blitz period can understand how much Canadians regard this citadel.

It is fitting in these momentous days that Canada's Prime Minister should conduct the affairs of the Dominion as well as take part in the great conference of the Allied leaders. In this spot will be discussed the plans which will lead to the liberation of old France from the oppression of the Germans. Quebec first came to prominence in the days of the French regime and was the centre of New France in that day. Still dear to Frenchmen the world over is this city in a province where live a large number of people of the French race. Here these people are enjoying the fruits of Canadian democracy while across the sea the land of their forefathers has been under the heel of the German Nazis. It is no wonder that the people of French Canada and the people of the Frehch Republic will attach much significance to the gathering in the old city, one of the oldest in the New World.

It is a pleasing gesture of the great democratic leaders to hold this momentous gathering in the Dominion for the New World has assumed its part in helping to crush the tyranny of Germany, Italy and Japan. Here it is hoped will be drafted the final plans which will bring the peace and security for which the world yearns.

Liberation in Sicily

The freeing of 2,000 Italian political prisoners in Sicily is a mark of the democracy of the Allied Nations. It will have a potent effect on the peoples of Europe. These prisoners had offended the regime of Mussolini, the tyrant, who ruled with a brutal and cruel sway once the Fascist grip had been laid upon the country. As the Detroit Free Press points out, "they were imprisoned without even the semblance of an impartial trial. Sicilian dispatches tell of the cruel and brutal treatment accorded them in prison, adding: 'This was the moment that all anti-Fascist Italians had been waiting for twenty years.'

"It is for such comparable moments that all Europe waits. The event is testimony to the reason for calling United Nations forces armies of liberation."

The liberation of these prisoners took place with the ease with which the democracies rule.

Truly to the opponents of Mussolini and of his hirelings and to these men brave enongh to defy Mussolini and Fascism the event is one that can never fade from their memories. For the first time in twenty years these people have found the way of freedom and it is given by the United Nations leader.

Axis Withdrawals

How different a picture Italy and Germany present today to what they presented in the heyday of Axis glorification of the use of power. Today the "supermen" of the north, the Nazi Germans are trying to extricate themselves from Sicily across the narrow Strait of Messina to the Italian mainland.

On the Allied battlefront Canadian troops can now see the shores of continental Italy.

On the Russian front the Germans are backing up without their summer offensive ever attaining anything of note, except that it failed. The Russians are pressing home the blows against the Germans.

From the point of view of morale of the Germans this can only be a weakening factor. It means the loss of ground once gained and it suggests further loss of ground. In Italy it means loss of Axis territory.

It should take more than Goebbel's propaganda talks to make the Germans satisfied. These withdrawals are a sign of Germany losing strength and deteriorating.

Demand for Bibles

(Saturday Review)

Paper manufacturers express increasing concern over the precipitate drop in pulpwood inventories, which the declining at a rate exceeding 130,000 cords per month. Pulpwood is the basic ingredient of all paper.

One place where the ten percent paper cut already in effect and an enormously increased public demand have crashed head-on is in the production of Bibles. Bible manufacturers are rationing orders already on hand, and many of them are refusing to accept any new orders for the balance of the year . . . One successful publisher figured that he could have eliminated his entire 1943 list, and by devoting his full paper allotment to the production of simply bound and printed Bibles, made twice the profit that he now expects to show! . . .

Dan McGrew

Robert W. Service, who immortalized the shooting of Dan McGrew, is fed up with his most-quoted masterpiece. He has been reciting it on a tour of U. S. army camps so often that he never wants to hear it again. Inspiring The Chicago News to say:

"Mr. Service's plight is nothing new. Many an artist has come to hate the early mediocrities that won him fame. With the passage of the years the artist grows in stature, in the perfection of his art, and in the standards by which he judges his own work and the work of others. Looking back, he cringes and shudders at his early solecisms, and wonders how he ever could have produced such drivel; and there it is to haunt him to the grave and perhaps beyond.

"If Mr. Service, and any other—or all—of the reciters of 'The Shooting of Dan McGrew' want to stop reciting, the least the rest of us can do is to put no obstacles in their path."

My Son is a Soldier

(Financial Post)

When Mrs. Roosevelt was over in England, she also visited Ireland. After she had spoken somewhere, an elderly lady came up to shake hands.

"I hope your sons who are serving," said the lady, "will all come home safely."

"Have you any relatives in the war?" asked Mrs. Roosevelt.

"Yes," was the answer. "I have a son who is a soldier in the Middle East."

"May I ask your name?" said Mrs. Roosevelt as a gesture of courtesy.

"Montgomery," was the reply.

It was Lady Montgomery, the mother of the Eighth Army's commander.

To reach perfection we must be made sensible of our failings, either by the admonitions of friends or the invectives of enemies. — Diogenes.

DREAMERS

I wonder will it happen that men will some day find
The way to peace and beauty and the joy of being kind?
And will they in the future some selfish end to gain
Reflect for just a moment to count its cost in pain?

I know that greed is human; I know that sin is mine!
And yet I'm also certain that mortals are divine.
And if we may be angels when bonds of flesh we leave
Why now to all their passions must men so stoutly cleave?

The cynics call us dreamers for thinking peace can last.
They say that wars will happen whatever laws are passed
They saw that man is cruel and stained with greed and lust
And weak are they and foolish who think he can be just.

But still the hope we cling to that some day man will learn
The way to gentler living and from old hatreds turn.
Oh, can the dream be hopeless which holds to what is good
And trusts men to discover the way to brotherhood

Boy Burglars; Rich Homes

(From the Cleveland Plain Dealer)

Accustomed as we have become to associating juvenile crime with poverty, poor housing conditions and lack of economic and recreational opportunity, we are nonplussed by the news of the arrest of seven Shaker Heights boys for wholesale burglary.

All seven, we are told, come from well-to-do families; the section in which they live has some of the finest homes in the community, their schools are supposed to be among the best in the country, and their recreational opportunities are of the widest variety.

There is, however, one way in which juvenile life in Shaker Heights and others of the wealthy sections of the community is much the same as that in the so-called blighted areas. In neither section is there a superabundance of parental supervision.

Persons familiar with young night life in the suburbs haven't much reason to be very surprised by the burglary story. They should have been prepared for it by such sights as 12 and 13-year-olds shooting craps with sizeable bank rolls on the sidewalks in front of suburban taverns at midnight; 15 and 16 year-olds joyriding in cars, oblivious of the war in which many of their elder brothers are fighting; grammar school boys "swiping" goods from neighborhood store counters as a lark.

We don't say the parents are entirely to blame for all this, but we believe a good deal of it would be eliminated if every parent prescribed a reasonable curfew for his offspring.

Jap Cruiser Met Violent End

(By ART BURGESS)
(Associated Press Correspondent)

Aboard the Flagship of a Naval Task Force, Aug. 7 (Delayed) —A light American naval force of "Jack the Giant Killers" sank at least four Japanese warships today in one of the most daring attacks of the war.

The United States ships steamed right into the enemy's stronghold in Vella Gulf in the Solomons and destroyed one cruiser and three destroyers; I was the only war correspondent aboard the flagship of the American task force.

(General Douglas MacArthur's communique of August 8 said one cruiser and two destroyers were definitely sunk and a third destroyer "probably so," in a battle which started shortly before midnight of August 6. And, it added we sustained no losses.)

From the bridge deck and the direction platform above, I had an unopposed view of the entire battle in the narrow gulf between strong Japanese bases on Kolombangara and Vella Lavella Islands.

I saw the Japanese cruiser, a three-stacker with an airplane hoist, explode soon after it was hit by torpedoes and shells from our ships in the waters northwest of famed Munda airfield on New Georgia Island.

The cruiser, standing broadside to us, first caught fire in her bow from torpedoes and when our gun batteries opened upon her in a masterful naval tactical manoeuvre, I saw additional fire break out followed by a terrifying explosion.

The blast sent flames thousands of feet in the air, enabling me to take down notes as if under a hundred watt lamp. The fire— in sheets of yellow, orange and red —spread over the water, lighting up the channel from shore despite overcast weather.

Many Shells Find Their Mark

Then a Japanese destroyer hovered into sight directly in front of the burning cruiser, making it stand out as a perfect target. It gave us a good idea, too, how big the cruiser was.

When salvo after salvo had been fired into her by several United States ships, all of which were changing course from time to time, the enemy cruiser went up into the air like a Texas bronco. Then she plunged down and sank within a few minutes.

Meanwhile, torpedoes from our force hit two other Japanese ships, one of which also exploded. The other was burning from stem to stern when we left one hour and twenty minutes later.

The battle opened shortly after midnight of August 6. The sky was overcast. A light rain had been falling a little earlier but had stopped. The horizon lightened slightly.

The enemy ships were proceeding in a direction opposite to ours and at slower speed, indicating they might have been preparing to drop anchor and land reinforcements.

This flagship carried the fight to the enemy all the way. After leading our forces into Vella Gulf the flagship held its fire, closing out range.

None of United States Ships is Hit

We changed course to speed around the enemy. Other members of the task force who had been trailing us then opened fire and drew a return fire, apparently from enemy destroyers and what appeared to be shore batteries.

Within a few minutes our flagship had come around the Japanese, catching them flat-footed in crossfire from another section of the channel. I don't believe the enemy ever knew our ship was there in the attacking force until that moment.

I could see our tracers penetrate one enemy ship with deadly accuracy. None of our ships received a single hit or casualty.

Enemy shell fire was way off beam in most cases. Our ship received only two near misses, one of which we saw fall behind the stern. Several torpedoes missed us, one coming within a few yards of the bow, but masterful handling of the ship kept us away from it.

For miles afterward we could see fires and sometimes flames shooting across the water rapidly as blazing oil sticks joined. Near the end we moved in close to the other ships and attempted to pick up survivors. There were dozens of them in the dark water. Flames and smoke drove us back.

We did not fire star shells as the Japanese did, but both sides sent tracer bullets criss-crossing the channel in scores of fiery streaks. We stayed in the battle area until 1.25 a.m., August 7th.

"For Services Rendered"

(From the London, Eng., Star)

"By grace and favor," Mrs. Kennedy, the widow of the heroic captain of the merchant cruiser Rawalpindi, has become one of the tenants of Hampton Court. She is already in occupation.

There is always a long waiting-list for this highly-prized privilege, which is offered to men who have given notable public service, or to their widows.

I paid a visit to the Palace today, that faded rose and white pile so rich in memories of Wolsey, Henry VIII, Charles I, William and Mary, George III and Victoria. Despite the war, it is still open to the public, and today there were hundreds of visitors searching for Henry VIII's wine cellar and Royal bedrooms and the maze, or walking through the grounds which "lady gardeners"—they are not called "land girls" at Hampton Court—are keeping in such beautiful order.

For the moment I was more interested in "the private apartments"; they are not known as "flats" or even "suites." They are self-contained and quite up to date.

In many cases they are on the ground floor; but in others there are lifts and electric lighting and heating and hot water and baths, and are as modern as in a West End flat. Tenants can add any equipment they like and entertain as often as they wish.

It was Sir Philip Sassoon, one of the officials told me, who abolished the ugly iron pipes, running round many of the rooms, and set up modern heating system.

Lord Birdwood, the famous general of the last war, is a tenant. He has the apartment occupied by Lady Jane Seymour when Edward VI was born.

The ghost of her nurse is said to appear now and then — the neglectful nurse who attended her when she died in childbirth. I gather that the general has not seen it.

In days gone by, designing courtiers used to bribe Palace officials to get them accommodation, which they often sublet at a handsome profit. It was Queen Victoria who saw to it that every allotment of accommodation was made under the personal supervision of the Sovereign.

JEWISH CONVERTS

It is possible for a Christian or other gentile to become a Jew in the religious sense.

The attitude of Jews toward proselyting is explained in the following statement prepared a few years ago by the U. S. Bureau of the Census:

"The Jewish religion recognizes two classes of proselytes; a proselyte of the gate is one who abandons idolatry and accepts instead the seven Noachian laws of humanity, and a proselyte of righteousness is one who submits to the Abrahamic rite and becomes a full member of the House of Israel. No distinction whatever is drawn between a born Jew and a proselyte of righteousness. In former centuries the Jews carried on an extensive proselytizing propaganda; later the Christian church prevented it. But whether as a result of that interference or not, proselytizing activities have since been neglected.

In Esther 8:17 it says that "many of the people of the land (Persia) became Jews.

Some years ago Abram Simon, a prominent rabbi, gave the author this statement on the subject:

"The citation in the book of Esther indicates the lateness of its composition, when seeking and accepting converts was a common practice in ancient Israel. When the New Testament says, 'They compass land and sea to seek one convert,' you get a glimpse into a very militant Jewish proselytizism. The persecution of the church and state for the past eighteen centuries has choked off the proselytizing spirit in Israel. However, new Jews are welcome today in the Jewish communion. The Reform or Liberal wing asks for the voluntary acceptance of, and familiarity with, the Jewish religion and a willingness to bear the burdens and the responsibilities of Israel and to rear children in the tenets of the Jewish faith. The Orthodox group still insist, besides, upon submission to the rite of circumcision.

Baptism as it is understood by Christians is not practiced by the Jews. An ancient Jewish rite known as Jewish baptism, or proselyte baptism bears a striking similarity to Christian baptism, although it differs somewhat in significance. When a pagan became a convert to Judaism he was compelled, after submitting to circumcision, to go through a purificatory washing, which symbolized the removal of all pagan impurity. No stranger who sojourned among the people of Israel could become completely one of them without complying with this rite, and Orthodox Jews still require it when gentiles become converts to Judaism.

WEDDINGS

TAYLOR—DAVIS

A quiet but charming wedding took place in St. George's Chapel, Trenton, on Thursday, August 12, at 2 p.m., when the Rev. J. L. Hutchinson united in marriage Ormah Bernice Davis, daughter of Mr. John Davis, of Trenton, to Frederick John Taylor, son of Mrs. Taylor and the late S. B. Taylor, also of Trenton.

Given in marriage by her brother, Pte. John Davis, of Kingston, the bride was wearing a striking two-piece afternoon frock of rose wool with navy accessories and shower bouquet of roses and bouvardia.

Mrs. E. S. Smith, of Cannifton, the bride's only attendant, was attired in a lovely turquoise blue ensemble with navy accessories and corsage of red roses.

Little Miss Suzanne Smith was a dainty and winsome ring-bearer. The groomsman was Mr. E. S. Smith, of Cannifton.

For the reception at the home of the groom's mother, the bride and groom, assisted by the latter's mother, received the guests. The bride selected for travelling to Western Ontario an earth brown ensemble with matching accessories and corsage of red roses. Upon their return they will reside in Trenton.

SESSIONS—SINE

Beneath an arch of evergreens, banked with gladioli, phlox and potted flowers, a pretty wedding was solemnized on Wednesday, Aug. 4th, by the Rev. Oscar Wagar, when Eva Mildred, only daughter of Mrs. Percy Sine, of Harold, Ont. became the bride of Cpl. Wilfred Sessions R.C.A.F., son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Sessions, of Sperling, Man.

The bride, given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. John Weese, was wearing a gown of white sheer with finger-tip veil and carrying a bouquet of red roses and sweet peas.

Miss Keitha Weese, as bridesmaid wore pale blue chiffon and carried a bouquet of roses. Mr. Nathan Sine, brother of the bride, was best man.

During the signing of the register, Mrs. Percy Rollins sang "I Love You Truly."

The bride's mother received in a navy sheer dress with corsage of roses and sweet peas.

A buffet luncheon was served to about fifty guests. The couple left by train on Friday for Winnipeg and Sperling, Man.

SHARPE—COX

Gladioli and asters formed the floral setting for a pretty wedding Wednesday afternoon, August 4, at three o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Cox, Murray township, when their daughter, Nellie Gertrude Cox, Trenton, became the bride of Pilot Officer Robert Cavell Sharpe, MacDonald, Man., son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Sharpe, Deseronto. Rev. J. F. Lane, of Wellington officiated and Miss Vera Maybee played the wedding music.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was lovely in her white street-length jersey dress with shoulder-length veil caught to her hair with small hand-made flowers and corsage of red American Beauty roses. The bridesmaid, Miss Stella Cox, sister of the bride, wore a white street-length dress and corsage of Talisman roses. Lloyd Thompson, of Frankford was groomsman.

Following the ceremony, the bride's mother received in a gown of grey figured crep with corsage of red roses. She was assisted by the groom's mother wearing black and white with corsage of pink roses.

Later the happy couple left for Toronto and Niagara Falls, the bride travelling in a blue figured two-piece crepe dress with white accessories. Pilot Officer Robert Cavell Sharpe and Mrs. Sharpe will reside at MacDonald, Man.

WATT-GREER

A very pretty wedding of interest took place on Saturday, July 31st, when Mary Amelia Greer, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Hanson Greer, of Wellington, Ont., was united in marriage with Cpl. George Cuthill Watt, R.C.A.F., second son of Mr. and Mrs. John Turner Watt, of Hollyburn, West Vancouver. The ceremony was performed by Rev. F. H. Stevens in West Vancouver United Church, at the hour of 3 p.m.

The bride, who was given in marriage by Mr. A. N. Daykin, of Vancouver, cousin of the bride's mother, looked charming in a bridal gown of white satin with lace neckline and Peter Pan collar. The full skirt, falling to a short train was shirred at the long waistline and the sleeves fell in points over the wrist. A halo of white net edged with pearls held her chapel veil. She carried a bouquet of cream roses, sweet peas and maiden hair fern.

The bridesmaid, Miss Helen Sedgwick, of Nobel, Ont., carrying a Colonial bouquet of pink carnations and white and blue sweet peas, wore a pink chiffon dress with long lace bodice, over taffeta, a Mary Queen of Scots headdress of pink net and pink net gloves. Douglas C. Watt, brother of the groom, was best man.

The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion, the pews being marked with white heather and daisies and the altar arranged with sweet peas, gladioli, blue hydrangea and white phlox. The wedding march was played by Mrs. Gertrude Sheffield, organist of the church.

Later the reception was held at the home of the groom's parents, 880 Sinclair St., West Vancouver, where the groom's mother, in king's blue crepe trimmed with jet sequins, and shoulder corsage of carnations and Mrs. Daykin, in a black and white ensemble, received the guests.

The bride chose for her going away costume a Queen's blue silk jersey with stitched navy beret, navy accessories and camel's hair coat. A short honeymoon was spent at Harrison, Hot Springs, B.C. Many beautiful wedding gifts were received.

WAAF's Overseas Measure Up Well To the Many Demands Made on Them

Very shortly the Women's Division of the R.C.A.F., will celebrate its first anniversary of arrival overseas. Most of the original draft's "old reliables" are still at headquarters, well accustomed to the ways of London, and a tower of strength to newcomers. They nip through the blackout as though they were walking down Main Street on Dominion Day. They no longer translate £.s.d. into dollars and back. They are up to their eyes in work (which is just where they like to be), but always keen for first-hand news of what the W.D.'s are doing at home.

Living in Britain these many months, they have been able to see the widening scope of their branch of the service in Canada. Since their departure squadrons of airwomen have gone into every S.F.T.S., B.G.S., and Wireless School of the Air Training Plan there to operational training units, to flying instructors' schools, to headquarters from coast to coast, and to stations of coastal commands. They work not only in offices, kitchens, hospitals and equipment depots, but in hangars and control towers as well. Their yardstick has been that of the WAAF's achievement, and they are measuring up so well that the Chief of the Air Staff told them: "Soon we shall wonder how we managed to get along without you."

With the exception of that first small draft of office workers, the R.C.A.F. overseas has had to get along without them till February of this year, when detachments of other trades began arriving for duty with Bomber Group. Canadian women and English wives of Canadians are enlisting to work with them and the posting overseas of the division's top-ranking officer points to the size of its task and proposed strength on this side of the Atlantic.

Slowly but surely they are fitting into the new life of a station in Britain. It may be strange at the start, but Canadian airwomen are adaptable and the old pioneer spirit holds good. They are out to justify the faith of those who know the need for their support in the theatre of war. They are also out to dispell the qualms of any Thomases who, in the face of the Canadian record, may still be able to doubt their efficiency.

The Marry-Go-Round

In Love With Two Girls?

Many a soldier or sailor is bothered by the question of which of two girls he loves, and would like to marry, before he leaves.

How happy he'd be "with either dear charmer, were t'other dear charmer away!" as the poet put it, long long ago. In fact, nearly every man has, at some time, imagined himself in love with two girls at the same time.

But this is as impossible as facing east and west at the same moment. The truth is that he is not in love with either of them, yet. He merely thinks them both adorable—and that is not love. To love a woman, it is not enough to think her adorable; you must find her indispensable!

"Never marry if you can possibly help it!" If you can't help it, you'll know it's love!

A well-known psychologist has said that no man can be wholly in love with two women at a time. He can only be half in love with one girl and fifty per cent in love with the other.

But how can even a psychologist be sure that a man can divide his heart up so exactly—just as the ice-cubes are divided in a refrigerator, or measured out scientifically like the ingredients in a cocktail?

Why couldn't a man be ninety-nine per cent in love with one girl and just one per cent dazzled or hypnotized by some breath-taking glamor girl or some little cutey he sees around the office, every day? Lots of men are. His problem is to discover "which is love" and which is merely a temporary infatuation or flattered vanity. He would find out very quickly if he were separated from both women for a few weeks.

The trouble is that it is so hard for the average man to distinguish between real love and dalliance, infatuation, or mere sex-attraction. That is what leads to so many of these hasty, unconsidered war-marriages, which often turn out tragically. Love is something deeper and harder to define than any of these passing emotions. You can be attracted by a dozen girls—but love cannot be divided and passed around like wedding-cake, or chocolate fudge.

Of course, many a man thinks he's one hundred per cent in love with a girl before he marries her, and finds he's only two per cent in love with her afterward. But that is his mistake—not his fault.

A man cannot be in love with two girls at a time. Because love is as definite and unequivocal as a mountain; and once love or a mountain has been disintegrated, it isn't love—or a mountain—any more.

When in doubt—don't marry! You may have heart enough to imagine that you love two women; but you should have brains enough to know that you don't!

Questions and Answers

This column is sponsored by the Regional Office Wartime Prices and Trade Board. Questions on price control, ration regulations and other Wartime Prices and Trade Board rulings should be mailed to the Information Branch, Wartime Prices and Trade Board, Victoria Building, Brockville, Ontario:

Q.—We live in a village and have always kept a pig or two for meat. Do we need to apply for a slaughtering permit?

A.—No, provided you do not raise more than two head of livestock of any kind within a year, and provided you kill such livestock, or have it killed for you, to furnish meat for your own family. You must, however, register with your Local Ration Board as a meat producer and surrender coupons for meat of your own kill which you consume. This surrender is at the rate of one coupon for every two pounds of meat so consumed. However, you are allowed to keep half your meat coupons falling due each month and may use these to buy other kinds of meat as required.

Q.—Can you tell me why chocolate bars seem to be so scarce?

A.—This is principally due to much increased demands for such bars to keep the armed forces supplied. It is considered only right that the sailors, soldiers and airmen should have first call upon the production of these commodities.

Q.—Is it true that I have to make a sworn statement before a justice of the peace or commissioner before I can get a ration book for my baby?

A.—No, if you are able to furnish a birth or baptismal certificate, your Local Ration Board will issue you with a ration book for your child.

Q.—Someone told me there was a new regulation about the sale of veal. What is it?

A.—A new regulation of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board prohibits the sale of any carcass of veal obtained from a calf less than three weeks old. This action has been taken so that veal unfit for human consumption may not enter the channels of trade.

Q.—Will I be given tea or coffee ration coupons in the No. 3 ration book for my son who will be 12 years old on August 20?

A.—Yes. All those 12 years old by September 1, 1943, will be entitled to receive tea or coffee rations in their No. 3 books which are to be issued by Local Ration Boards during the week of August 23.

Q.—Is any penalty provided for non-compliance with the regulation requiring landlords to file copies of the form R C-40 and to furnish their tenants with other copies when they contract a new or altered lease?

A.—Yes. The rental regulations provide for heavy penalties being imposed for such non-compliance and, as a matter of fact, several landlords in Eastern Ontario have been aready fined in police court for failure to file these forms.

Fashion Flashes

BE SURE to snag one of those simply cut, pure silk shantung frocks that are still available in some of the better shops. Such a dress, even if it is a little more expensive than the usual summer frock, will look just as beautiful next summer and summer after that.

A BICYCLE MADE FOR TWO IS out of style, but bicycle clips are still going on. Sprouting flowers and misted with veiling, they serve as hats atop some of the smartest and prettiest heads.

PINK ELEPHANTS march across a smart black woolknit sweater that is just the thing to wear with a velvet or crepe dinner skirt or with smart slacks. The elephants are appliqued to the long sleeved sweater.

MAYBE your wardrobe includes some of last year's smartly simple afternoon woolen frocks. A visit to the notion counter of your favorite store should reveal a host of trimmings for a rejuvenating job. Sequin collars and cuffs, jeweled flowers and buttons, jeweled belts, are out to give a new look to old frocks.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

FATHER'S ATTITUDE CAN DRIVE DAUGHTER INTO SEEING WRONG BOYS IN WRONG PLACES

I have known of so many tragedies resulting from the almost incredible failure of parents to recognize a fundamental fact; children grow up.

It is natural that when children grow up, become sixteen or seventeen, they have a desire for the companionship of those of the opposite sex. For parents to fail to realize this is folly. For if the parents do not see to it that their daughters have the opportunity to meet boys and enjoy wholesome relations with them, the daughters will inevitably meet boys covertly. Under such circumstances, the chances that they will meet the wrong kind of boys, and in the wrong places, are multiplied.

There is a more important aspect to the matter. Children must not be kept tied to the parental apron strings until they are grown, or they may become social misfits. They must be encouraged in the development of a wholesome social life that will bring them in contact with others of their age, and build up their personalities and self-reliance.

The erroneous attitude of many parents is typified by the following letter:

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I have the finest parents in the world except that my father has a bad case of maladjustment and arrested growth.

"He is all right, but allows me no freedom. I'm 17 years old, a high school graduate, but cannot have friends, even to the house. No dates, no parties, absolutely no fun.

"My mother is employed in a war plant, and I do all the housework —cook, make beds, scrub floors, etc. I'm well able to support myself, as I formerly was employed at extension radio work, accompanied always by my mother or father when I went out on call. I was forced to give it up, because neither of them could go any longer.

"I want to leave home, but my father says he'll interfere, and I suppose I would be stopped if I tried running away, as the age limit in this state is twenty-one. Mother urges me to wait a little longer, but they've been telling me that all along.

"I'm a nervous wreck. Please answer in your column, as mail (what there is of it) is intercepted. I'll be 18 in December.

F. R."

Seventeen is certainly not too young for girls to have beaux.

Isn't there someone who can reason with your father—a former teacher of yours, or perhaps the pastor of your church, or some friend in whom he has confidence?

Please do not leave home, as you threaten to do, in your letter. The fate of the girl who leaves home without a job or friends who will receive her in their home until her job materializes, is the fate of a leaf in a storm.

If this should happen to meet the eye of the parent who has inspired this letter, here's hoping he'll remember the days of his own youth, and he'll relent to the extent of allowing his daughter to see her friends in the safe haven of her own home.

FASHION FLASHES

NOT ALL the fur-lined coats are full length. Designed for the coming season is a short finger-tip jacket of black tweed with a lining of white South American lamb which also makes the collar, the notched revers and the narrowing front borders. Cuffs are pea-jacket style and there are big pockets.

LOOKING AHEAD to another cold and fueless winter, buyers are ordering smart evening sweaters. A black wool sweater has a grape design in large pearls beneath the high rounded neckline that is edged with narrow pipings of gold kid applique, the kidskin is also used for appliqued grape leaves.

SQUARE NICKELS CAUSE "CRISIS"

Curacao, Netherland West Indies, CP) — Somebody forgot to say to American soldiers "don't take any square nickel," and the soldier took so many this Dutch Island now has a shortage of its unique, four-cornered five-cent pieces. Now merchants seldom have nickels for change, and if they haven't enough pennies, they just don't give any small chage at all.

NAVY PARACHUTISTS

London (CP) — Royal Navy ratings are being trained as parachutists for us in combined operations. All volunteers, they are attached to an airborne division.

SNOBBERY TWO WAYS

Edinburgh (CP) — British people suffer from two forms of snobbery, it was recorded at the National Council of Labor. Citizens comfortably off frequently regarded the manual worker as an inferior while some manual laborers affected to despise the middle class because the latter did not work with his hands.

Freddie Vasil's 4-Hit Hurling And Tight Infield Work Gives Reliance Win Over No. 5 I.T.S.

Pryke's Crew Back in Running for City Softball Playdowns

SMART CONTEST

Freddie Vasil's four-hit pitching, plus some stellar infield work on the part of Reliance, kept "Spike" Pryke's Reliance nine in the City Softball Association playdowns last eventide at the Exhibition Grounds, when Reliance won a clean-cut 6-1 victory over No. 5 ITS. "Flyers", making the best-in-seven series stand at two games to one in favor of the Airmen today. The series continues next Tuesday.

Skipper Pryke's infield tightened up last night and carried the burden of the defence, but it remained to have Pitcher Freddie Vasil not only halt the driving Flyers with four hits, but also add much to his diamond prowess. Vasil limited the hard-hitting Airmen to four hits, no two of which came in any single inning. He whiffed four and again helped his cause by getting a timely hit, batting in a run and scoring the fourth run of the game, which is pretty much of a good night's chore for any softball hurler in these, or any other parts. Opposing Vasil was Bill Kuryluk, who was nicked for but nine singles, but four of them came in the fourth frame, when Skipper Pryke's nine cinched the piece with a quartette of runs.

No Scoring Till Fourth.

There was no scoring until the fourth frame when the veteran Murney Green paved the way with a single. Cy Barriage lined to Taube for an out and Ethier walked. Tuttle drove a hard one through second to score Green and after Tuttle singled, Ethier scampered home on Kerr's error at the plate and Tuttle scored on Vasil's sizzling line blast to give Reliance three runs. Muldoon bobbled Jim Barriage's drive and Vasil went to second and scored on Ted Henn's single to bring the inning's count to four for Reliance.

The Flyers' only counter of the game came in the fifth as the result of Kerr's opening single, a stolen base and a fielder's choice as Reliance were satisfied to protect their lead. To make sure of victory Cy Barriage and Gerald Ethier coupled hits in the bottom half of the fifth to score another Reliance run and Phil Loft added still another for good measure in the seventh after taking a walk and scoring on Ethier's one base blow.

Full credit must be given to Pitcher Freddie Vasil, who halted the heretofore hard-hitting Flyers and let them down with four scattered hits. Repeating, Vasil also fielded well, struck out four, and added to his prowess by wielding a potent bat. However, the Reliance infield tightened up strongly behind the yeoman efforts of Cy Barriage, who paced the victors defensively all evening and literally inspired Bill Whalen, Shud Ethier and Teddy Henn. Incidentally Whalen not only stood out with Barriage, but had the distinct fielding honor of retiring the side single handed in the third stanza, when every Flyer player went out into Whalen's big mitt.

Gignac Hits Triple.

The only extra base clout of the game went to Gignac, the Airmen's left fielder, who touched Vasil for a triple after one was down in the eighth. Tuttle and Whalen took care of the next two batters as Vasil was bearing down in championship style.

Gerald Ethier had a perfect night at bat, getting three single in as many times at bat and was followed by Cy Barriage, who not only clipped the spheriod for a brace of hits, but sparked the Reliance infield with his initiativeness.

Youthful Players From East Dominate Golf Tournament

(By The Canadian Press)

Youthful players from the east dominated the Women's Western Amateur Golf Tournament at Evanston, Ill., yesterday when Catherine Fox of Glen Ridge, N.J., and Dorothy Germain of Philadelphia qualified for the semi-finals.

Miss Fox, 18 years old, came from behind to wring victory from Marjorie Row, formidable Detroit player one up. Miss Germain, 19, had a comparatively easy day when she eliminated Miss Ann Casey of Mason City, Ia., 5 and 4. Prominent also was Miss Mary Wall of Menominee, Mich., after her surprise win over Miss Kay Byrne of Rye, N.Y., the previous day. But Miss Wall had to go all out to score one up in 18 holes in defeating Jeanne Cline of Bloomington, Ill.

[illegible] the Women's Western Open [illegible] and Miss Germain were semi-finalists in different brackets and both failed to reach the final stage. Today they meet each other.

In a dispersal sale at Keeneland track, Lexington, Ky., yesterday, Grand Slam, former turf champion now at stud, was sold for $75,000 to Henry Knight of Alamhurst Farm, Jessamine County, Ky. Eleven of Grand Slam's progeny won $107,700 in 1942.

Confessing they had used a battery on Tib in the third race at Washington Park Tuesday, jockey Bowman and former jockey Chester Jedlinski were yesterday fined $200 and costs in a Chicago police court. The fines were suspended when they said they were broke.

In a track and field program of 20 events at No. 4 R.C.A.F. Wireless School, Guelph, yesterday, the outstanding athlete proved to be M. W. O'Connor of Montreal who rolled up a championship total by winning the century, 220 and 440-yard dashes.

For the first seven days of the turf meeting at Stamford Park, Niagara Falls, opening Aug. 21, $30,000 in purses have been provided in the condition book, an increase of nearly $3,000 over last year. The first feature is the $1,200 inaugural handicap.

The Inter County Baseball Association has reached the seasonal stage where the organization of playoffs is necessary in the senior and intermediate "A" groups. London and Stratford seniors stand first and second while Galt and Waterloo are batting for third place. The fourth and fifth clubs in the final standing will play for the right to enter the O.B.A. intermediate "A" playdowns.

Ray Murray of Welland, Ont., won his 10th consecutive victory on the mound for No. 3 A.C.T. regiment in the Camp Borden Softball League yesterday when his team chalked up a 3-0 verdict against R.C.A.F. Depot. He allowed six hits.

In the last Quebec senior lacrosse game of the scheduled season at Valleyfield, the local Canadiens fell before Canadian Army by the score of 16-11 in a game that was fast and furious until the closing stages The soldiers now lead the loop.

The Wildcats of Hamilton, Ont., in the Senior O.R.F.U. held their first turnout last night under the direction of Coach Brian Timmis. There was no apparent dearth of material because 42 gridders engaged in a light workout.

PHILS THROWING A SMOKE SCREEN AROUND CONFLICT

Hold Seven-Game Win Streak, the First Time in a Decade

REDS TIE FOR SECOND

The Phillies are throwing a smoke screen around the conflict now going on in the National League.

The only thing of importance still to be decided in the senior circuit is second place, and this is the dispute which the Phillies, who are not concerned, are clouding up with their smoke.

Last night for the first time in more than a decade the Philadelphia National League ball club fashioned a seven-game winning streak.

They beat Pittsburgh Pirates for the third straight time 4-3 after the bold Buccaneers had taken a 3-0 lead and in spite of the fact that the Phillies were held to five hits, Ron Northey hit a two-run homer in the fourth and a cluster of three singles in the seventh produced two more runs.

It allowed Cincinnati Reds to continue in a tie for second place with the Pirates and so incensed the latter that Manager Frank Frisch, pitchers Bob Klinger and Hank Gornioki and infielder Al Rubeling all were banished from the game for protesting umpire Tom Dunn's judgment of a ball in the fourth inning.

Cincinnati, which came to Brooklyn two days ago in third place, lost its second successive game to the Dodgers 3-0, but thanks to the Phillies continued in the tie for second to which they advanced yesterday.

Johnny Vander Meer, who never has beaten Brooklyn in its own ball park since his second no-hitter in 1938, started for the Reds yesterday and except for the first inning pitched shutout ball. The only trouble was that in the opening frame he walked two men, usually reliable Eddie Miller made an error, and two singles followed for three runs. Kirby Higbe, pitching five-hit ball and eighth win.

Meanwhile, St. Louis Cardinals conquered New York Giants 4-1 with Mort Cooper pitching three-hit ball for his 16th triumph. One of the blows against him was Melt Ott's 15th home run.

Boston Braves again beat Chicago Cubs 3-2 in 12 innings on a triple by Elmer (Butch) Nieman and fine pitching by Al Javery.

In the American League New York Yankees turned the tables on St. Louis Browns after consecutive lop-sided setbacks and won a night game 6-2 behind rookie Charley Wensloff's six-hit hurling. Newsom, who hasn't won a game in six starts for the Browns, forced in two of New York's runs with walks.

Rudy York hit two home runs to bring his total to 21, matching his production for the entire 1942 season, as Detroit Tigers thumped Washington Senators 10-3 behind five-hit hurling by Hal White and Emmett O'Neill.

Lou Boudreau had a perfect turn at bat with four hits, two of them triples, as Cleveland nosed out Philadelphia Athletics 4-3 and Chicago White Sox divided a doubleheader with Boston Red Sox. Boston took the first game 10-6 with Bobby Doerr batting in three runs, two on a homer, but a triple by Luke Appling, in the 14th led to a 7-6 triumph for Chicago in the nightcap after Joe Cronin of Boston had hit his fifth pinch home run of the year.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

Two Irishmen had lingered overlong at their suds, and late in the evening had reached the bleary stage before they decided to attend the wake of a friend of one of the pair. Unsteadily they weaved down the street, finally making their way to the home of the departed. They walked into the candle-lit room. Bleary-eyed they peered about, and spied the outlines of a grand piano in the corner. Mistaking it for the casket, they staggered over and knelt in front of the keyboard. They stared at the "corpse" for a few moments and then one of the pair nudged his partner: "I didn't know your friend very well, but, faith an' bejabbers, didn't he have a fine set of teeth?"

Back in the Race

With Freddie Vasil hurling four-hit ball, the Reliance infield tightened up last sun-tide and soundly whipped No. 5 "Flyers" 6 to 1. The score about indicates the game as Vasil was never in trouble, despite Gignac's eighth inning triple following which Freddie gave a demonstration of his pitching prowess by making the following two batters pop out. Frankly Vasil was in his element to fire strong ball and was given strong support by the Reliance inner works. Cy Barriage paced the winners inside and sparked Ethier and Bill Whalen to the utmost. Besides retiring the side single-handed in the fourth, Whalen had 13 put-outs including the last two.

Getting back to Vasil, the score book shows he let the Flyers down with four hits, struck out four, helped himself to a hit, batted in a run and scored one for good measure, which isn't a bad night's work no matter how you look at it.

The Other Side

On the other side of the fence, FO. Warren has both Steve Borovitch and Bill Bancroft as pitchers to throw against the Reliance in their fourth meeting. The Flyers elected to pitch Kuryluk last night because he is leaving the local Initial Training School next week. Kuryluk had never beaten the Reliance this semester, but the gesture of FO. Warren must be commended.

The Flyers have Bancroft and Borovitch to toss against the Reliance next week and both are winning pitchers in the current series. True enough, Johnnie Bawden has tasted the bitter pill of defeat in two starts, but now Skipper Pryke is on the well known spot to know who to start in his next and most important struggle. Skipper Warren has two winners—Borovitch and Bancroft. Coach Pryke has Luffman, Anderson, Bawden and Vasil to do mound chores. Bawden has lost twice, Vasil won one but Anderson and Luffman are still in the barn.

All Straightened Out

The other day when Harry Rollins, vice-president of the O.A.S.A., learned that the No. 5 I.T.S. "Flyers" were competing in the Bay of Quinte R.C.A.F. softball loop, as well as the Belleville and District Association, Mayor Rollins bounced up to Wing Commander Snetsinger's bailiwick post haste to ascertain just where the Flyers stood, as it had previously been announced by the O.A.S.A. that the Bay of Quinte Service League had already affiliated with the parent provincial body. Without hesitation FO. Warren, sports officer at No. 5 I.T.S. assured Vice-President Rollins that the No. 5 "Flyers" had long ago elected to play-off in the Belleville series of the O.A.S.A.

However, the local Flyers are entered in the No. 1 Command R.C.A.F. softball playdowns that include only service teams. Last year Ft. Lt. Archie Green guided the No. 5 Flyers to the finals in this series, so let's hope they win full honors in 1943.

Petes Are At It

Harry Morgan, former Belleville hockey and baseball player, is the manager of the Peterboro' Basic Centre Soldiers' softball team that has advanced to the Liftlock City loop finals. The Soldiers are playing the 4th Battery (R) in the league finals, the first game being a 6-6 tie in a best-of-five series. Incidentally, Manager Morgan was thrown out from deep left field in an attempt to score the winning run in the last inning.

The 4th Battery nine lines up five of Peterboro's hockey team, Jim Ellis, who coached the Petes in the winter, plays first base; Art Heal, second; Les Burton left field; Eddie Starr is back behind the plate catching again; Honey Tompkins is trying his hand at softball and plays either third or outfield, while Don Crowe hits 'em hard and shags flies in the outer garden. Manager Harry Morgan must have slowed up lately, he's playing first base for the Soldiers.

Remember When—?

James J. Jeffries retained his world's heavyweight boxing title with a ten-round decision over James J. Corbett 40 years ago tonight. Jeffries, who had been Corbett's sparring partner in 1897, lost his title to Jack Johnson, first Negro titleholder, in 1910 after almost five years of idleness.

Daddy Wins

The responsibilities of becoming a poppa must have materially effected Ralph McCabe's pitching and for the better. Upon his recent return to Albany Ralph took over the Senator's pitching chores after Sid Goldstein had been knocked out of the box in the third by Springfield. McCabe only allowed the Rifles four hits from then in and was creditted with a 7-5 victory. On that day the Albany Senators climbed to within a half a game of second place in the Eastern League.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 145

By SAM GORDON

The Kibitzer

There is a right way and a wrong way to do almost anything. Even in bridge. Sometimes the wrong way comes out right in the end. That's what fools so many bridge players.

The right way is best oftenest. Horse Sense tells you the right way to bid in bridge. And strange as it seems to many, that right way is also the easiest.

You have this hand:

♠9 5 2
♥K 7 6 3
♣A Q 7 4

Your hand contains a biddable club suit and adequate support for a biddable heart suit. You also have four suit tricks.

Until he hears from you, partner counts on you for no more than two tricks. In your responses, each raise by you shows him one trick more than he expected before. Thus, you have two raises.

Suppose your partner starts with an opening bid of one heart. You have a takeout to clubs. You also have an assist for hearts. Which response do you select first?

Horse Sense tells you to select all bids in the order of choice guided by T-A-N; takeout, assist, no-trump. Thus, you know your correct first response is a takeout to two clubs.

Suppose partner then bids two spades or two diamonds. You have no more takeouts. So you are now ready for your assist. Your second round response is an assist in hearts.

When you responded first in clubs, there was no fear that partner might not learn about your heart response. A takeout to a new suit forced him to bid again. You can then show him your heart assist.

On the other hand, suppose you did wrong and first assisted his hearts. You might end up at the same final contract. But partner might never learn about your club suit.

Can some expert prove it is never necessary to show partner that club suit? He and who else?

LESSON NO. 146

Do you take this hand to be your lawfully accredited cards? Do you promise to love, honor, cherish and obey until hep to your pard. I now pronounce you a fan for life. And may the pasteboards have mercy on your goal.

You have this hand:

♠9 5 2
♥K 7 6 3
♣A Q 7 4

Your hand contains four suit tricks, three of which are no-trump tricks. A no-trump trick is any high card; an ace or king or queen. A suit trick is any high card or a short card.

Suppose partner starts with an opening bid of one spade. You have tricks enough for a responding bid in either a suit or no-trump. How do you know what your responses should be?

All bids follow the order of choice in T-A-N; takeout, first; assist, next; no-trump, last. So you know right quick that your first response is a takeout to two clubs, your biddable club suit.

Suppose your partner then bids two diamonds. Following T-A-N, you have no more takeouts. Nor have you support for an assist in either spades or diamonds.

So, the only bid left is no-trump, unless you pass. You must not pass. Because a takeout to a new suit is forcing for one round. Thus, your second round response is two no-trump.

Instead of one spade, suppose partner opened with one diamond. Your response would also be two clubs. And if partner then bid two spades, your second round response would also be two no-trump.

That's what you do with any hand. When you do not pass look first for a takeout to your own suit. With no takeout, look for an assist in a suit partner has bid. With no takeout or assist, bid no-trump.

Yes, indeed. The T-A-N rule in Horse Sense bridge is like a dial, or push button. Put your finger on the first one you have and out pops the correct bid.

How do you like Horse Sense bridge as far as you have gone? Or am I boring you?

AT THE BELLE

"China Girl"

One of the most powerful pictures to come out of the present times is now on the Belle theatre screen. Tensely dramatic, tightly woven together against a world teeming with fury and flame, 20th Century-Fox's "China Girl" commands attention from the first startling scene to its climactic closing.

Starring Gene Tierney in the title role, George Montgomery as a fighting, flying Yank who doesn't know when to quit, and Lynn Bari as Captain Fifi, curvaceous renegade, the fil mhas the indelible mark of one of Hollywood's outstanding writers and producers, Ben Hecht.

"Dixie Dugan" on Screen

"Dixie Dugan," the honey of the funnies, becomes the sweetheart of the screen as she goes on the warpath in wartime Washington to celebrate her cinema debut in the rollicking comedy that is the added feature attraction.

To the millions who follow Dixie's adventures in the daily comic strip originated by J. P. McEvoy, her first film lark will be an occasion for high glee. For, as played by Lois Andrews, Dixie is at once as hilarious and charming as you'd expect her to be.

The whole Dugan clan is on the loose in the nation's capital and they're all out for victory—and laughs. Pa (Charles Ruggles) is an air raid warden and Ma (Charlotte Greenwood) helps out, too.

"My Friend Flicka" in Color

The latest widely heralded novel to be made into a motion picture is Mary O'Hara's "My Friend Flicka," the new technicolor film which is slated to open next at the Belle theatre.

Mary O'Hara's beloved story had one of the most unusual careers in the history of publishing. Topping the list of best sellers for many months, it also had the signal distinction of being selected for reproduction in four of the nation's top-circulation magazines: Reader's Digest, Story Magazine, Red Book and Scholastic Magazine. In addition "My Friend Flicka" was picked by the Book-of-the-Month Club for its readers.

Climaxiug all this was the news that 20th Century-Fox had arranged for the filming of the novel in technicolor. The film company has long been noted for its faithful reproductions of novels, including "The Grapes of Wrath," "How Green Was My Valley" and "This Above All."

Producer Ralph Dietrich, entrusted with the filming of the novel, selected Roddy McDowall to head the cast of "My Friend Flicka." Appearing in the film version of a best selling novel seems to be Roddy's strong point, since his work in "How Green Was My Valley" and "The Pied Piper" accounted for much of the success of these films.

Featured with Roddy are Preston Foster, long noted for his virile film portraits and Rita Johnson, who won the coveted role of Roddy's mother.

The Canadian Paramount Newsreel, a color comedy cartoon "Doing Their Bit" and another C.C.O. feature of unusual interest "Train Busters" will also be presented. On Saturday matinee the opening chapter of the unusual chapter-play "The Adventures of Smilin' Jack" featuring Tom Brown, Rose Hobart and Marjorie Lord will be exhibited. Continuous shows will be presented on Saturday.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Keep 'Em Slugging"

"Keep 'Em Slugging," Universal's latest action melodrama to star the Dead End Kids and little tough guys, is currently playing at the McCarthy Theatre. Huntz Hall, Bobby Jordan, Gabriel Dell and Norman Abbott are the film's headline performers.

A large cast features Evelyn Ankers, Don Porter, Elyse Knox, Samuel S. Hinds, Shemp Howard and Frank Albertson. Many thrilling sequences of the picture take place in a big-city department store and the story deals mainly with a hi-jacking gang which preys on the institution.

Second feature attraction, "Silver Spurs," stars Roy Rogers, Smiley Burnette, Bob Nolan and the Sons of the Pioneers.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Happy Go Lucky"

Last night at the Capitol theatre Paramount offered five top stars in a gay technicolor musicomedy — "Happy Go Lucky"—which obviously delighted an appreciative audience.

The five stears are Mary Martin, Dick Powell, Betty Hutton, Eddie Bracken and Rudy Vallee and all of them outdo themselves as they sing, dance and clown in this happy go lucky picture of life on a resort island in the Caribbean, where husband-hunting beauties and elusive millionaires play hide-and-seek with each other with laughter and music all of which are most welcome at any time, but especially today. There's a carefree vacation feeling about the picture which you're sure to find very invigorating. Its gayety is infectious and we've a hunch you'll leave the Capitol theatre as refreshed and relaxed as though you yourself had taken the Caribbean trip which proved so eventful for Mary Martin and Betty Hutton.

There are five hit tunes in the picture—"Happy Go Lucky", "Let's Get Lost," "Murder, he Says," "The Fuddy Duddy Watchmaker" and "Sing a Tropical Song", the latter rendered by Sir Lancelot, the well-known Calypso singer.

"Riders of the Northwest Mounted"

Bullet-streaked action, rousing western songs, and suspenseful excitement are served up in extra large portions in Columbia's newest outdoor adventure drama, "Riders of the Northwest Mounted," which opened yesterday at the Capitol theatre. Russell Hayden, hard-riding young star plays the leading role, while the supporting cast is headed by Bob Wills and His Texas Playboys, noted music-makers of the southwest.

A color cartoon and Zane Grey's "King of the Mounties" complete another grand program for the whole family.

Mary O'Hara's beloved story, "My Friend Flicka," comes to the screen with Roddy McDowall, Preston Foster and Rita Johnson in the top featured roles. Catching the spirit of today's glorious west, the deep and tender love of its women and the courage of its rugged men, the Technicolor version of its popular novel is slated to open this weekend at the Belle Theatre.

Toronto, Aug. 13—(CP)—Aubrey (Dit) Clapper will be of the judges in the "Miss War Worker" contest at Belleville, Ont., this year. Wait till Art Ross hears that one! One false move by Clapper and Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League will be looking for a new captain and assistant coach. They say the losing candidates in a beauty contest can hand out a real stiff body-check.

Oily Boids!

August football practice will be something new in the east this year. For years, when the west sought an earlier opening of the eastern grid schedule so the national final could be played earlier, eastern officials replied an earlier opening was impossible because, for one reason, the players wouldn't turn out for practice during the hot weather. . . Times must have changed because they're already at it in the east while the west has yet to decide who's gonna play and why. . . Toronto Oakwood Indians have been out for conditioning several times. Ottawa Combines and Hamilton Wildcats start drills this weekend. . . Hamilton comes up with the tip-off that FO. Lou Hayman will be coaching Toronto R. C. A. F. Hurricanes again this fall. Hayman was in Hamilton this week arranging purchase of some former Hamilton Tiger equipment on behalf of the Dominion champions.

Hoss-tracized:

Dink (Montreal Gazette) Carroll says Bob Gray, Toronto golf pro, might have had a tournament career matching the best in the United States if he had concentrated a little more. When Gray was 19 he went south for the big Florida tournaments, finished third in his first and hit the prize money in several others. "But it seems the horses were running at Hialeah at the time and Bob is a guy who likes the beetles. That's where his prize money went and, finally, his clubs. He hocked 'em to raise the ante to get back what he'd lost and the bookmakers got it too." That ended his most promising bid in the big time.

Incidentally:

Apparently the Canadian lightweight champion, LAC. Dave Castilloux, is going to get a crack at Cleo Shans, the lad Johnny Greco twice battered around United States rings. . . Benefits of the rubber shortage: The 140-mile Winnipeg-to-Kenora annual bike grind has been suspended for the duration.

Angus Dickson, Liberal, Elected

Stratford, Ont., Aug. 13—(CP)—W. Angus Dickson, Liberal, today was declared re-elected to the Ontario Legislature for Perth Constituency which has been in doubt after the Ontario General Election Aug. 4. His re-election brings the number of Liberals in the 21st Legislature to 15.

Returning Officer W. R. Pratt announced after the official count Thursday that Dickson polled 7,566 votes, compared with 7,546 for the Progressive Conservative candidate, Fred Edwards, for a plurality of 20. The C.C.F. candidate, Bert Davies, had 4,148 votes.

DeMarigny Flatly Denies Charge

By E. V. W. JONES
Associated Press Staff Writer

Nassau, Bahamas, Aug. 13—(AP)—A statement by Alfred De Marigny flatly denying that he killed his millionaire father-in-law, Sir Harry Oakes, was read today at a preliminary hearing for the yachtsman.

Maj. Herbert Pemberton of the Nassau police told of arresting De Marigny nearly 12 hours after Sir Harry's bludgeoned and burned body was found July 8 in a bedroom at his oceanside villa, Westbourne.

He then read the statement by De Marigny after the charge was lodged.

"It's a ridieulous charge as I have no reason to do it," Pemberton quoted the accused man.

"I can swear I have not seen Sir Harry since March 29.

"I have not been in Westbourne for two years.

"That is all I have to say."

Earlier, Pemberton had testified that he left a strong guard over the room where the body was found. He told of meeting De Marigny, who is charged with murder, on the first floor of Westbourne.

EDDIE KLIEMAN HAVING HARD TIME TO WIN 20 GAMES

Red Kress, Utility Man and Coach, Beats Hurler by 7-5 Count

BEARS GAIN GROUND

(By The Associated Press)

Ed Klieman is having a tough time trying to win game No. 20 for Baltimore Orioles in the International League.

Twice he has attempted to gain that elusive victory, but first Buffalo and then Toronto, last night, rebuffed him.

The Orioles twice gave Klieman a lead last night, but the 19-game winner couldn't hold it as the first-place Maple Leafs came from behind to win 7-5, in the first game of a twin bill. Baltimore led at 3-1 and again at 5-3, but the Leafs tied it at 5-5 and sent Klieman to the showers in the sixth. To add to Klieman's woes he was beaten by Red Kress, Toronto's utility veteran, who started his first game of the season.

Baltimore gained a split, however, as Smoll pitched a five-hitter in the nightcap for an 8-4 triumph.

Newark Bears backed up Walter Dubiel's seven-hit pitching with a 15-hit attack to wallop Rochester, 7-1. Gene Corbett, Russ Derry and Ed Levy each banged out three hits. Dubiel, in chalking up his 13th victory of the year, had a shutout until the ninth when the Red Wings bunched three hits with an error for their lone tally.

Buffalo came up with three runs in the ninth on two hits, two bases on balls and an error to beat Syracuse, 3-1. A scheduled doubleheader between Jersey City and Montreal was postponed.

GIRL IN THE GREEN COAT

CHAPTER 2

Around dinner-time there was a sort of boarding-school excitement about the place, feasts being concocted behind closed doors, stifled laughter and friendly borrowing. But after nine when Mr. Grant switched out the lights and locked the heavy, swinging street doors behind him, the atmosphere changed.

Even Peggy felt it, though she would not admit it.

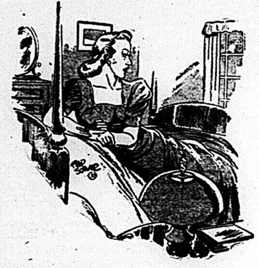
"Safe as a church," she said. "Safer than it ever was, with the doors locked and nobody coming in!"

But we all had keys and nearly everyone had duplicates made for their friends. There was no objection to people working nights, provided they did not sleep in the building. Jan Proust had pupils and friends at all hours, and Mr. Grant grumbled that he often found the door unlocked when he came in the morning.

It was not the unlocked door that scared me, it was the dark, sinister halls and the noises that began after everyone was asleep or trying to sleep.

Peggy missed out on the noises because going to bed and going to sleep were synonymous with her. She slept like a log all night and then sprang out of bed fresh as a daisy at the first clang of the alarm clock, while I wakened at a whisper during the night and could sleep through a battery of alarm clocks in the morning.

It is hard to describe those night noises. Unless you have ever worked very late in an office building after everyone else has left, or have been shut up in some big, public place, a library or a waiting room, you'll hardly know what I mean.



Lying awake, envious of Peg's tranquil breathing, I'd listen . . .

The silence is not a comfortable silence. It is heavy and oppressive, and the darkness is thick and weighty, like a dark curtain closing in on you. The small night noises are not healthy, earthly sounds. They are like sad echoes of people and things that are gone.

True, we were not alone in the building, but we might as well have been, for once the doors were locked and people had gone to bed, guiltily, nothing, not even pounding on the doors would have got a response. They were not supposed to be there, so they pretended they weren't. For all the help Peg and I could have had the place might have been empty as it was supposed to be.

Lying awake, envious of Peg's tranquil breathing, I'd listen to the windows rattle, and it wouldn't be a good, comfortable rattle like the loose sash in your room when you were a kid. It would be a small, secret rattle, as if unseen hands were moving it stealthily. Nor did the boards squeak in the good, hearty manner that boards are supposed to squeak. No, they would squeak almost inaudibly and rhythmically, as if someone you couldn't see were sneaking up on you in the dark. And there would be long, sighing sounds, and then sometimes I'd sit right up in bed, sure that I heard sobs, heartbroken despairing sobs, like those of a woman who is surprised into crying and then finds she just can't stop.

Peg used to laugh at me when I tried to tell her.

"Chicken!" she said.

Yes, I was. Too chicken to admit it and move. So I stayed, trapped like a mouse after cheese, because I wanted what I wanted.

And that's how Gil Castle, whom I loved but who didn't love me, came back into my life, at the end of his.

On this particular night, a windy rainy night in February—Monday, the fifth, to be exact—I had been to a movie.

Ben Shaeffer, our drama editor, asked me to cover it for him and I took George Evans, our baseball writer, and his wife, Alline, with me the Evans' being pushovers for movie passes. They came back to the office with me when the show was over. I had the review to write, and George had some work of his own to finish. Alline, being a well-trained sports writer's wife, used to waiting, had her knitting along. It was around 12 o'clock when I was through.

George, who always hates to go home, suggested that we drive over to North Beach for crab and beer, but Alline said she was too tired, and together we talked him out of it. They left me at my door and drove away.

I had forgotten my flashlight, as usual, but I knew the stairs so well I could feel my way along quite easily. I never minded that first flight anyway, for I always had the feeling, or at least the hope, that Jan Proust would be in his studio on the second floor and then he would walk up the other three lonely flights with me.

Jan's studio was the one bright spot, day or night, on the way up to our rooms. It was the loveliest studio I have ever seen. One enormous room, overlooking a garden court, with French windows opening on to a small private balcony. Off the large studio there was a tiny but marvelously compact and complete kitchen, an austere cell-like sleeping room and a large and pretentious bath, all blue and silver.

Jan had brought some of the studio furnishings from his native Poland and some from Italy and Spain. Really there was not a comfortable chair in the place, but there were low, cushioned window seats in the mullioned bay windows at either end of the room and a long, low divan heaped with old brocade cushions, most of them too stiff with gold thread to be really comfortable. But the chairs, massive and straight and high-backed, were impossible.

There were high, carved cabinets in which Jan kept music, small marble-topped tables supporting heavy gilt or silver candelabra, a long refectory table on which a great silver bowl was kept filled with the most gorgeous and exotic flowers from the shop downstairs, and there were dark red brocade hangings, dim old paintings and carvings, some of them of enormous value and, of course, Jan's two concert grand pianos, the only modern things in the room.

It may sound stuffy and junky as I describe it, but it wasn't. Jan had the touch. His strong, sensitive fingers touched something, moved it just a little and immediately it belonged. The room was his, and it was beautiful.

Little Benny's Note Book

This afternoon I was walking out to the Park with Shorty Judge and Lucky Leroy Shooster, and Shorty said, Oh boy I pretty near forgot, this is Friday the 13th. We better keep our fingers crossed, he said.

Oh boy that's right, I said, We better be exter careful and look both ways when we cross streets. We better even look straight up for things falling out of airoplanes, I said, and Lucky Leroy said, It dont bother me any, I was born on Friday the 13th.

Well what's that prove? Shorty said, and Leroy said, It proves it's my lucky day.

How does it? I said, and he said, Because I've been lucky ever since, so that proves I was lucky to be born, so any day I was born on must be my lucky day. Friday the 13th, lead me to it, he said.

Well good night I dont see anything lucky happening to you, Shorty said, and Lucky Leroy said, Well just a same something lucky is happening to me every minute right now.

Then it must be happening to us too, I said, and Shorty said, Sure, we're here, ain't we? and Lucky said, Do you want to say it's lucky for you to wear your shoes out?

Who's saying anything about shoes? I said, and Leroy said, I am. As soon as I get these shoes wore all a ways through instead of just nearly all a ways, I'm going to be allowed to have rubber soles put on them, and everybody knows how much more fun rubber soles are than leather ones, so I'm being lucky every step I take, he said.

Proving if you're naturally lucky it probably dont matter what day it is, and just for exter proof he found a dropped bird's nest with one egg in it on the way out and a handkerchiff with 3 cents tied in one corner on the way back.

25 Bombers Lost in 3 Days By U.S. Air Force

London, Aug. 13 — (CP) — American four-engined bombers attaced Gelsenkirchen, Wesseling and Bonn in Germany's Rhineland today and U.S. Army Air Force Headquarters said 25 of the big four-engined bombers were lost in the 3-day daylight assault.

The bombers shot down more than 20 enemy fighters, a communique said, and escorting Thunderbolts and Spitfires knocked down three others.

"Large formations" of Flying Fortresses attacked synthetic oil factories at Gelsenkirchen and Wesseling and struck at other industrial targets at Bonn, said the bulletin, issued jointly by the U. S. Army's European theatre headquarters and the British air ministry.

RECTAL SORENESS AND PILE TORTURE
QUICKLY RELIEVED.

If you are troubled with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not delay treatment and run the risk of letting this condition become chronic. Any itching or soreness or painful passage of stool is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get a package of Hem-Roid from J. S. McKeown or any I.D.A. or other drug store, and use as directed. This formula which is used internally is a small, easy to take tablet, will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and aid in healing the sore tender spots. Hem-Roid is pleasant to use, is highly recommended and it seems the height of folly for any one to risk a painful and chronic pile condition when such a fine remedy may be had at such a small cost.

If you try Hem-Roid and are not entirely pleased with the results your druggist will gladly return your money.

RUMOR GERMANS BUILD SECOND LINE DEFENCE THROUGH BALKANS

Ankara, Aug. 11 —(Delayed)—(AP)—Information from the Balkans today reported the Germans were throwing up defence fortifications on the north banks of the Sava River in Yugoslavia which joins the Danube north of Belgrade.

It was believed the Germans were preparing secondary defence lines through the Balkans should they be forced to fall back due to Italy's capitulation or an Allied invasion of the Balkans.

The Sava River, the Danube and the Carpathian mountains form a natural defence line for the northern Balkans.

20,000 Workers To Resume Jobs In Aircraft Plants

Montreal, Aug. 13 — (CP) — After being idle a week, some of the machines in the big aircraft factories in this area began turning today as representatives of labor, government and employers studied terms of a settlement that will see 20,000 workers resume their jobs. Full employment will not be reached until Monday.

Union spokesmen announced the return to work at a meeting here last night at which a joint statement from Labor Minister Mitchell and Munitions Minister Howe was read. The statement said the National War Labor Board had agreed to review the question of cost-of-living bonus adjustments — the point at issue — for employees and to receive a formal application from the workers for such a review after the men have returned to their jobs. The Board will consider whether the men are legally entitled to some adjustment of bonuses paid prior to March 23.

The statement included a quotation from a letter by Paul Fournier, President of the Montreal Trades and Labor Council and strikers representative, which said "it is understood clearly that neither your Board nor the government will put into effect or give any assurance of putting into effect retroactive payment of cost-of-living bonus, as claimed by the men when they went on strike... we are asking your Board if without any prior committment ... it will agree to review this situation for the period between June 30, 1942 and March 23, 1943, under the law that ... was in force prior to the amendment."

The settlement proposal was recommended to the men at a mass meeting last night and they voted to go back to work "as soon as possible" and await the results of the further steps of conciliation.

Spotlight Band To Visit City

Mart Kenny, Canada's Spotlight Band and His Western Gentlemen, will pay a return visit to Belleville Monday, August 16th. Before setting up in the city for the dance in the Hume Arena Gardens, Kenny will do his weekly "Victory Hour" broadcast for Coca-Cola from Trenton Airport. Miss Judy Richards, featured singer with the quartette will be with the orchestra when they play for the dance.

Mart Kenny's last appearance here was in May, when he packed the Arena with over eleven hundred dancers and a record-breaking crowd is expected this time. Kenny's orchestra is Canada's outstanding dance band and compares favorably with a number of American name-bands heard on National radio hook-ups Mart Kenny organized his original band in Vancouver back about 1931, where he started his career by playing for casual dances and doing an occasional broadcast over CKMO. He has had many ups and downs in the music business but his policy has always been to keep a good man regardless of expense and to train him to play music the way he understands and interprets it. His climb to his present status in the musical world has been steady and sure and it may only be a matter of .. year or more until Canada loses Mart Kenny and His Western Gentlemen to the more lucrative field across the border as Canada lost Guy Lombardo and His Royal Canadians.

Dressed Poultry Market Steady

Toronto, Aug. 13 —(CP)— The dressed poultry market is holding firm, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reports. Receipts are increasing to a point where local demand can be taken care of but there is not sufficient to cover the general demand. Some dealers are able to place a few broilers in storage. Arrivals of chicken are of fairly good quality and show a good percentage of Grade B milk-fed. Weights are from three to 5½ lbs. Broilers are of good quality mostly Grade A milk-fed and Grade B milk-fed. Fowl weighing 3½ to 6 lbs. Show a large percentage of A grade.

Quotations to producers and country shippers are unchanged at:

Broilers, all weights, A milk-fed 33 cents lb., B milk-fed 31, B 29, C 22 chicken, Grade A milk-fed over 4 lbs. 34½, under 4 lbs. 33½; B milk-fed over 4 lbs. 32½, under 4 lbs. 31½; B over 4 lbs. 30½, under 4 lbs. 29½; fowl, A over 4 lbs. 24¾, under 4 lbs. 23¾; B, over 4 lbs. 22¾, under 4 lbs. 21¾, C 18.

The live poultry market remains firm. Receipts have decreased somewhat. There is good demand for live fowl among Jewish traders but some dealers are processing and placing other kinds of poultry in storage. Buying prices are unchanged.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 13 — (CP) — Industrials and western oils were up narrowly this afternoon on Toronto exchange. Base metals were lower and golds steady.

Noranda, Abitibi Pfd and Hamilton Bridge became active on advancing prices. They posted gains of a point or more. Noranda firmed 3 to 51 1-4. International Nickel and Steep Rock posted minor gains and prices were down for Smelters, Hudson Bay and Falconbridge.

Malartic Gold Fields, Aunor, Chesterville and Upper Canada advanced moderately and prices were lower for Pamour, East Malartic and Beattie.

The utilities and steels gained ground and foods were softer.

Major C. S. Nickle "Safe and Well"

Major Clinton S. Nickle, a native of Madoc and son of Mrs. T. L. Nickle and the late Mr. Nickle is reported "safe and well" in Sicily according to information received from the Director of Records, Ottawa, by the family on Thursday. Major Nickle was in the holding company of the regiment prior to leaving for Sicily and since Lt. Col. Bruce Sutcliffe has been killed in action and Major Tweedsmuir has been wounded, it is just possible that Major Nickle has been promoted to second in command at least of the regiment. It is understood that the regiment is now out of the line resting after their stiff journey through Sicily, they having fought continuously for approximately 27 days.

Major Nickle was born in Madoc and went to the public and high school in that village. He was much interested in sport. He joined the militia unit of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment at an early age and rapidly advanced. He went overseas with the original regiment in December 1939. Since arriving in Britain he has married an English girl. His mother, six sisters, Mrs. W. G.Dyer, Princeton, Sask., Mrs. D. O. Griffith, Glen Ridge, N.J., Mrs. L. D. Brown, Bethlehem, Pa., Mrs. R. O. Young, Seattle, Wash., Mrs. F. J. Follis, Bancroft, Miss Jean Nickle, Belleville and one brother, second Lieutenant Hubert Nickle of the H. & P. E. Reserve are his immediate relatives.

EXPORT PERMITS WILL BE REQUIRED

Action on Cabbages and Grapes is Result of Light Crops

Ottawa, Aug. 13—(CP) — The Trade and Commerce Department announced today that export permits will be required for the shipment from Canada of certain fruits and vegetables and said the action on cabbages and grapes resulted from light crops.

On and after Aug. 16 permits will be required for shipments of pectin and fresh cabbages, tomatoes and grapes to any destination outside Canada.

Export permits also will be required for the shipment of birch and maple logs, lumber and flooring to any country except the United Kingdom.

The Department said the light vegetable and fruit crops indicated that cabbage and grape supplies would not meet home demands. Tomatoes are in particularly heavy demand for canning and preparing tomato juice.

Short fruit crops also have created a heavier demand for pectin, used to save fruit in jam and jelly making, resulting in a growing shortage of this commodity.

"The critical timber situation" was given as the reason for tightening export control over birch and maple exports.

The Department also announced that the export permit requirement will be dropped for imported fruits, other than apples, peaches, pears, plums and cherries when they are being sent to any part of the British Empire or United States.

"While the movement of imported fruits through Canada is not particularly large, this exemption will be helpful to shippers of fresh oranges, lemons, bananas, etc., to destinations like Newfoundland," said the Department.

BETTY FRASER, 37 South Front Street, when first seen in her job at No. 3 Plant of the Stewart-Warner-Alemite Products Ltd., brought to mind the poster of a girl war-worker in the window display of the "Miss War Worker" contestants on Front St. She operates a punch machine. Betty is small and her machine is large but she has mastered it and her work is applauded by her foreman. She works with a partner who relieves her at the large machine. Betty says she has no plans for after the war, but she is quite young and after the war will be plenty of time to make up her mind. She plays baseball for the Alemite team, holding down first base and a position in the field, and her favorite pleasure is dancing. Although Betty has worked for the Alemite Products for only five months she has learned her job well and does efficient work. The Graham Food Products Ltd. claimed her time before her present employers and Betty stated emphatically that she likes her current work very much, indeed.

SARAH WALSH, 237 John Street, is a Deacon Shirt Company entry to the Kiwanis Karnival "Miss War Worker" contest. For sixteen months Sarah has been operating a sewing machine in the 'Aerial Division' of the Deacon Shirt Company's plant where she is sewing flying suits. She does not know how many of them she has made, but it is certain that more than one airman flying over Europe has blessed her unknowingly. Sarah says she works in a part of the plant where there are many other girls and that she likes this better than if she were working alone. Her plans are to work in a dress shop when the war is over and she can be released from essential war work. Miss Walsh is active in the entertaining of airmen through the social events and dances arranged by the Red Triangle Hostess Club.

DORIS WAITE, R. R. 2, Belleville, has worked at the Bristol Aircraft Co., for over twenty months on essential war work. Her job consists of assembling bands on nose glasses of aircraft, the glazed portion of the nose of an aeroplane. Doris works at her job by herself most of the time but she says she does not get bored or lonely. Before entering the employ of the Bristol Aircraft Co. Doris was in London, Ontario, at the St. Joseph Hospital for six months. Preferring other work to hospital work, she came back to Belleville and got her present job where she says she is better off and more contented. "Every girl in Canada should find some useful war-time job," said Doris. "It is the least we can do to help the boys who are doing all they can over there. Illness is the only reason why I would leave my work." Doris plays short-stop for the Bristol Girls' Softball team. "I am going to get married after the war," Miss Waite stated when asked her plans. She did not give the name of her future husband but she can be sure that everyone will wish her long happiness and success.

Signs Multiply Italy is Stepping Away From Nazis

Berne, Switzerland, Aug. 13 — (AP) — Signs multiplied today that Italy is stepping away from Germany in an effort to approach the Allies and democracy — for the latter, said the newspaper La Stampa of Turin, is the country's urgent need today.

Dispatches indicated that the Italians looked anxiously toward Quebec and the forthcoming conferences between Prime Minister Churchill, and President Roosevelt, hopeful that the conferences would supply the means to get them out of the war.

The widening rift between the Axis partners was becoming so apparent that the Milan correspondent of the Zurich Die Tat, in a dispatch passed by the Italian censor, said he could "no longer speak of good Italian-German relations."

Asks Swiss to Inquire If Italy Sending Prisoners to Germany

London, Aug. 13 — (CP) — Switzerland, as the protecting power of British interests in Axis and occupied countries has been asked by the British Government to investigate reports that Italy is transferring British prisoners of war to Germany.

The Daily Express in a Berne, Switzerland, dispatch reported 2,500 prisoners had been moved in one group recently and said, if this were true, it might have an adverse effect on conditions imposed on Italy if she surrenders.

Himmler Ordered End Terrorizing Anti-Nazi Huns

Madrid, Aug. 13 — (AP) Travellers arriving in Spain from Berlin reported today that Heinrich Himmler, head of the German secret police, has been ordered to stop terrorizing anti-Nazi Germans. Despite their dislike of the Nazi party these Germans are reported willing to co-operate in defending the Fatherland against the Allies.

These travellers said it was also "quite possible" that certain Jews might be asked to co-operate with the military by taking technical war jobs from which they previously had been banned by the Nazi party.

Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering was said to have been designated as the army's contact man with the Nazi party in effecting these reforms.

Crop Production In Northumberland Better Than Expected

Cobourg, Ont., Aug. 13 — (CP)—Crop production in Northumberland county is not only good but much better than was anticipated two months ago, according to H. B. Banbury, county agricultural representative. The encouraging outlook has been brought about by favorable growing weather since late seeding. Hay crop was so large that barns everywhere are filled and stacks have been erected.

Volunteer labor from the urban centres has played an important part towards this end. The grain crop, said Mr. Banbury, is fairly good despite a lot of rust which has prevented much grain from maturing.

The fruit crop in Northumberland is about 75 per cent normal. The labor situation is fair and by no means acute at the present time, Mr. Banbury stated.

Says Britons Feel Backouts Should Be Relaxed

Baltimore, Aug. 13 — (AP)—Reporting that the British public feels "that the end of the European war is now a matter of months rather than years," Paul Patterson said today in a cabled dispatch to the Baltimore Sun from London that Britons generally feel that blackout and other wartime restrictions should be relaxed.

Patterson, who is president of the A. S. Abell Company, publisher of the Sunpapers, and a director of The Associated Press, noted that double daylight saving time would come to an end in England Aug. 15, and said that agitation was growing for some modification of the blackout regulations.

"The argument for modification of the blackout is augmented by the general belief that extensive blitzes will never again be attempted by the Germans," Patterson said.

GERMAN EVACUATION OF SICILY IN FULL SWING

British and U.S. Forces Overcoming Rearguard Action

Riposto, Floresta, Piraino Rapidly Fall After Randazzo Stronghold Taken

GENERAL ADVANCE

By RELMAN MORIN
Associated Press War Correspondent.

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 14 (AP)—Pelted by everything from blockbusters to machine-gun bullets from the air and artillery fire from the sea, the German army has begun a full-scale evacuation in an effort to save as much material and manpower as possible from the wreckage of Sicily for the battle of Italy.

With their centre caved in by the Allied capture of Randazzo, north of Mt. Etna, the Germans put their evacuation machinery into full swing, it was announced today. They were retreating behind a strong rearguard which fell back rapidly in front of victorious British and American infantry attacks.

Sweeping to within 34 miles of Messina in virtually all sectors, the Allies captured Piraino on the north coast, Floresta in the central sector, and Riposto, Giarre and Milo on the east coast.

Mount Etna Held

All Mount Etna now is in Allied hands.

An Allied commentator, confirming previous field reports of the German withdrawal, said there no longer was any question but that the Germans' sole aim was to escape to the Italian mainland with as many troops and as much equipment as possible.

Allied aerial reconnaissance showed that ships crossing the narrow, bomb-tossed Messina Strait were arriving empty on the Sicilian beaches and departing loaded.

The strait was under constant fire from British light warships and coastal craft and from the fleets of Allied bombers shuttling back and forth through that "flak alley" with their loads of 2,060-pound blockbusters and cannon and machine-gun ammunition.

Seen Wading to Boats

R.A.F. and Canadian Wellingtons dropped two-tonners on ports on both sides of the strait and laid strings of them along the beaches where enemy infantry was seen wading to the boats.

The overall picture in the narrowing Messina bridgehead began to resemble the German collapse at Cape Bon in Tunisia last May, but with this chief difference: the German retreat was orderly and a weary German rearguard was offering a fierce covering resistance.

But the British and American infantry was stabbing in and making rapid inroads, particularly in the central sector where the fall of Randazzo had made the whole area untenable.

It appeared doubtful if the enemy would be able to extricate his heavy equipment and get it across the strait, despite the employment of every delaying device known to modern warfare.

Allied engineers worked feverishly, clearing wide and cleverly placed minefields, pushing roadblocks aside, constructing by-passes around craters and landslides caused by a liberal use of dynamite, and rebuilding bridges.

Threw Shells 20 Miles

As they near the coast the Allied troops probably will come under the batteries of 15-inch shore rifles erected on the Italian mainland to beat off Allied warships and lay down a curtain of steel before the evacuation operation.

These giant guns, throwing 2,400-pound shells a distance of 20 miles, have been in action, and naval reconnaissance indicated that there were several groups of them near the Italian toe.

"The battle of Sicily is not quite over, but those boats I saw today are the enemy's admission that we have won it," said the commanding officer of an R.A.F. photographic squadron.

Although met by a hail of anti-aircraft fire the Allies lost only four aircraft in all operations yesterday. They accounted for ten enemy planes.

The British 8th Army thrusting up the east coast has taken Riposto, 10 miles south of Taormina, while Americans have overrun Floresta, inland midway between captured Randazzo and Cape Orlando, and Piraino on the north coast.

The advance brought all of Mt. Etna into Allied hands.

At the same time it was disclosed that the American 9th Division—heretofore not known publicly to have been in action in Sicily—was the first to take Randazzo. It was followed by the British 78th division.

Stopping Evacuation Movement

(The Italian communique broadcast from Rome and recorded by The Associated Press, claimed "Italian and German forces are hindering in lively defensive fighting the movements of the enemy" and asserted that 11 Allied planes were shot down — nine in yesterday's raid on Rome and two in a raid on the locality of Lazio. Axis aircraft damaged a destroyer and a steamer and got "good results" in attack on Syracuse Roadstead in Sicily, the communique declared.)

Meanwhile, Allied naval forces made energetic efforts to interfere with the Germans' evacuation movement.

A naval communique said light sea forces, continuing to operate off the coasts of Sicily and Calabria on the Italian toe, had swept into Messina Strait twice in search of enemy shipping and "no opposing forces were met." The enemy's coastal batteries caused no casualties, it was said.

Royal Navy motor torpedo oats even fired torpedoes at three enemy merchant ships entering the port of Messina, the communique said, and apparently caused an explosion heard 10 minutes later.

British warships also bombarded the east Sicilian coast again, hitting at enemy defence positions positions which were opposing the right flank of the Army.

Overrun Giarre

The communique added that Allied forces continued their advances in all sectors yesterday and made considerable progress in the centre.

The communique said also that the British coastal forces had overrun Giarre, which lies just southeast of Risposto and Milo, a village on the eastern slopes of Mount Etna.

Enemy rearguards retreating from Randazzo to Taormina, about 20 miles away, were being steadily pursued by the central Allied forces, the announcement said, adding that stiff resistance was being encountered from the suicide German detachments.

In capturing Piraino, the Americans had swept about three miles beyond Brolo, which fell earlier in the week to an amphibious flanking attack behind the German defences at Cape Orlando.

Randazzo fell yesterday to a flanking American force which swung over the roadless mountains north of the key highways junction and smashed the stubborn German resistance at bayonet point, a headquarters announcement said.

130,000 Prisoners Taken

As the British and American coastal columns converged on Messina, reports indicated increased German efforts to evacuate their beaten army.

Headquarters announced that 130,000 prisoners had been taken during the campaign, but the total did not include ace German Grenadiers believed trapped at Randazzo.

Canadian Army Corps Did Superlative Job to Keep the Advance Rolling

(By ROSS MUNRO)
(C P. War Correspondent)

With the Canadians in Sicily, Aug. 3 (Delayed) (CP) — Backing up the 200-mile push of Canadian infantry, tanks and guns, the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps did a superlative job of hauling thousands of tons of gasoline, ammunition and supplies to the front line to keep the advance rolling.

Day and night since landing a few hours after the assault troops, truck drivers, despatch riders, jeep drivers, platoon, company and headquarters officers have worked with little sleep to ensure that the forward troops received what they needed.

In Canadian made three-ton trucks which stood up magnificently to the pounding they've taken on terrible mountain roads, tireless R.C.A.S.C. drivers have driven from 500 to 3,000 miles in the past three weeks. Despatch riders herding convoys up the line have gone just as far and done hundreds of long runs with messages.

The R.C.A.S.C. and "Q"—quartermaster—orangization has been the behind-the-front mainstay of the Canadian advance.

Commander of the divisional R.C.A.S.C. is a Calgary lieutenant-colonel. Headquarters officers include Major Lou Diehl, Hamilton, Ont. They were closely linked with "Q" branch of divisional headquarters headed by a London, Ont., and Montreal lieutenant colonel.

Service Corps Gets Them Up

The Quartermaster Branch of Headquarters gets the front-line requirements for gasoline, ammunition and supplies and the R.C.A.S.C gets them up from the base.

One of the companies doing these tremendous hauls through rougher country than on any other part of the front is commanded by Maj. Bob Robarts, London, Ont.

With the colonel, I went around the forward R.C.A.S.C. companies and dumps, talking to officers and drivers who have worked themselves close to exhaustion to maintain the advancing troops so well.

After a beachhead was established shortly after dawn of July 10, R.C.A.S.C. vehicles began to come ashore with supplies and trucks immediately followed up the infantry and tanks. Gasoline got top priority, then came ammunition. The assault troops had taken ashore 24 hours' rations so the R.C.A.S.C. didn't have to truck food forward until the second day. But water had to go up right away.

Really Got Tough

Only a small number of vehicles were available at first but gradually more were landed to keep supplies going to the front which was moving 20 to 30 miles ahead daily.

After the Canadians passed the coastal plain and got into the hills and mountains of central Sicily the R.C.A.S.C. job really got tough.

CHIEFS OF STAFFS PREPARING FOR SIXTHCONFERENCE

Possible Anthony Eden May Arrive To Participate in The Talks

MOVEMENTS SECRET

By C. R. BLACKBURN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Quebec, Aug. 14 — (CP)— Combined Chiefs of Staff of the United Kingdom and the United States are here today to prepare for the momentous sixth war conference of Prime Minister Winston Churchill and President Franklin Roosevelt.

The American section arrived late yesterday.

How soon the two leaders will be Mr. Churchill is expected back from Mr. Churchill is expected back from the United States soon and President Roosevelt is expected either to accompany the British Prime Minister or follow closely after.

In the Chateau Frontenac, conference headquarters, the Chiefs of all the Armed Forces of the two major democracies today began their work together — planning which may mean new and crushing blows for the Axis powers in Europe and in the Pacific.

Secrecy of their actions and their movements, except for dribbles of news from press officials, is being maintained as in the case of all conference activities since the commandeered Chateau was closed to press and public last Monday.

Last night there was speculation that one more prominent British political figure may arrive before the actual Churchill-Roosevelt conference begins — Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden.

No Confirmation

There was no official confirmation but one conference spokesman said there are "some odds" he will come.

The United States Chiefs of Staff who arrived late yesterday afternoon were Admiral William D. Leahy, United States Navy, Chief of Staff to President Roosevelt; General C. Marshall, Chief of Staff, United States Army; Admiral Ernest J. King, Commander-in-Chief, United States Fleet; and General H. H. Arnold, Commanding General, United States Army Air Force.

With them were Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, Chief of United States Army Service Forces; Brig. Gen. John R. Dean, Secretary to the United States Chiefs of Staff; and Capt. Forrest Royal, United States Navy, Deputy Secretary.

They were met by Lt.-Gen. Kenneth Stuart, Vice-Admiral Percy W. Nelles and Air Marshal L. S. Breadner, Canadian Chiefs of Staff, respectively for Army, Navy and Air.

The British Chiefs of Staff came

Allies 'on Threshold Major Developments'; F.D.R. Reaffirms Faith

Washington, Aug. 14 — (AP) — President Roosevelt, declaring the Allies now "stand upon the threshold of major developments in this war," reaffirmed his belief today in the Atlantic Charter pledges to establish world freedom.

In a formal statement commemorating the second anniversary of the signing of the Charter, the President said the Allies are determined to gain "total victory" over the Axis and recognize as enemies not only Germany, Italy, and Japan, but all "forces of oppression, intolerance, insecurity and injustice."

His partial statement follows:—

Today, on the second anniversary of the signing of the Atlantic Charter, I would cite particularly two of its purposes and principles on which we base our hopes for a better future for the world.

First — respect for the right of all peoples to choose the form of government under which they will live. When the Atlantic Charter was first signed, there were those who said that this was impossible of achievement. And yet, today, as the forces of liberation march on, the right of self-determination is becoming once more a living reality.

Second — world-wide collaboration with the object of security, for all; of improved labor standards, economic adjustment and social security…

We are now fighting a great war. We fight on the side of the United Nations each and every one of whom has subscribed to the purposes and principles of the Atlantic Charter.

Today, we stand upon the threshold of major developments in this war. We are determined that we shall gain total victory over our enemies, and we recognize the fact that our enemies are not only Germany, Italy and Japan: they are all the forces of oppression, intolerance, insecurity and injustice which have impeded the forward march of civilization."

17 Canadian Fighter Aces Account For More Than 220 Enemy Aircraft

Written For The Canadian Press
By
FLT. LT. BASIL DEAN, R.C.A.F.

London, Aug. 14 — (CP) — Seventeen Canadian fighter aces of the present war have accounted for more than 220 enemy aircraft.

They flew in operations ranging from Dunkirk and the Battle of Britain to the Sicilian campaign. Between them they have won at least 34 decorations for gallantry.

Early in the war a young Canadian fought his way into "ace" category. He was Willie McKnight, a Pilot Officer in the R.A.F. from Calgary, who flew in the famed "All-Canadian" Squadron led by Wing Cmdr. Douglas Bader, D.S.O. who was then a Squadron Leader.

Over Dunkirk and in the Battle of Britain, McKnight destroyed 16½ enemy aircraft and won the D.F.C. and Bar. He was reported missing in 1941 following one of the early R. A. F. sweeps over France.

Total Bag of 14.

With him in those early days flew another Canadian, Sqdn. Ldr. P. Stanley Turner, D.F.C. and Bar, of Toronto who is also in the R. A. F. Turner, now leader of the City of Windsor Spitfire Squadron in Sicily was a Flight Commander in the "All-Canadian" Squadron when Bader commanded it. He now has a total "bag" of 14 enemy aircraft destroyed.

During 1941, before Air Training Plan graduates had the opportunity to pile up big scores, a third Canadian in the R.A.F. Sqdn. Ldr. E.F.J. Charles, D.F.C., and Bar of Lashburn, Sask., was achieving a big reputation. At the most recent count Charles has destroyed 13 enemy aircraft. He is still flying on operations.

Achieve Outstanding Records

The furious air fighting over Malta during 1942 gave great opportunities to crack fighter pilots and it is known now that 25 per cent of all fighter pilots on the island during its great bombing ordeal were Canadians. Several achieved outstanding records.

Leader of them all, of course, is FO. George Beurling, D.S.O., D.F.C., D.F.M. and Bar, of Verdun, Que. He has 29 destroyed.

A remarkable ace of a different kind was Sqdn. Ldr. R. C. (Moose) Fumerton, D.F.C., and Bar of Fort Coulogne, Que. A night fighter pilot he destroyed 13 enemy aircraft —all during darkness.

Wing Cmdr. Mark Brown, D.F.C. and Bar of Glenboro, Man., who was killed in action in Africa early last year, had destroyed 18 enemy aircraft when he gained the Bar of his D.F.C. His total is known to be more than 20.

Sqdn. Ldr. R. W. (Buck) McNair, D.F.C. and Bar, of North Battleford, Sask., has a score of 12 destroyed.

Most successful R.C.A.F. Spitfire pilot over Malta was Flight Lt. Henry Wallace McLeod, D.F.C. and Bar, of Regina, with a score of 13 destroyed at the time he left the island.

Flt. Lt. F. E. Jones, D.F.C., Cloverdale, B.C., destroyed seven over the island.

In Malta Flt. Lt. L. Gosling, D.F.C. and Bar of Battleford, Sask., began piling up a score towards the end of the campaign and his total at the time of his second award stood at 10. He now is missing.

Holds D.F.C. and Bar

Sqdn. Ldr. V. C. Woodward of Victoria, B.C., a Canadian who joined the R.A.F. in 1938, has destroyed 20 enemy aircraft and now holds the D.F.C. and Bar.

Another ace is George Hill of Pictou, N.S., who is fighting in Sicily at the head of a R.A.F. fighter squadron. His score at the last count was 13 destroyed.

Wing Cmdr. James E. Walker, D.F.C. and two Bars of Edmonton, is the only member of the R.C.A.F. to be awarded the D.F.C. three times. He led a R.A.F. Spitfire squadron in the North African campaign and accounted for 10½ enemy aircraft destroyed.

Also in the North African campaign was Flt. Lt. J. F. Edwards, D.F.C., D.F.M., of Battleford, Sask. whose record at the time of his D.F.C. award stood at eight enemy aircraft destroyed.

Top scorers of the R.C.A.F. wing in Britain are Sqdn. Ldr. Hugh Godefroy, D.F.C., of Toronto, the squadron commander, who has six to his credit and Flt. Lt. H. D. MacDonald, D.F.C., also of Toronto, who has destroyed eight.

DEBRIS LITTERS JAPANESE BASE

Much of Salamaua in Smoking Ruins After 45-Minute Raid

Allied Headquarters, the Southwest Pacific, Aug. 14 (AP) — Much of Salamaua, Japan's vital air base on northeastern New Guinea, lay in smoking ruins today, devastated in 45 minutes yesterday by 177 tons of bombs dropped from Allied heavy bombers.

Debris littered the waterfront of the one-mile long isthmus on which Salamaua juts into the Huon Gulf. The big airdrome, two miles inland, was the scene of widespread damage. Chinatown and the village of Kela, which faces Salamaua across the bay, were covered with dust and smoke.

Whether this Friday, the 13th., raid presages capture of Salamaua by American and Australian jungle troops, now only five miles to the south of Bordubi, remains to be seen.

Salamaua, which the Japanese occupied in January, 1942, is only 150 miles south and west of Japanese-held New Britain, which is dotted with enemy air and shipping bases.

More than 1,000 tons of bombs, dropped in 30-odd days of raiding, have burst upon Salamaua—a small village on the coast fronting the New Guinea jungle and mountains —since the two-pronged Pacific offensive got under way June 30 with Salamua the immediate objective on the left and the Munda airfield, New Georgia Island, on the right.

WIENER NEUSTADT SOUTH OF VIENNA ATTACKED BY U.S.

Cairo Announcement Did Not Reveal From What Base Heavy Assault Was Made

218 KILLED IN ROME

London, Aug. 14 (CP)—American heavy bombers, striking deep into Hitler's hitherto almost unreachable southeast European war industries, yesterday attacked Wiener Neustadt 30 miles south of Vienna in former Austria, a middle east communique disclosed today.

It was the first time since September, 1942, when Russian planes bombed Vienna, that Allied bombs had fallen on Austria.

There were few details of the attack, beyond the statement that factories, an assembly plant and hangars had been hit.

The announcement from Cairo did no reveal the base from which the heavy assault was made, but the long-range planes could have dealt the blow from Cap Bon, 800 miles from Wiener Neustadt, or from airfields of Cirenaica, 1,100 miles away.

The heavy raids coincided with other shattering blows dealt yesterday on Rome by American heavy bombers, and followed up heavy overnight attacks by the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. on Milan and Turin in northern Italy and a raid by Mosquito bombers on Berlin.

The Saturday Italian communique, broadcast from Rome and recorded by The Associated Press, said that 218 persons were killed and 570 injured in yesterday's heavy bombing of Rome's railway facilities.

A Reuters dispatch from Zurich saying an alert had been sounded in Switzerland soon after midnight suggested Allied night raiders again were over Italy. Berlin and Paris radios also went off the air, indicating the presence of hostile planes.

Aerial sideblows on railroads and highways in the south of Italy yesterday while a force of American bombers were making their second attack on Rome and while fires still were burning in Milan and Turin from an R.A.F. and Canadian night attack appeared to fit into a preliminary pattern of a pre-invasion bombing of Italy.

Dispatches to London morning newspapers from the Italian frontier said all passenger traffic had been banned on three railway lines leading from Austria into Italy with German troop transports being given priority. Nazi mechanized outfits were included.

At the same time, many German planes were reported sighted flying south into northern Italy.

Defensively Equipped Merchant Ships Have More Guns Than Old Destroyers

By STANLEY MANTROP
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, Aug. 14 —(CP)— The Navy calls them defensively equipped merchant ships, but ask the destroyer skipper of the last war what he thinks of Canada's new 10,000-ton merchantmen and even money says he'll tell you . . . "They've got more guns than our old destroyers."

Lt.-Cmdr. John Smith, D.E.M.S. staff officer for the St. Lawrence River and Great Lakes region, says this is exactly true. The new ships are heavier armed, carry more equipment, and are capable of putting up a battle that would bring joy to the hearts of Canada's old naval vets.

An inspection of one leaves the impression that Germany will soon have to train her pilots on a roller coaster if they expect to dent the armor of these new ships with their bombs and machine guns.

In the course of a battle, the Canadian gunners have equipment to throw enough "stuff" into the air to make the pilot think he's landed in a shooting gallery. And some of the equipment is still on the secret list.

If the pilot gets by the low level stern gun, used chiefly for anti-submarine work, he still has the high level gun to contend with, and a mighty formidable weapon it is. If he's lucky and gets through this barrage, the Navy boys have another surprise for him.

Instal Rocket Gun

Forward of the guns the Navy has installed a rocket gun that would put Buck Rogers to shame, and built by a well-known peacetime washing machine firm at that. Gunners say it's almost a sure bet to "wash up" any pilot that gets within its range. The rockets also carry enough high explosives to rip through the steel shell of a submarine.

If the attackers' luck still holds—the gunners say it won't — the Navy still has another nightmare rig to toss into the pilot's path. This time it's another rocket, but one with a different job. The rocket carries two parachutes suspended on 600 yards of cables and is fired into the path of the diving plane. Once the pilot hits it the cable tangles around the propeller or wings and sends the aircraft diving into the sea.

The best feature of this equipment is the fact the pilot can't pick off the operator with machine gun fire. Everything is done from the safety of the armored pilothouse and by electrical equipment. The lookout man shouts the warning from the wing of the bridge and the man in the pilothouse pushes a button.

The Canadian gunners are all seasoned veterans of the defensively armed merchantmen and know how to handle their equipment. Some have already won the O.B.E. and other high honors for their work in bringing down aircraft or picking off the odd submarine.

But they don't all get the opportunity to use their shiny equipment. "I've been on this ship for 114 months," said one gunner, "and all I've done is shine the equipment. We went through the North African campaign and never used one of the guns. That's how quiet it was."

Russians Massed 3,000 Guns to Mile to Open Drive

Artillery Barrage Rated by Soviets Heaviest in History

Germans Are Facing Loss of Kharkov And Retreating On Another Front

AIMING AT SMOLENSK

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
(Associated Press Staff Writer).

With the Red army on the Bryansk Front, Aug. 14 —(AP)— It now can be told that the Red army summer offensive was opened by a tremendous barrage rated by the Soviet Command as the greatest in history.

The bombardment of the German lines touched off at 3 a.m., July 12, was estimated at least 10 times heavier than the fire at Verdun. About 3,000 gun barrels were massed in each mile of the front for the breakthrough. (Artillery so concentrated would form two or three lines hub-to-hub.)

The offensive now is rolling steadily westward from Orel toward Bryansk while later attacks are being pressed around Kharkov and between Bryansk and Smolensk.

Transported by American-made trucks in large numbers and supported by British and American tanks and planes in lesser numbers, the Russians are carrying out their first great summer push along the lines of two successful winter offensives with a series of successive blows.

West of Orel, the Red army is enveloping Karachev from the south along the Snezhet River, closing the last escape gap for the enemy fleeing the former Orel salient. The gap through Karichev, now only three miles wide, is under artillery fire and a number of Germans are expected to be trapped.

Face Loss of Kharkov

London, Aug. 14 (CP) — German troops, already facing the loss of their great base at Kharkov, were retreating on still another front today as the Russian high command announced the opening of a new offensive apparently aimed at Smolensk, 225 miles southwest of Moscow.

The Russian midnight communique indicated the Red army was forcing the Nazis back all along a front that stretched 500 miles south from Smolensk to the Ukrainian city of Kharkov. The Russian army had already penetrated the suburbs of Kharkov, the war bulletin said, and fierce fighting was raging there.

In the central sector, the Red army was reported to have advanced steadily along the railroad from Orel toward Bryansk and heavy fighting was reported at Karachev, only 28 miles from Bryansk.

The new offensive, near the westernmost point in the Russian lines was a two-pronged thrust north and south of Spas Demensk, 85 miles southeast of Smolensk.

The Russians said that one column had pushed 13 miles in the last three days to take the town of Pavolino, 73 miles from Smolensk. Other Soviet troops were 60 miles north of the city in the Velikie Luki area.

Shatter Nazi Defences

The advance was accompanied by what was described as a powerful artillery attack which shattered German defences and permitted the Russians to break through and capture 100 villages. More than 2,000 Germans were killed in the fighting, the communique said, and quantities of war material were captured.

The bulletin indicated that the fall of Kharkov was imminent. The capture of Chuguyev yesterday opened the way from the Southeast and other columns have already closed in from the east, north and northwest.

In the Akhtyrka sector northwest of the city, a German counter-attack was beaten back with heavy losses, the communique said. Hundreds of Nazi dead were left on the field and 26 enemy tanks were destroyed. In other sectors more than 4,000 Germans were killed in recent fighting, the Russians said.

The advance on Bryansk, the Russians said, was continuing steadily in the face of stubborn German resistance. They said the Red Army had developed its attack with infantry and tank units supported by planes.

More than 20 villages were taken in yesterday's fighting around Bryansk, including the district centre of Shablikino, southeast of the key town of Karachev.

Thomas Rigby Held for Assault

Alleged to have attacked a restaurant employee with a drawn knife, Thomas Rigby of 11 Granby Street in Toronto, was arrested following a brawl in the London Lunch here early Saturday morning. Rigby was arraigned on a charge of assault and held in custody without bail.

Police say Rigby entered the local eating house after having imbibed somewhat of intoxicants. He became involved in an argument with Geo. Lampros, the night manager of the London Lunch, who told police he requested Rigby to refrain from making a disturbance. Rigby is then alleged to have drawn a knife and attacked Lampros. During the ensuing scuffle Lampros received a nasty facial gash, that needed medical attention.

Police were notified with Sergeant Arnott and P.C. Wright hastening to the scene, where they arrested Rigby, who is said by police to be a carnival employee in the city. He was remanded until Tuesday.

"Miss War Worker" Contestants

ELLA DAVIS
Bristol

RUBY SNARR
Deacon

ANN WADE
Belle-Sargent

ELLA DAVIS, 150 Church Street, works for the Bristol Aircraft Co., Ltd., and when interviewed appeared to be pleased with her work. Ella's picture was unavoidably left out of the display of "Miss War Worker" photographs in the window of Lipson's Department Store, which was due to her being absent from the city on holidays at the time the photographs were taken. But, the photo here will not lose any of its attractiveness by this. Before coming to the Bristol Company, Ella was employed at the Deacon Shirt Company and has been with the present firm for over a year and a half. She is assembling nacelles which is the nose piece of an aircraft. She works in a group of girls and gets along fine with all of them: "We are one big happy family," she reports. Like all the other girls she likes her work at the factory and believes she is turning in a good job. Unlike most of the other girls, Ella has expressed the desire to remain on the job after the war. Well, aeroplanes are still going to need "nacelles" when the fighting ends and perhaps Ella will get her wish. She does not participate in the active sports of the company, but her interest in the parties and dances runs high.

RUBY SNARR, 42 Frank Street, after one year with the Deacon Shirt Company asserts that she likes her work. Ruby is responsible for most of the epaulets and shoulder straps seen on the officers of the three services. Ruby's picture should arouse more interest in these commonplace accoutrements. Before going to work for the Deacon Shirt Company, Ruby attended school in Belleville but does not think she will be returning to her studies; her plans for after the war are rather indefinite which is possibly due to her extreme youthfulness. Ruby is a substitute catcher for the Deacon Girls' Softball team and played for the team often before they were knocked out of the league early in the season. She attends all the company dances and other social affairs.

ANN WADE started her career with the Belleville-Sargent Co., Ltd., over four years ago, being a pre-war war-worker, as it were. Her type of work in the plant is packing marine hardware and fittings for destroyer, corvettes and V-ships. Ann did not elaborate on the subject of her work but she said that she likes it and will continue to work where she is after the war if she finds it necessary. Ann is married to an airman who is stationed at No. 5 I.T.S. where he is a physical training instructor. "Packing marine hardware may not sound as glamorous as operating a rivetting gun or a drill press but I am sure it is as important as anything in the war. Ships must have these articles and when I think of the places they travel I see my job as glamorous as anything." Ann does not take part in any of the outdoor activities of the plant but she likes to support the girls who do by getting out to root for them whenever they play. "I like the girls with whom I work and we all pull together just fine." Ann commented in answer to this question.

REQUESTS AID TO LOCATE GIRL

Belleville police are in receipt of a letter posted in England from a member of the R.C.A.F. who trained here before going overseas. Enclosed in the letter is a sealed envelope addressed to Miss Olive Ross The writer has asked the Belleville police to endeavor locating Miss Ross and make delivery. Today Deputy Chief Harman asked for the assistance of the press in the possible locating of Miss Ross. The enclosed letter addressed to her is available at the police station.

Many Casualties In Rome Raid Swedish Report

Stockholm, Aug. 14—(AP)—The hour-long American air raid on the city of Rome resulted in a "great number" of casualties, the Rome correspondent of the Swedish paper Dagen Nyheter reported today.

The dispatch said no figures were announced but that ambulances and rescue cars were extremely busy after what the Rome press described as a "massive raid."

The correspondent said the residents of the city had obviously been warned by leaflet or other method of the impending raid as many of them expected the morning attack.

SEPT. 3 DAY OF PRAYER

London, Aug. 14—(CP) — The Home Office, announcing a day of prayer for Sept. 3, the fourth anniversary of the war, said today that an occasion might arise before that date on which the King would call for a religious observance. Britons hazarded the guess it might follow the fall of Sicily.

British And U. S. Statesmen Expected To Visit Russia

London, Aug. 14 (CP)—British and American statesmen are expected to visit Russia within the next few weeks, the Daily Telegraph said today, asserting at the same time that there is no misunderstanding between Great Britain, the United States and Russia.

On the contrary, The Daily Telegraph said, "close collaboration is being maintained with Moscow" on all phases of Allied war policy. The newspaper did not identify the British and American representatives who would go to Moscow, possibly after the Churchill-Roosevelt war strategy conference.

While some newspapers expressed disappointment that Premier Stalin had not been invited to the Quebec meeting, others maintained it was perfectly logical, inasmuch as it was believed that one of the main topics on the agenda would be the situation in the Pacific in which Russia as a neutral could not be expected to take an active part.

The News-Chronicle said flatly that while Stalin was not invited to Canada the Kremlin had been asked to participate in a three-way conference at a more convenient place but had "found it impracticable at the present time."

Women and Girl Workers Needed In Canning and Food Processing Plants

With the opening of the canning season a very serious problem faces the companies who do this work. In past years, sufficient "transient" or temporary workers have been available to do this essential post-harvesting work. These workers now are absorbed largely in year-round munitions or other work and there is the possibility of canning plants remaining closed for lack of workers.

A similar shortage of workers for helping in the harvesting of crops was experienced and is still being felt, but hundreds of patriotic-minded people came to the aid of the farmer and worked on farms over weekends, on holidays and in the evenings after work and through appeals made in the newspapers of the country, thousands of persons were influenced to help produce for victory. It may now be said that, in spite of a backward season, most of the crops are or will be harvested safely.

Need For Help in Canning

In the matter of fruits and vegetables, however, there is further problem to be solved and one which will require the attention and assistance of many of our citizens. The problem is that of securing a large number of women and girls to operate the canning and other food processing plants of the province. In the Belleville district alone, over 100 women and girls are needed to work during the tomato canning season, otherwise what is a bumper crop of this fruit will be left unavailable to the public and Canadian troops overseas.

The problem is acute and words cannot sufficiently stress the urgency for the help of thousands of women who live in or near food processing centres to undertake to assist in canning factories for a few weeks commencing immediately. The appeal is directed to the thousands of women who have never seen the inside of a factory or who do not have to work for economic reasons, to lend a hand as a patriotic effort in the processing of needed fruits and vegetables.

Accommodation for Workers

A further appeal is made to those who have accommodation in their homes to open them to outside workers. This is almost as important as the actual work itself. Many local homes have spare rooms that might be made available to these women and girls who will answer this call and it does not mean that a home opened to these people is an ordinary boarding house; this demonstration of a willingness to help is as much a patriotic duty as working in the factories or any other kind of war-work.

The work is not unpleasant nor tiresome, but the need for its accomplishment within the seasonable time is urgent. Every woman or girl volunteering her services will find herself sincerely appreciated by the companies and the country as a whole.

CANADIAN

Every officer I spoke to praised the drivers, many of whom went four, five and six days without even taking off their boots. They grabbed sleep in their trucks while spare drivers spelled them off. Some round trips from the front to the base and back were 250 miles at some stages of the advance and they took 17 hours of steady going.

Got Hot Meals

At the front and the base they generally got hot meals while maintenance crews went over the trucks.

On the way up the line, the R.C.A.S.C. companies in addition to gas and ammunition carried medical supplies and mail, which is beginning to reach the front now, as well as reinforcements from frontline units.

On the way back to bases the trucks haul salvage like gasoline tins and ammunition boxes, give lifts to minor wounded and take back mail and also carry prisoners of war. It's a round-the-clock business.

R.C.A.S.C. personnel also are driving Canadian ambulances. Troop carrying has been another R.C.A.S.C. task. Several times Maj.-Gen. G. G. Simonds had to move thousands of troops 20 or 30 miles in quick time and called on the service corps

Getting up shells for the big barrages is one of the most laborious jobs and in one company doing most of this work is Lieut. R. M. Hemilton, Peterborough, Ont.

I talked to ammunition truck drivers, including L. Cpl. Albert Greeman, Woodstock, Ont., and Pte. Edwin Tooker, Brantford, Ont. They said the worst feature of the whole job was the clouds of dust on the roads.

General Clearing House

Robarts' group concentrates on bringing up rations but becomes a general clearing house for the division, handling mail bags, transport of prisoners and reinforcements, salvage and practically anything else that crops up.

I met some of the hardest driving despatch riders including Cpl. Harry Pickles and Pte. Dan McDonald, both of London, Ont., who had gone more than 2,000 miles in less than three weeks.

The senior N.C.O. of the company is Sgt. Maj. Gordon McWaine, London, Ont., and one driver is Pte. Joe Goegan, Ingersoll and Port Colborne, Ont.

R.C.A.S.F. fitters are an important cog in the organization for they are frontline garagemen, keeping the vehicles going. The drivers themselves do a lot of maintenance.

Among fitters here is Pte. Norman Henderson, Windsor, Ont.

With Allied air superiority the roads are not attacked very frequently by enemy aircraft and convoys have had a comparatively safe time. Not a truck has been lost through enemy action.

NON-PARLOR TYPE IS HOUSE WANTED FOR OLD BRITAIN

Women as Well as Men Will Prefer Simple Dwellings With More Labor Saving Gadgets When War's Over

(By SIDNEY GRUSON)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Aug. 14 (CP) — The Englishman's home is still his castle, and his wife's too, and there is a growing movement afoot with a strong voice to make better castles available to more Britons after the war.

The problem is bigger than simply rebuilding what the Nazis knocked down during the blitzes. Labor, Conservative and Liberal members of parliament alike are urging that the government build decent homes for workers at prices they can afford.

These members want more than dull-looking, tiny cottages, meagrely equipped, for the man who has been building Lancaster bombers and 25-pound field guns in record time during the war. They want family houses for the workers with more conveniences for women such as refrigerators and washing machines built into the house, and at a price for which the worker won't have to mortgage away the remainder of his life.

Building Costs

It has been estimated that four million houses will be needed urgently in Britain after the war. The problems connected with such a program and that building cost has more than doubled since the start of the war, two-thirds of Britain's building craftsmen are in the services or munitions factories with no certainty when they can return to their peacetime trade at the end of hostilities, and the lack of opportunity for training others in sufficent strength to meet the need within a reasonable period of time.

For seven hours in parliament recently George Hicks, parliamentary secretary for the Ministry of Works and M. S. McCorquodale, parliamentary secretary for the Ministry of Labor upheld the government against severe opposition keynoted by the declaration of Ellis Smith, Labor, that "our people have worked and sacrificed during the war, and must have houses worthy of them."

The government, actually, has already begun a building program. It is building simple cottages for agricultural workers but these are costing up to £870 ($3,915) for non-parlor types, exclusive of the cost of the land, and there is a general outcry for a better type of house at a lower cost.

Training Builders

At the end of the parliamentary debate little new light had been shed on government plans to meet the dilemma. New building methods are being explored, the complaining members were told. But the members weren't satisfied, charging that Hicks was making evasive answers and that "inexperienced and uninstructed bossing" by government departments had caused the increased building costs.

On the labor side of the problem, the government has announced a plan to train about 200,000 men in the first post-war years but McCorquodale admitted that it would take four years rather than two to train all the men needed.

Briefs From Around Around the World

St. Clair, Mich., Aug. 14 —(CP) —William Tyson, chief engineer of the Canadian Synthetic Rubber Company, said yesterday the Polymer Corporation plant at Sarnia would be in operation within a few weeks.

Toronto, Aug. 14 —(CP)— Lt.-Col. George A. Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, conferred yesterday with party members elected to the Ontario Legislature in last week's election, but no statement was released following a closed meeting.

Toronto, Aug. 14 —(CP)— Anglicans from Ontario and Quebec will gather here at a Canadian Malvern Conference Aug. 30 to Sept. 3 to discuss social, economic and political problems, it was announced yesterday.

Ottawa, Aug. 14 —(CP)—Prices Board officials said yesterday that some wholesalers and manufacturers may have supplies of shotgun shells at the moment, but prospects are there will be enough only for essential users and it was doubtful if there would be enough ammunition for sporting purposes.

MATCH STOCKS VERY LOW

Windsor, Ont., Aug. 14 —(CP)— Soon the day may come when a "got a match, bud?" plea will stand about as much chance of success as "got an extra gallon of gas, or an extra pound of butter or a thick, juicy steak?" A wholesale tobacco firm reports it has been out of matches for a month, and many corner grocers can no longer stock them.

THE ARMY SERVICE CORPS
COMES OUT FIGHTING!
ONE OF A SERIES OF 'ACTION PICTURES' WITH CANADA'S MECHANIZED ARMY

IN THE SAME WAY that a prize fighter depends on his legs, a modern assault force depends on the speed and skill of the Army Service Corps. Day and night, with danger in the air, under foot and on every side, these fighter-drivers carry troops, ammunition, food, fuel, water and other supplies from base to battle line.

Each member of the Corps is trained to handle his truck or a gun with equal ease; to operate radio equipment; to find his way through strange country by map, by compass, or by the sun and stars. In spite of mud, sand, mines, bombs—these soldiers drive onward with their precious cargoes. Of such men, General Montgomery has said: "They always deliver the goods".

When men of the Army Service Corps meet enemy opposition, they flash into action like "Indian fighters" in covered wagon days (see illustration above). The two lead trucks swing into a road-blocking "V" while fighting men scramble from the "protective vehicle" (Number 3 in a convoy) and pour hot lead from rifles, Brens, sub machine guns, anti-tank or anti-aircraft weapons. With the enemy pinned down, the remaining drivers turn their lorries "on a dime"—and swing around to find some way, any way to deliver the stuff with which victories are made.

Into each of the thousands of military vehicles which roll away from Ford of Canada assembly lines goes the finest work of skilled automotive specialists. The rugged, powerful vehicles are made and tested with the most exacting care—because Ford of Canada workers are determined these Canadian-built machines will distinguish themselves under fire in the expert hands of the fighting Army Service Corps.

"Canadian Industry must keep open a 'direct line' of communication with the world's battlefronts—so Canadian equipment will continue to increase in battle-worthiness as it increases in quantity."

Nazism to be "Dead Page"

General Devers, commanding the United States forces in the European theatre said on Friday that the invasion of Germany will continue "until Nazi Germany is a dead page in history and Nazi armies have surrendered unconditionally."

So great an evil has been the Nazi curse that all traces of it must be wiped out that no German and no other will ever dare contemplate threatening humanity. The Germans must and will be so beaten in war that they will never and must never raise their hands again against the rest of humanity. So potent will be the blows that names of the Nazi and other Axis criminals will become bywords mentioned with scorn throughout the world.

Mussolini has learned in part that the wages of evil are death and ruin. Despite his own awful example and that of all evil men, there is a spirit of humanity that is spreading more and more which will assure that there will be no revival of the evil deeds of a Hitler or Mussolini or Tojo. This spirit of justice and humanity is indicated by the United peoples, who will not allow tyranny to run wild among nations. They will make it impossible for a Mussolini or a Hitler to arise in another day or age.

The American general mentioned above notes that Nazi armies must surrender unconditionally. That itself will serve to impress the Germans that they are not "supermen."

Canadian Youth

Canadian youth in the services has proven its greatness in its courage and skill in battle and its devotion to the cause of freedom and democracy by the readiness with which it has undertaken its task even when that devotion has meant suffering wounds or the final sacrifice.

In these times there are homes in sorrow for those who have died true men of the air force, navy and army in the tumult of battle and in other homes is anxiety for those who are wounded and for those who are serving. These men undertaking their great duty as servicemen have proven that they are of the nation's best, the very flower of Canadian youth, worthy of their honored forefathers, whose sacrifice and service brought the democratic world into being. Those who sorrow or bear anxiety in their hearts have the knowledge that the nation is proud of the deeds of their loved ones and feels with them in their loss or in their anxiety. Canadian wouth in every service has served nobly in every theatre of the war and worthily in the cause of the Dominion and Empire.

These and all those in the armed services have been and remain the nation's great defence.

The services they have given or will give are the guarantee that our way of life will endure—a democracy of freedom. On this foundation of service is built the assurance of a still greater nation and world.

Those who are on the home front have a gigantic task to try to emulate in their deeds and lives the courage and faith of their brother Canadians and their allies who have upheld the principles of freedom and justice. The work in factory, in business, must be dominated by one thought only that it be such as to be worthy of the cause that has demanded so much sacrifice in wounds, in health or life and worthy of the service of those who are standing on guard that the nation may live in freedom and security.

To Mark Fourth Anniversary

Britain will on September 3rd mark the fourth anniversary of the war and all work will stop for fifteen minutes. The day will be observed as a day of prayer, dedication and thanksgiving at the request of His Majesty and all classes will participate, including the workers.

While it will mean that for fifteen minutes machines and workers are idle, that time will not be lost as the nation expresses its gratitude to God and renews its pledge of faith and dedication to the finishing of the task of the war.

Britain's war output has been amazing, her workers are self-sacrificial and the Allied Nations' co-operation so massive that the output has reached a peak that assures in the future an ample flow for the successful offensives against the enemy.

The spirit of the people of Britain has been the admiration of the free world. They overcame their handicap of lack of preparedness at the time of the war's outbreak when their material defences were not powerful but their heart was strong and it carried them through the months to the day when the Allied Nations had superiority. Now that abundance of materials is smashing at Germany so steadily that the war appears swiftly moving on to the climax—Allied victory and the Axis' unconditional surrender.

The improving conditions in the United Nations' strength and offensive have been the reward of the brave British and other peoples who have fought as never nations fought and have built as nations never before built up war production. They merit victory by the justice of their cause and their spirit of freedom as well for the fact they have not only the spirit of justice with them but also the spirit it takes to make victory come to pass by the work of their brains and hands. In all they have not forgotten man's dependence on Heaven. With thankful hearts they can greet the fourth anniversary, bright with promise of victory. They bow their heads in memory of the brave servicemen and servicewomen and the civilians who have given their lives in the cause of justice and native land and of all who have otherwise suffered loss.

Prayer and dedication and thanksgiving are naturally associated in such an hour at this anniversary.

What They Want to See

(Manchester Guardian)

Dominion serving men in England seem to have long passed the stage when they were content to spend their leave on the more obvious sight-seeing tours.

The central hospitality department of the Victoria League in London reports that it has requests from doctors wanting to see hospitals, lawyers wanting to go to the Law Courts, farmers asking for hospitality where they can study special crops and conditions, and a number of specialists with varied requirements.

One airman from Ceylon wanted to see a collection of orchids and a West Indian air-gunner to go to a steelworks. A sergeant asked where he could play the organ, and a Canadian private was anxious to spend his leisure time in London learning to whip synthetic cream.

One of the most talented visitors was a corporal, a chef by profession, who spoke seven languages, played the violin, and wanted to exercise his gifts in Aberdeen.

Will Spread English

(Leeds Yorkshire Post)

When the war is over some 15,000 Czechoslovak citizens will return to their own country equipped with a good command of the English language. There will be a similar return of English-speaking Poles, Dutchmen, Belgians, Frenchmen, Yugoslavs, Greeks and Norwegians. The English language will be better known on the Continent than at any time in its history. This will give us an opportunity which our diplomats and political and commercial leaders should be quick to seize.

Every person is a hero and an oracle to somebody, and to that person, whatever he says has an enhanced value.
—Emerson.

JUST FOLKS

TRUE GREATNESS

These are beliefs which I have cherished most:
The love of God, the fellowship of man:
That worth is of the spirit rather than
The wealth and fame which lucky mortals boast;
That those whose hearts are not by gain engrossed,
But day by day perform what tasks they can,
May also serve the Great Creator's plan,
Although they never rise above the host.
This I believe true greatness here to be:
To square all conduct to the spoken creed;
To be the first to do the gracious deed,
The first to answer friend's or stranger's plea
The first some faint, despairing cry to hear
And do what God would do if He were near.

Canada Should Join Postwar Empire Air Transport System Says Drew

Toronto, Aug. 14 — (CP)—Swinging into its second day, the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association 24th Annual Convention in Toronto embarked upon an ambitious series of trade discussions Friday topped off with a luncheon at which John A. Stiles, chief executive commissioner of the Boy Scouts Association, was to be guest speaker.

Attendance of editors and publishers from all parts of Canada, from Newfoundland and the United States broke records in their wartime convention — "Warvention" for short — numbering more than 300. Last night's trophy banquet gave Lt.-Col. George A. Drew, Ontario Premier-designate, an estimated audience of 350 for his first public address since his Progressive Conservative party headed the polls in Ontario's election.

In his speech, carried over a Dominion-wide CBC radio network, Col. Drew urged that Canada join in some form of postwar Empire Air Transport system. He said there was no subject which required franker discussion than that of postwar commercial aviation — "There is no use attempting to hide the fact that air transport and military air power are two sides of the same coin."

"Geography has given us opportunities in air transport unequalled by any other nation," he said, "We can only develop those opportunities as they should be developed with an Empire air partnership."

Now You Tell One

(Trenton Courier-Advocate)

A couple of days after the election a Wooler friend dropped in and remarked, "Well, I'm sure the result of the election didn't suit you."

Not being a politician and not having any more to do about politics than to go out and mark a ballot on election day, we had no comeback for that. And it is just as well. Our Wooler friend might not be our friend if he knew what we did a week ago yesterday, and his friendship is worth more to us than that.

In our thirty-seven years of publishing nine weekly newspapers in Ontario, politics have played us some pretty low down tricks and politics have played us some mighty decent tricks.

We had arrived in a little South-Western village to take over a newspaper and were just getting settled when the village banker dropped in. As a usual thing the banker comes around when a new man enters business in a locality to see about his account. But this banker had no such object in mind. He said he had been asked to find out if we were Grit or Tory, and being very, very green we told him.

A few days passed and another man dropped in. He had the same question to ask us and we gave him the same answer. And we told him about the banker.

"Migawd!" he gasped, "you didn't tell HIM?"

We said we did and he flew into a rage.

"The dirty so-and-so," he roared, "they'll be out to get you, and make no mistake about that."

He told us of the village tailor being black-listed because he was one of the few that didn't belong to the party that most of the villagers supported. How another tailor of the right political shade had been brought in to "run him out of business."

We were in that village for several years, and we had no trouble at all. Having learned our lesson we just clamped down on party and when election time came we went out of the village to a distant town to hear the returns come in. And next morning, our voice completely lost, we arrived back in the village with a copy of the morning paper in our hands and a number of the local and badly defeated politicians to meet us upon arrival of the ferry.

And one of them took us by the arm and saying, "Come into the customs office with the rest of us poor unfortunates" led us there. And, and we sat down in the corner, watched them read the front page of the daily paper, heard them damn the newly-elected government inside out—and never said a word.

From that day on, we tell no man what party we favor; we tell no man how we vote. And if there be such a man who has the nerve to ask the question, he is apt to get the answer given to us by an uncle when we asked him, "It's none of your darn business."

This living outside the political circle and having no desire nor inclination to fill political jobs, has had its strange angles too.

In a certain town the big shots of a political party hired the opera house to get the returns of a certain dominion election. The public was invited. The stage curtain was rolled up. There was a table and a jug of water, and chairs for the more prominent workers.

For a while the results were being given out by a gentleman in a dress suit, but it was noticeable that with each bulletin the vote was going against the party in power.

Pretty soon the curtain was lowered and the man came down the aisle looking for somebody. Spotting us, he said you are wanted up on the stage, and wondering what it was all about, we followed him.

Up behind the curtain we were handed a sheaf of bulletins and told to carry on from there. While we were figuring out what it was al labout, we saw the big shots singly and in pairs slip out the side doors and into the black night. They couldn't take it.

Politics don't bother us any more. We have learned how to distinguish between political propaganda and fact, and brother, there is some difference.

Montgomery's Men

They were lean Scottish lads from the Highlands,
And Indians, with leopard-like tread,
And youths from New Zealand's twin islands,
Wild mountain or Wellington-bred;
Australians from stockyards and stations,
And Africa's boldest and best,
With the pick of the English formations
To set a proud pace for the rest.

Hear the tale of those hard-bitten fighters
And honour the work of their hands,
Those dare-devil smashers and smiters,
Those lords of the Libyan sands.
When Rommel rolled backward our forces
With his tanks that were twenty to ten,
In the dunes and the dry watercourses
They held him — Montgomery's men.
With the Pyramids filling the distance
And ever grown nearer the Nile,
More stubbornly stood their resistance,
More grimly they clung to their smile.

When the war-tide against them flowed faster
And Cairo was threatened, 'twas then
On the edge of defeat and disaster
Montgomery called on his men.
When our cannon stood shoulder to shoulder
And our bombers took over the sky,
They blasted through thorn-bush and boulder
And so let the bayonets by.
They forced him past palm and oasis,
They flogged him o'er wadi and fen,
Till one by one all the lost places
Came back to Montgomery's men.
With Tripoli waiting before them
And Tunis a beckoning shrine
They wiped out his rearguards or bore them
As prisoners back through the line;
Unequalled in dash and endeavour
They whipped him again and again,
To live in our hearts and forever,
Those heroes — Montgomery's men.

Bizerte nor Tunis will stay them,
Palermo, or Naples, or Rome;
Not Berlin itself will delay them,
These conquerors, heading for home.

—WILL H. OGILVIE.

They Faked A Nazi Newspaper

(BBC London Letter)

Yet another story of the courage and ingenuity of those who outwit the Nazis by running underground news sheets in the occupied countries of Europe was told in a recent BBC Radio Newsreel. It is a story of Poland—a newspaper which was sold openly in the streets of Warsaw, under the very eyes of the German Gestapo.

The Germans publish a Nazi daily newspaper in Warsaw. They have given it a Polish name, and they print it in the Polish language. Some little time back a band of Polish journalists made a perfect, but fake, copy of this Nazi rag. Its appearance as to size, type, and paper, was identical with the original. But across the front page it bore, in huge letters, the words "SPECIAL EDITION," followed by a sensational account of the declaration of war by one of the neutral states.

Newsboys ran through the streets of the city shouting "Special Edition! Special Edition! Sensational News!" The papers were quickly bought up. But readers discovered, to their astonishment, that instead of the specified sensational news, this edition brought them true and uncensored news from all parts of the world, and especially about Poland's own resistance to Germany. One article was headed: "The Whole of Europe Working for Victory." The following line read: "Berlin; from a Special Correspondent." And this is what it told readers:

"There is great satisfaction in German industrial quarters on account of a large and unexpected influx of workers from all parts of Europe. A large percentage of the workers arriving from France, Belgium, Holland, Norway and the General Government are highly skilled workers in the actual industry." Then followed this comment: "All this, of course, is tripe. Not only is there NO satisfaction in German industrial quarters, there is great uneasiness on account of the dangerous lack of manpower, which amounts in some branches of industry to a catastrophe. This is the reason for the urgent recruiting of contingents of workers from the whole of Europe. This is the reason for the fatal man-hunts here in Poland, in our streets, on our railway stations, and throughout the countryside."

—And Twitted Hitler

In the next column was a second large heading: "When Will War End? An Answer to the Burning Question." Purporting to be a DNB report from Berlin, it said: "In connection with a certain war-weariness which may already be observed, and the question 'When will war end?' which is heard pretty often now, responsible German quarters wish to draw attention to a statement made by Chancellor Hitler, who, in his New Year speech for 1941, said that '1941 will be the year of final victory.' Apart from this, responsible German quarters have nothing to say and are waiting for fresh prophecies by the Fuehrer."

When they discovered the hoax, the Germans were furious. But by that time all the papers had been sold. Nor were the Nazis mollified by the Warsaw citizens' air of secret elation.

Capital Closeups

Ottawa, Aug. 13—(CP) — Tradition says that the place where immigrants are received should be dull and dreary. But when newcomers from the world of plants are received in the Dominion they are given their place in one of Ottawa's proudest beauty spots—the Dominion arboretum at the Central Experimental Farm.

Distinguished plants which have become Canadian by adoption have passed through this colorful port of entry, where they are examined, their abilities studied and their points of weakness and merit placed firmly on the record.

Take one, for instance, the Siberian pea tree, introduced to Canada as an experiment. Agriculture scientists placed it amid the flowers and trees of the arboretum and watched it flourish. Given their approval it was distributed throughout the country. Today, it is widely grown, especially in Western Canada.

Prime Minister Churchill when in Quebec is at home in a land with which his family has ancient association. John Churchill, the Duke of Marlborough, was the third governor of the Hudson's Bay Company when the fur wealth of the Canadian north was being traced by 17th Century traders and sailors.

John Churchill's governorship was graced with some prosperous years for the pioneer Canadian company. In 1688, a dividend of 50 per cent. was declared.

The modern port of Churchill on Hudson Bay and the river of the same name, recall the service to the fur trade of a man whose greater fame, as recorded by the statesman-author who is his descendant, was won on the battlefield.

The people of Canada are a good deal older than they used to be—and that no Irish ism.

The Bank of Canada has issued a little graph showing the population by age groups in years between 1881 and 1941. The line for those of 65 years and more was away down low in 1881, showing less than five per cent. of Canadians in this age group. In 1941, it had risen to more than six per cent.

At the other end of the scale, those of less than nine years of age represented about 26 per cent. of the population in 1881 and about 18 per cent. in 1941.

Niagara Falls and Parliament Hill are supposed to have been responsible for more camera-clicking than any other two places in Canada. With recruiting drives in full swing, it has become the accustomed thing for men and women in the services to be posed in front of the Peace Tower, and you see their pictures later on posters advertising their particular units.

Watching all the business with a pleased air are the scarlet-coated Mounted Police guards. They enjoyed having to see someone else have pictures taken, just for a change.

It's all very well to speak of iron rations and that kind of thing, but the hard-working Canadian likes his ice-cream and more of it. In 1939 ice-cream production was 8,184,626 gallons for all the year. But in 1943 at the end of July, Canadians had gobbled 10,429,699 gallons, with five months still to go.

One of the bloodiest and most thorough massacres in history is known as the Sicilian Vespers. It received its name from the fact that the massacre began at Palermo in Sicily on Easter Monday at the hour of vespers in the year 1282 A.D. The natives, in revenge for the cruelties of the French soldiers of King Charles of Anjou, killed almost the entire French population of the island. The Sicilian Vespers resulted in the expulsion of the Angevin kings from Sicily and the introduction of Spanish rule under the house of Aragon.

In classical times the Latin word "alumnus" was applied to a foster son or a male ward; an "alumna" was a foster daughter or female ward. In English these terms were applied to "pupils" in a school or college before they were applied to the "graduates" of the school or college.

WEDDINGS

MULLIGAN—REVOIR

Knox Presbyterian Church, Havelock, was the scene of a pretty summer wedding on Thursday evening at seven o'clock when Ena Mae Flora, eldest daughter of Cpl. and Mrs. H. G. Revoir, was united in marriage to Gerald Eugene, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gervin Mulligan, of Bethany, by Rev. W. E. Smyth, of Warkworth.

The church was beautifully decorated with baskets of cut flowers and ferns, and the Wedding March was played by Mr. Keith Morden, Reaboro. During the signing of the register Mrs. C. E. Snider, of Toronto sang "O Perfect Love."

The bride was given in marriage by her father and she wore a gown of old ivory net and lace over taffeta, made on princess lines, with a short train. Her veil of embroidered silk tulle was in coronet shape caught with orange blossoms and she carried an arm bouquet of Briarcliffe roses.

Miss Isobel Rutherford, Colborne, was maid-of-honor, frocked in a floor-length, heavenly blue shadow sheer with long full sleeves and trimmed with pearl chips. Her head dress was of embroidered blue tulle and she carried a sheaf of pink gladioli.

Miss Jean McArthur, Campbellford, cousin of the bride, was bridesmaid and wore a floor-length primrose sheer, trimmed with gold sequins and matching shoulder-length tulle veil and she carried a bouquet of mauve gladioli. The bride's sister, Miss Helen Revoir, was junior bridesmaid in a floor-length, shell pink sheer gown with shoulder-length tulle veil and an arm bouquet of white gladioli. The best man was Mr. Ralph Mulligan, Bethany, brother of the groom, and the ushers were Cecil Revoir and Verne Mulligan, brothers of the bride and groom respectively.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the "Woodlawn" in Campbellford for about 40 guests. The bride's mother received, wearing a gown of dove rose shadow sheer, with a hat of white lace straw and a corsage of Bettertime roses. The groom's mother also received and wore a gown of Rosemaria rose with black accessories and a corsage of Talisman roses.

Later the bride and groom left for a honeymoon trip through the Muskoka Lake district. For travelling the bride wore a gold silk jersey dress with matching accessories and a cream flannel coat. Upon their return they will live at Bellwood where the groom is school principal.

Minutes of the last meeting and roll call were conducted by Mrs. E. Brooks. During the business discussions, a committee of three was appointed to fill ditty bags for sailors and a letter of thanks was read from Mr. G. Stickle, who has been ill.

The program consisted of readings by Mrs. D. Trow, Mrs. S. Meyers and Misses D. Hall and A. Herrington; a guitar solo by Miss Jean Brooks and a quiz by Mrs. F. Meyers. The National Anthem brought the meeting to a close.

Aids to Poise in Public Speaking

Panicky Over Error She's Made

To the scary, inexperienced speaker her own voice is a stranger. Suddenly she hears it saying some ghastly thing she never planned—or going off into an unexpected squeak!

But this won't happen to you if you practise simple public speaking exercises at home. Make friends with your voice! Read aloud a little while each day, directing your tones to the front of your mouth.

For expressiveness, practise some simple sentence, accenting a different word each time. "They WANT to go . . . they want to GO . . . THEY want to go."

If the speech is long, don't memorize, but bolster yourself with a few notes. Also, be sure of parliamentary rules!

You can conquer stage fright! Our 32-page booklet tells how. Gives public speaking exercises for pronunciation and expression. Tells how to prepare a speech, deliver it eloquently. Has sample speeches for many occasions, parliamentary rules.

Questions and Answers

This column is sponsored by the Regional Office Wartime Prices and Trade Board. Questions on price control, ration regulations and other Wartime Prices and Trade Board rulings should be mailed to the Information Branch, Wartime Prices and Trade Board, Victoria Building, Brockville, Ont.:

Q. — As a citizen of the United States residing in Canada am I entitled to receive a No. 3 ration book?

A. — Yes, if you are a permanent resident of the Dominion. It would be wise for you, however, to carry your Canadian national registration certificates with you when you apply for a ration book at the distributing centre.

Q. — My ice dealer refuses to deliver ice to the refrigerator, but charges me as much as ever for ice. Is that permissable?

A. — If there is any variation of the service which the dealer rendered during the basic period, he is expected to reduce his prices accordingly, unless he has been given specific permission to do otherwise.

Q. — As a retail shoe dealer, am I permitted under the "business freezing" order of the Prices Board to establish a shoe repair department?

A. — The order does not cover repairs of any kind. Consequently you are at liberty to open a repair department provided man-power, equipment and supplies are available.

Q. — I live in the country and it may not be a simple matter for me to go to a distributing centre in order to get my new ration book. Can my neighbor do this for me?

A. — Yes. In rural districts an adult may bring in his neighbors' book. But be sure your application card is properly filled out and signed by yourself before you give your book to him.

Q. — Our church intends to hold a bazaar in the fall. Is a license of the Prices Board required?

A. — No. Occasional church banquets, socials and bazaars are permitted without the issue of a license being required.

Q. — We have a used but still quite good motor on hand and believe that some other manufacturing concern could put it to service. Is there any way in which this can be arranged?

A. — Report it to the Used Goods Administrator, Lumsden Building, Toronto, who operates a registry for idle used machinery and equipment and who may be able to put you in touch with a buyer who needs just such a motor.

Fashion Flashes

THE NECESSITY of conservation of fabric means not only a slim line, but judging from the new collections, cap sleeves and very deep, scooped-out necklines. This, of course, applies mostly to after-five things.

WITHOUT EXCEPTION every house and shop seems to be plugging the fur-lined overcoat. A greenish-brown soft tweed coat lined with nutria, and a coat of vermillion red woollen lined with black caracul are two exceptionally smart designs.

VARIETY is the keynote of the new hats, with everything from the small and simple to the large elaborately trimmed model offered. Nice for daytime wear is a Breton of grey tweed with kettle brim scalloped and piped with dark green suede. The suede trims the crown and is used in leaf appliques on crown and brim.

ONCE AGAIN the shops are preparing for winter and heavy orders for fur coats have been booked. A smart coat is a Chesterfield done in black Persian lamb with velvet collar and velvet buttons.

ONE WAY to dress up one of the basic black dresses is by treating it to a colorful velvet jabot and matching gloves.

CLEVER IDEAS abound in the new collections. A lovely suit for afternoon wear has a skirt of brown velveteen and a jacket of topaz yellow velveteen. The blouse is a sequin covered lace sweater. For dinner wear there is a full length skirt, making it a four-piece costume.

FOXBORO GUILD

The regular monthly dinner of the Presbyterian Guild was held in Foxboro on Aug. 11th, at the home of Mrs. Chas. Bailey. A large number were present and the sum of $10.25 was realized from the dinner. In the afternoon a joint meeting of the Guild and W.M.S. was presided over by Miss Bessie Spencer. The program, prepared by Mrs. Roy Bartlett and Miss Verna Peacock, was as follows: Hymn, Scripture lesson by Mrs. MacDonald and prayer by Bessie Spencer.

The treasurer's reports were read and business discussion followed. A very interesting reading on the author of "Abide With Me" was given by Muriel Bartlett. Verna Peacock gave the topic from the W.M.S. study book, "The Hungarians in Canada." Readings were given by Mrs. Earl Ketcheson and Miss Nellie Bell. There was a Biblical contest by Mrs. Roy Bartlett with Miss Bessie Spencer being the winner. The singing of the National Anthem and prayer by Rev. Mr. MacDonald brought the meeting to a close.

Use Hand Lotions Year Round

Frances Rafferty often gives herself a home manicure.

(By HELEN FOLLETT)

HERE'S YOUR policy about hands, young ladies of the teen age: keep them scrupulously clean, protect them, beautify them with lubricants and lotions. If father asks you to help in the victory garden, put on gloves.

Grime works havoc with the skin, as it does with fine fabrics. When you wash your hands, make a good job of it. Use warm water, be fussy about soap, and scour with a brush if necessary. Don't do as the small kiddies do, let the water run over them and remove the dirt with the towel. The towel is a tattle tale; mama will know.

Don't forget that it is important to rinse away the soap, that drying should be thorough. Should it happen that you're a grand home girl, help prepare vegetables, use the pulp of a lemon to remove stains. When your finger-nails look dusty, plunge them into a cut lemon. The eaves will come out white as snow. A nail white pencil is a handy thing to have around the house. Easier to use than an eave bleach.

Hand lotions should be used all the year round. We think of them in cold weather when the skin chaps, but they have a beautifying effect in the summer season and tend to keep the hands from freckling. Some evening, when you're wondering what to do, give your hands a brisk friction with toilet lanoline.

Do, please, mind your nail polish. The minute it starts to look patchy, remove it, put on a fresh coat. Two light films stay put longer than one heavy application.

Once a week work up the cuticle around the nails with an orange wood stick, first applying an oil or cream to soften the flesh. When wiping your hands, after washing them, press back the flesh with the towel.

And stop that bad habit of biting off fingernails. Snip them away with curved scissors. Any wound invites infection, and an infected fingernail is a serious matter.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Her Family Knew Better Than She Did About Introducing a "Boy Friend"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

What an argument my family and I had at the dinner table last evening! It was such a tempest that I'd like to have you tell me whether I really did commit such a social error as my family says I did.

My boy friend is an army private now home on furlough. One of my brothers is in the navy, also happens to be home now on furlough, and my younger brother is about to leave for the army. At a neighborhood "welcoming home" party night before last, I introduced my boy-friend, as I always do, as "my boy-friend." My brothers were standing near, and heard me. Last evening they began to razz me and said that I was a "hick" to say "my boy friend" instead of saying my boy friend's name when I introduced him. I was bowled over when my mother and father agreed with them, even though we aren't engaged and have no intention of being.

Peggy.

I wish I could tell you you're right and your family wrong . . . but I can't.

Your brothers said just the right thing: for a girl to introduce a boy as "my boy-friend" is "hick," and it is a give-away that she has what is called a "proprietary attitude" toward the young man. Since you say you haven't this, and if you don't want to seem to have it, discard this nitroduction-form. It's bad form, and it's bad business too, for often, very often, a girl's introducing him as "my boy friend" scares the boy off from whatever degree of friendship there is between them!

If a girl is engaged to a young man she may introduce him as "my fiance," with usually the addition of his name. If she isn't engaged to him, she introduces him by his name, as she does any other friend.

Courtesy Tip

We hear much about that important "first impression" one should make, and not enough about that equally, perhaps more, important "last impression." For example, your reply to the gracious words said by your new acquaintance leaving after an introduction . . . "I am so glad to have met you." You'll leave a deplorable last impression if you murmur something about "mutual" or "likewise" or "same here."

Make your proper and gracious reply echo in your new acquaintance's mind and memory . . . say "Thank you, And I am so happy to have met you too," or "Thank you, I enjoyed so much our chat together. I do hope we'll meet again (or 'soon,' or 'very soon')." If you are positive you caught the name correctly, add the name to your "Thank you."

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

(By ALAN RANDAL)

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London (CP) — Prompters of the Royal Air Force are men who have nothing to do with the services—the experts of the Ministry of Economic Warfare. In many cases they decide where the R.A.F.'s bombers should go. The R.A.F. sends them there and decides when it is best for them to go. Sometimes it isn't the R.A.F. at all but the American Air Force which does the job.

One instance of this co-operation between the Economics Ministry and the air force was a flying fortress raid on Huls in the Ruhr, when the bombers struck at a synthetic rubber plant.

The Economic Warfare Ministry received word that this plant was ripe for attack. It had prompted many night bombing raids against industrial targets and even convoys carrying raw materials, but this was the first time it has become known that the ministry supplied information for the planning of daylight assault.

Analysing this attack in relation to the general rubber situation in Germany a Ministry of Economic Warfare official said: "If the raid interfers with the production of this plant even for a single week it will be a serious thing.

"The rubber situation in the European branch of the Axis is very tight indeed. Germany's synthetic production is not enough for the minimum requirements of her armed forces alone."

Germany's annual rubber consumption is estimated at 180,000 tons and the Huls plant was one of the most important in the country which the Germans went to great lengths to hide and camouflage. They described it merely as a "chemical works."

Heartening to the ministry were the reconnaissance photographs taken after the raid. They showed that no part of the target escaped high explosive bombs. Highly combustible portions of the plant were exploded and set on fire.

For months the Ministry of Economic Warfare has been concentrating on the German rubber situation, contriving to worsen it. During the winter the Navy intercepted 30,000 tons which were on the way to Germany from Japanese-occupied Malaya.

Chronic Inflamed Throat May Indicate Child Suffers From Sinus Infection

Sinus infections occur in children as well as in grownups, and these infections in children may be chronic.

According to Drs. Edward E. Brown and Valentine P. Wasson of New York City, there are a number of signs which makes it possible to diagnose the disorder. When a child has dark circles under the eyes or there is puffiness under the eyes, particularly in the morning, sinus infection may be present. This happens because the ethmoid sinuses, which are located around the eyes, fill up with secretions when the child is lying down. This, in turn, results in the swelling. Occasionally the swellings may be so great as to close the eyes completely.

Another sign of sinus infection is constant inflammation of the throat. This happens because the secretions from the nose drip into the throat and produce irritation. When there is sinus infection it is not unusual for the lymphoid tissue on the back wall of the throat to become swollen. The chronic infection from the sinus causes the enlargement of this lymphoid tissue. Together with the circles under the eyes, there may be puffiness along the nose. This puffiness is seen most often during colds. Other signs of sinus infection are pus secretions in the nose, crusts in the nose, breathing through the mouth, talking with a nasal twang, and hoarseness and huskiness of the voice.

There are still other symptoms which may indicate that a sinus infection is present. For example, there may be tenderness of the various sinuses. In some instances the lymph glands in the neck become enlarged.

Drs. Brown and Wasson think that twitching of the eyebrows, blinking, frowning and jerking of the shoulder or head may result from streptococcic infection of the sinuses. Sniffing, hacking and blocking of the nasal passages may also indicate that sinus infections are present. Partial deafness and bad odor to the breath are other things which may develop as a result of chronic sinus infection.

Of course, many of these symptoms may be produced by other disorders. However, when a child has trouble with the nose and throat over a long period of time these various symptoms may indicate that sinus infection is present.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Soldier Experiences the Bitter Awakening That Follows Many Hasty War Weddings

World War No. 2, though it differs from its predecessor in most other respects, evokes the same old romantic magic. Girls still suddenly see Sir Galahads in boys they never noticed before, and boys want to go out and fight for girls they never wanted to go out with before.

Yes, Sally Smith—who went thru' high school with Billy Jones for four years; paid no attention to him; thought he was commonplace and freckled—now sees him as a Knight in armor and believes she has been in love with him all along.

Sally and Billy rush through a war wedding with other members of the class as bridesmaids and ushers, and other new marriages or engagements, result among these attendants in the wedding. Sometimes it's the real thing, and the boy and girl who never really saw each other in a romantic light until the war, are really in that blissful state known as "living happily ever after."

But as a rule, the hurried engagements and wedding produced under such circumstances do not last. The youngsters don't really know each other. The war just keys them up to such a highly emotional state that the promises to be the "one and only" and wait for him seems the only decent and patriotic thing for the girl to do. But there isn't enough of the components of real romance and marriage to make it last.

The casual letter that breaks everything off is usually a bitterly cruel blow to the boy who really does care. But usually it is for the best. Certainly it would have been a lucky thing to have happened to the soldier who wrote me the following:

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been in the Army for six months, and turned over everything I had to my wife before I went into the service. Previous to our marriage my wife had always supported herself, but somehow I didn't like the idea of her working in an office, though it would have been better, as things have turned out, if she had kept busy.

My sister informed me that my wife had been drinking considerably and that she was in the habit of going to taverns with other men. This I refused to believe, and quarrelled with my sister. I was given a short furlough and went to our apartment. My wife had been drinking, and so had the man with her, who, not knowing I was her husband, started to throw me out. But it was the stairs for him. She took the part of this loathsome slacker, and began abusing me. And now I feel I'd like to end it all. What has a man in my position, who has lost faith in the woman he loved devotedly, left to live for? We're going overseas, thanks be.

— W. K.

You made a mistake in marrying her ,and that's all there is to it.

No one could criticize you fairly for divorcing her. Don't take the short cut of forgetfulness by drinking and dissipation. Such a woman isn't worth it. Be a good soldier, and while you may not realize it at the moment, the Army is a mighty good place to forget such a tragedy as yours. The best of luck to you.

Rookie Butch Nieman Wins Four Games in Week For Braves By Perfect Clutch Hitting

Only Batting .274 but 18 of 55 Hits Good for Extra Bases

INDIANS SECOND

By JUDSON BAILEY
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

Elmer (Butch) Nieman, a rookie outfielder for Boston Braves, may never get to be known as one of the major league's outstanding performers, but right now he is providing the finest clutch hitting in baseball.

In the last week he personally has decided four important games for the Braves, yesterday hitting a two-run homer in the 10th inning to beat Chicago 5-4 and force the Cubs back into seventh place in the National League.

Last Saturday Nieman hit his second home run of the season in the ninth inning to beat Brooklyn, on Sunday he smashed a ninth-inning double to down the Dodgers again and Thursday he tripled in the 12th inning to beat the Cubs.

This rates as a pretty good week's work for the former Kansas State football star who came up from the eastern league last spring with a .207 batting average and more than justifies his presence in the cleanup slot in Boston's batting order. Although his batting average is .274, 18 of his 55 hits have been for extra bases.

The Braves-Cubs game yesterday was the only contest in the National League to escape inclement weather, but the American League had a full program highlighted by the Cleveland Indians winning their sixth straight and taking undisputed possession of second place. The tribe clustered its 10 hits off Don Black for three-run rallies in the fourth and seventh innings to beat Philadelphia Athletics 6-4.

Unable To Gain.

Cleveland was unable to gain on New York Yankees, however, because Spud Chandler pitched a 4-0 shutout over St. Louis Browns. In acquiring his 15th victory and fourth shutout Chandler allowed nine hits, two more than his teammates made, but he kept the blows scattered while New York's collection included a home run by Ken Sears and three timely doubles.

Luke Appling, veteran shortstop of Chicago White Sox, bagged the 2,000th hit of his career with a single that drove in a first-inning run and Chicago went on to clip the Boston Red Sox 3-2 on a two-run homer by Tommy Turner in the second inning.

Appling joined eight other players still active in the major leagues who have topped the 2,000 hurdle. Sharing the honor are Paul Waner, who has passed 3,000, and Dick Bartell, Joe Cronin, Doc Cramer, Chuck Klein, Billy Herman, Mel Ott and Joe Medwick.

Rudy York, who had hit seven home runs in his last six games, was stopped by Milo Candini's six-hit pitching as Washington Senators walloped Detroit Tigers 11-3 with eight of their runs coming in the first two innings. The Senators thus moved past the Tigers into third place.

JERSEY GIANTS BEAT MONTREAL

Crip Poli, Who Knows All the Answers, Shuts Out the Royals

(By the Associated Press)

Crip Polli has been around long enough to know all the answers and last night he unfurled his knowledge for the benefit of Montreal Royals and hurled Jersey City Giants to a 3-0 victory.

It was the 12th triumph for the veteran whose teammates have won only 47 times all season.

The contest went only seven innings, being carded as the first half of a twin bill. Weather conditions, however, didn't permit the second game to get under way.

The twin bills involving Newark at Rochester and Buffalo at Syracuse also were postponed. They were the only games scheduled.

Nap Reyes' smashing double to centre field gave the Jerseys one run in the first inning, scoring McClure who had singled and moved to second on Juan Torres' sacrifice.

Two more counters were registered in the fourth, the big blow being another two-base poke by Jim Steiner.

Last night's postponements made doubleheaders necessary for all teams today. Oddest arrangement is at Syracuse where the first game gets under way at 2 p.m. and the second at 6:30.

'Killer' Katan To Meet Morgan In Main Bout

The only man ever to beat "Toar" Morgan in a Belleville ring is John "Killer" Katan, the No. 1 challenger for the world's heavyweight wrestling championship. Morgan fought eight times in Belleville and won seven consecutive decisions before losing to Katan. Now, with "Palermo John" holding the No. 1 challenger rank as the result of battling "Wild Bill" Longson to a draw the other night here, Morgan sensed his life's chance and demanded a return bout with Katan.

"After all, Katan only beat me by the narrowest margin and I think I'm entitled to a return bout. Things will be different now that the Palermo ruffian has moved into the challenger's seat, it will be more incentive for me to win. I can beat Katan and then demand a bout with Longson," explained the popular ex-Marine as he signed his contract to meet Katan in Promoter Tunney's office Friday.

In support of this important meeting Skipper Tunney has matched a newcomer in Fred Steele, the Glendale, Cal., smoothie who meets "Texas Dick" Bishop, while Joe Maich and George Tofalos will ring up the night's curtain at the Hume Arena next Wednesday.

London, Aug. 14 (CP).—He was only 16, this deck-boy on a merchantman, when taken prisoner by the Nazis three years ago, and his mother in London felt a little perturbed when his letter began with the admonition "don't disown me if I come home with a flat nose and tin ears."

Then she read on and found that her son, Victor Jones, had taken up boxing behind the barbed wire "because it's an asset which one can well do with in this world."

Vic has been boxing now for more than two years under the tuition of an unnamed prisoner who had more than 20 years' ring experience. They'll probably form a manager-fighter team after the Allies release them on the way to Berlin.

"Boxing has done me a lot of good," Vic wrote. "It has kept me fit and healthy, occupied my time and given me confidence in myself."

And speaking generally, Vic said, "These three years have not been wasted. On the contrary, I have had a far better education and insight on life than if I had spent them in college, or elsewhere."

Back from two years of high excitement out east where his exploits included the no mean feat of escaping from a Japanese prison camp, Johnny King, British bantamweight boxing champion, plans an early return to the ring.

Johnny, an able seaman, said he was anxious to take on all challengers for his title but he wants a couple of warm-up bouts first. Among the challengers are Jackie Paterson, world flyweight king who has an eye on the bantam crown, and Jim Brady, holder of the British Empire bantam title.

Johnny won't talk about his experiences of the last two years but he was on the battleship Prince of Wales when it was bombed and sunk by the Japanese, and on another ship sunk in the Far East. He also saw fighting at Hong Kong and Singapore.

Writ of Attachment Filed Against Hamilton Boxer's Purse

(By The Canadian Press)

Jackie Callura of Hamilton, Ont., yesterday found himself facing a legal opponent at New Orleans when a petition for a writ of attachment was filed in civil district court in connection with an alleged financial transaction.

The petition was entered by Joseph Bagnato of Toronto against the featherweight boxing champion and his manager, Leo P. Bradley of Providence, R.I., with Hypolite Guinle, fight promoter of New Orleans cited as garnishee. It was alleged that Callura and Bradley executed a promissory note for $15,000, on June 1, 1940, payable to Baganto one year after date at six per cent interest. It was claimed that neither interest nor principal had been paid.

Callura is in training at New Orleans for a 15-round match in defence of his title against Phil Terranova, the bout being scheduled to take place there Monday night.

Chalky Wright, ex-featherweight champion, did not join the Maritime service as scheduled yesterday after all. The draft board at New York ordered him inducted into the U.S. army instead and told him to report Aug. 28.

The annual Scotch doubles lawn bowling tournament for married couples, creatd 16 years ago at Preston, Ont., by R. B. Osgood, attracted 16 entries this y ar from Galt, Ayr, Guelph and Preston. The winners were Mr. and Mrs. George Arthur of Preston with Mr. and Mrs. Amos of Guelph second.

In their last scheduled game of the Niagara Senior Baseball League at Merritton last night the St. Catharines Combines took Crowland Union Jacks into camp 6-2. The Saints wound up in third place and will meet Port Colborne in the first of the playoff series.

Toronto, Aug. 14 — (CP) — The McIntyre Curling Club near Timmins, Ont., is holding a mid-summer bonspiel Aug. 23-26 with proceeds to be used for the purchase of cigarets for Timmins boys overseas. Used to be that the curlers played the game all winter and talked it all summer. Now, maybe there'll be no time for talk. E. P. Atkinson of Toronto, honorary secretary of the Dominion Curling Association, says that to the best of his knowledge, this will be the first summer bonspiel ever held in Canada. St. Paul, Minn., set a precedent with a summer 'spiel last month.

Curlers from Timmins, Schumacher, South Porcupine, Dome Mines, Iroquois Falls and Kirkland Lake will participate in the McIntyre event with the entry restricted to 62 rinks. Six sheets of ice are being installed and there will be 5 draws daily. Six-end games will be played in the preliminaries, 10-enders in the finals of both consolidation and main events.

An interesting feature is the night shift draw for miners working from 7 p. m. to 3 a. m. They will curl from 12 noon to 5 p. m. in line with the regular winter practice at McIntyre where the rink is used almost 24 hours daily as the various shifts leave work.

The idea for the summer 'spiel came indirectly as result of the summer figure skating school conducted at the Porcupine Skating Club at McIntyre. The six-weeks course winds up next week.

MILLIE FOSTER HURLS RELIANCE TO 11-5 VICTORY

Aircraft Girls Finish Third in Regular Schedule of Softball Loop

BUKER BEST HITTER

Millie Foster's five-hit pitching, plus some timely hitting, gave the Reliance gals a clean-cut 11 to 5 win over Bell Sargents in a sudden death play-off game for the third slot in the Belleville Ladies' Softball League at the Armouries Lawn last night. The result of the game advanced Reliance into third place and left Bell-Sargents in the last play-off slot. Now the league semi-final playdowns open Monday evening with Bell-Sargent visiting the league-leading Bristol nine in the first of a best-in-three series.

Reliance went to work with a vengeance and scored a trio of runs each in the first two frames to practically cinch the saw-off. Jack Symons' Bell-Sargents came back strongly to count one in the first and three in the second, but Millie Foster, on the Reliance hilltop, blanked the "lock-makers" from the second until the final stanza, when the losers scored their fifth run. In the meantime the Reliance lassies added to their count by scoring a race of runs in the third and 4th and added another in the fifth to end their tallying at eleven.

Edna Semark and Lena Baker clouted circuit blows for the winners, as practically every member of Skipper Harold Kurtz' nine counted base knocks. June Blaind had a double and two singles and A. Wright counted a two base blow and a single, aside from the homers. However, the principle hitter of the night was Lena Buker, who batted perfectly with three singles and a round-tripper in four tries. Helen Garrow paced the losers with a double and two singles to count three of the Sargents' five hits. Bessie Doolittle went the rout as the Sargent's moundsman.

The line-ups — Reliance: Bloom ss, Wright lf, Coathup 1b, Blaind c, McKenna cf, Hickerson 3b, Foster p, Buker 2b and Semark rf. Bell-Sargents: Benn 2b, Reddick rf, Garrow 1b, Donovan ss, Archer cf, Tapp 3b, Clarke lf, Farrar c and Doolittle p.

Score by innings—

Reliance	332	210	0 —	11 runs.
Bell-Sargent	130	000	1 —	5 runs.

Umpires — Young and Colling.
Scorer: Chas. Barnett.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

A Terrible Trick

Tigers had been ravaging a village and the terror-stricken natives sent for the nearest white man to assist them .

This man was a crack shot, and had never been known to miss. His method was to tie a goat to the foot of a tree at dusk, climb the tree and, when the tigers came for the goat, fire at the flash of their eyes. In the morning they would be found dead, shot straight between the eyes.

He followed his usual procedure the first night, but although he fired several shots, when the day dawned the goat had gone and there were no dead tigers.

This happened on two succeeding nights. Perturbed, he took a huge torch with him on the fourth night and, instead of firing at the flashing eyes, switched on his torch and saw, to his amazement, six tigers advancing in pairs, each with one eyes closed.

May Be a Blessing

Fred Craig, Peterboro' sports columnist, reveals the fact that the Liftlock City hockey rink has been sold. No doubt this would indicate Peterboro' will have a new modern artificial ice rink before the 1944 hockey season rolls around. Naturally there will be no hockey in the Liftlock City again this year, but with the selling of the old Brock St. rink it may be just a blessing in disguise, as the sportsmen of Peterboro' may now realize the need of an up-to-date arena. Let's hope so. Commenting on the passing of the Brock St. rink, Scribe Craig says: "The sale of the Brock St. rink has definitely written finis to the history of hockey in the old structure that was erected 40 years ago with the subscriptions of Peterborough fans, after the capture of the Ontario intermediate title in 1902 had led to demands for a new hockey cushion, to replace the little Charlotte Street rink. Now that the building has been disposed of there is little chance of hockey ever being played there again. There was none, of course, last winter and no prospects of any at the Brock St. Arena during the coming season. In other words, hockey is out for the duration, and as much time afterward as it takes to promote the erection of a modern plant here. The old rink has long since outlived its original mission, but nevertheless its passing from the role of a shrine of hockey brings regret to older fans who remember the palmy days of the Brock Street rink, recall some of the grand battles that have been seen there and thrill again at the memory of the long list of great hockey players who have been seen in action in the old ice-box since it first began operating in 1903."

Girls' Play-offs On

Millie Foster's five-hit hurling was good enough to place Reliance in third place in the Belleville Ladies' Softball League playdowns, as Reliance downed Bell-Sargent 11 to 5 in a sudden-death saw-off last night. Some tidy willow-swinging by June Blaind, Edna Semark and especially Lena Buker, assured Harold Kurtz' Reliance of victory and third slot in the final league standing.

After last night's game, Secretary Eddie Schrieder announced the first round play-off dates. On Monday Bell-Sargents meet the league-leading Bristol gals. On Wednesday it will be Reliance vs. SWACO and Friday sees the return game of Monday night's fixture. Secretary Schrieder added that the semi-finals will be of the best-in-three series while the league final series hasn't exactly been decided upon, but in all probability will be a five-game round.

Riddle Sets Mark

Every time Elmer Riddle goes to the mound for the Cincinnati Reds and emerges without an error, he establishes a new major league mark in fielding for his position. Including the first game of the double-header with Philadelphia July 25, Elmer had appeared in 99 games as a hurler, the total number he has worked since joining Cincinnati in 1939, and had not miscued once, bettering the record by 11.

The previous record was held by Ted Lyons, who pitched in 88 games for the Chicago White Sox from August 11, 1934, to the first game, June 12, 1938, without making a fielding error. Riddle equalled that performance, June 6, bettered it June 13, and has been lengthening the gap ever since.

Poor Old Giants

In a fanning bee recently Manager Mel Ott, of the New York Polo Grounders, came up with a new kind of an "all" team—an "all-poison" club, composed of men who have bullied and badgered his woe-laden Giants at every given opportunity. "When they play against us, some guys seem to have been given a shot in the arm," said Ott. "You just know they can't be that good all the time."

In the infield, Mel put Elbie Fletcher at first, Billy Herman second, Stan Hack at third and Eddie Miller at shortstop. He placed Stan Musial, Billy Nicholson and Vince DiMaggio in the outfield. "The battery comes easy," said Ott, "Pollet and Walker Cooper, that's all. We can never get Cooper out and we've only beaten Pollet once."

Remember When—?

Jockey Joe Dyer, leading rider on the Quebec circuit tracks, showed peak form four years ago today by bringing home a trio of winners. Dyer had mounts in each of seven races, running third in two and fourth and fifth in the others.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 147

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

I wonder what experts keep thinking about? Some new and confusing exceptions no doubt. But meanwhile learn Horse Sense. It's easy and clear. It will not need changing each year after year.

To pick out your best bid again and again, avoid any bunk and obey T-A-N. It may look too simple. But, but it no buts. It may keep the experts from driving you nuts.

All bids follow the order of choice in T-A-N; takeout, assist, no-trump. A takeout to a new suit is forcing for one round. Any other non-jump bid does not force partner to bid again.

Before you respond with any bid, partner assumes you have only two tricks. Each raise with a suit bid consumes another suit trick. Each voluntary no-trump bid consumes another no-trump trick.

You have this hand:

♠9 5 2
♥K 7 6 3
♣A Q 7 4

Your hand contains only one biddable suit; the club suit. You also have four suit tricks, three of which are no-trump tricks. Each ace or king or queen is a no-trump trick.

Suppose partner starts with an opening bid of one diamond. T-A-N tells you that your first response is a takeout to two clubs. After which, suppose partner then bids two diamonds.

Partner's rebid in diamonds is not a takkeout to a new suit. So you are not forced to bid again. Any second round bid you now make is voluntary.

To decide if you have a second response, follow T-A-N again. You have no more takeouts. You have not an assist, even for a rebiddable diamond suit. If you have any bid now, it must be no-trump.

Unless forced to bid, you should pass unless you have unshown values. If you bid notrump voluntarily, you must have unshown no-trump tricks. You have one. Bid two no-trump on the second round.

AT THE CAPITOL

"YANKEE DOODLE DANDY"

The year's most spectacular film starts Sunday Midnight at the Capitol Theatre. Yet, spectacular, in its true sense, does not describe Warner's "Yankee Doodle Dandy." The picture has and does several things which make it a fine film, but the warmth of its story makes it great!

"Yankee Doodle Dandy" tells the life story of America's greatest showman—George M. Cohan. And it tells that story in the grandest way possible — through the songs and plays that he wrote — his vaudeville and legitimate stage career and through the inspiration he gave to others. It is the life story of a man, but it is also the life story of show business from the 1880's until today.

James Cagney plays the role of George M. Cohan, and advance reports say that he fits it in every detail. His hoofing is perfect and his talking of songs rather than really singing them, which was always Cohan's way of putting over a number, makes the characterization perfect.

The cast is made up of a fine group of performers. Joan Leslie is cast as Mary, a naive girl who wants to get on the stage. She meets George M. Cohan . and he gives here a chance to do a song and dance act. However, he decides he'd make a better wife than a vaudevillian, and she becomes Mrs. George M. Cohan. The Four Cohans, which in the Gay Nineties was famous in every town that was large enough to have a theatre, was made up of Jerry Cohan, played by Walter Huston; Nellie, his wife, played by Rosemary DeCamp, Josie, George's sister, portrayed by Jeanne Cagney, and George himself. Sam Harris, the theatrical producer who played a very important part in Cohan's life, is portrayed by Richard Whorf. Fay Templeton, who was the country's heart-throb at the turn of the century, is played by alluring Irene Manning, whose charming soprano voice does full justice to Cohan's lovely tune, — "Mary's A Grand Old Name."

All George M. Cohan's unforgettable melodies are played, including "The Yankee Doodle Boy," "Give My Regards to Broadway," and "Over There."

One of the picture's biggest thrills and what must have been one of the most important days in George M. Cohan's life, was the Congressional Medal of Honor given him by President Roosevelt in recognition of having written "Over There" and "You're a Grand Old Flag."

On the same program, The Canadian Universal News and the added sensation "Train Busters" a Canada Carries On" feature will be shown.

AT THE BELLE

"MY FIEND FLICKA"

Roddy McDowall, the English youngster, has definitely gone American.

His latest film, Mary O'Hara's "My Friend Flicka" the Technicolor picture which is due today at the Belle Theatre, proves that Roddy, who rocketed to fame for his "How Green Was My Valley" portrayal, has acquired all the traits of the kid who lives next door to your house. The picture was filmed in the Utah Mountains, and while on location Roddy really discovered America.

During his off-hours he ran barefoot, rode the ranch horses, went fishing with Preston Foster, his screen father — and loved every minute of it.

A city boy — Roddy lived in London — country life was new to him. Its cattle and horses made a big impression, great expanses of trees, tilled land and grazing meadow.

American food was another of Roddy's greatest surprises. He's still astonished at the abundance, even with rationing, of fresh vegetables and fruits — his favorite is cantaloupe — and he never misses an ice-cream dessert if he can help it.

Since he's been in the United States, Roddy has acquired much of the local slang. "Swell" and "Okay" are now firmly implanted in his vocabulary. but he was slightly bewildered by the wealth of words applying to cowboy life. He caught on fast, though, and now he is a pet user of such phrases as "shootin' irons," and "Wal, I'll e hawgtied" — but he reached the limit when he went over to his mother, and said "Rassle up some grub, Mom."

Featured with Roddy in the film version of Mary 'Hara's best seller are Preston Foster and Rita Johnson.

THROUGH THE DIAL SIGHT

A Weekly Column Devoted to the Activities of the Members of the Armed Services at Home and Abroad

Leading Airwoman Pat Joslin of Kitchener had a thrill and a disappointment as she passed through London en route to her work with the R.C.A.F. Bomber Group Overseas, a few days ago.

Pat, one of the W.D.'s teleprinters who arrived overseas recently, was sitting in a bus with her cousin, Leading Airwoman Mary Barr of Simcoe. They were watching the crowds in one London railway station as they waited to transfer to another. Suddenly Pat spotted her brother, Lieut. Thomas Joslin, on the crowded platform.

"There wasn't a minute to lose," she said, "so I climbed over my luggage and chased after him. But it wasn't any use. He went down into the Underground, and I'm so new to that sort of thing I didn't dare to follow."

"He didn't know I'd arrived," she explained, "and I hadn't seen him for three whole years. We'd have met, too, if it hadn't been for the crowds and noise. Just like the Union Station in Toronto at a week-end."

Many a suggestion has floated around the City of Oshawa Squadron in England about what to do when you miss the last bus to the station. Least popular is the way out chosen by L.A.C. Cliff Stockwell, Cottam, Ont.:

"Curling up in a telephone booth isn't so bad," he claims. "It's a great feeling in the morning to open the door. The fresh air is just like a case of orange juice."

For the benefit of Canadians who have not yet been to the old country, the General Post Office who operate the telephone system in the British Isles, has thoughtfully provided telephone booths outside on the street and many along the highways to accommodate people after the shops are closed and haven't telephones in their own homes.

His Commission.

An unofficial story from Libya was recounted by Major-General J. M. A. Durrant, General Officer Commanding the Western Command, while speaking at a fare-well luncheon tendered to him by the Y.M.C.A.

During the victorious march against the Italians, the commanding officer of a Scottish unit was concerned because his men were not capturing as many Italians as the Australians. Appealing to uphold the honor of Scotland, he offered a reward of 2s 6d a hundred for all the prisoners brought in.

Next morning one of the Scotties presented himself with 800 prisoners, and surprised and delighted, the colonel duly paid £1.

As the man was leaving, the colonel asked him how he had managed to capture, single-handed, 800 Italians.

"I didn't," replied the Scottie, "I bought them from the Aussie at a bob a hundred."

When the First Battalion Argyll Light Infantry (R) begin their fall training the unit will have some new and modern mechanized equipment for training of new recruits. For instance Lieut.-Col. B. C. Donnan, officer commanding, revealed today that three universal carriers, an additional 800-pound truck, two or three army motorcycles, two of the latest six-pound anti-aircraft guns. All members will receive special instructions on all these new pieces of equipment. Here's an opportunity for new recruits to get in the army game and learn the latest methods of warfare first hand.

The C.W.S.F. will open their autumn training period on Sept. 1st and all new recruits are anxiously waiting for their first taste of army life.

A lieutenant on his first furlough to London was rather freely criticizing British methods of work and business as he waited his turn in the barber chair.

Lieutenant (to barber)—"You Britons don't specialize. You should stick to one branch of work and master it completely."

After he had become comfortably settled in the barber's chair, the barber lathered his face liberally, then sat down to read. When five minutes had elapsed, the lieutenant inquired, "Well, why don't you shave me?"

Barber—"Oh, we only lather here. You have to go into the next block for a shave."

Lieut. Kalbfleisch has returned to Belleville from Ottawa and resumed his duties as training officer for the Argyll Light Infantry .

Several promotions were made in the ranks of the Argylls while at summer camp. L/Cpl. Jack Murphy was promoted to the rank of corporal, as were Tprs. S. Hamilton, E. W. Yateman and J. Pershick.

Given post as acting lance corporals were Tprs. V. C. Bradshaw, G. Thompson, V. C. Bradshaw and J. W. Cook.

Capt. K. R. Holmes, adjutant of the Argyll Light Infantry, is leaving on furlough next week and will vacation at Bass Lake.

The Argylls are playing intersectional games with the Mountain View R.C.A.F. section leaders after returning from camp. Incidentally the boys appreciated the ice cream provided them at camp by Lieut.-Col. B. C. Donnan.

C.M.S. Charlie Holmes who was injured during training at Connaught Ranges, is around again, but had to have his arm X-rayed.

Norm Harris, well-known Toronto band leader, and Freddie Trennaire, Harris' soloist, were guests at the Argyll officers' mess during their stay at Standish Hall.

Last Tuesday all members of the Argylls were paid in full for their camp period.

CHIEFS OF STAFFS

to Quebec last Tuesday afternoon with Prime Minister Churchill. They include Gen. Sir Alan Brooke, Chief of the Imperial Staff; Admiral of the Fleet Sir Dudley Pound, First Sea Lord; Air Chief Marshal Sir Charles Portal, Chief of Air Staff; Lt.-Gen. Sir Hastings Ismay, Chief of Staff to the Prime Minister; and Vice-Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten, Chief of Combined Operations.

Canadians May Move Back

The Canadian chiefs of staff have for several days been in conference with the United Kingdom chiefs, presumably on matters affecting particularly the role to be played in future operations by the Canadian Army overseas.

There were rumors today that the Canadian 1st Division after its gallant share in the Sicilian campaign as part of the British 8th Army, would be moved back into the main Canadian Army, which would then have an opportunity of entering any future assaults as a complete unit.

Such officials as could be reached refused to discuss the rumor.

Now that the conference requires only the presence of Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt to make it complete it is expected the chiefs of staff will concentrate on data and recommendations to be laid before the two Allied leaders when they are ready to complete their work here.

It is not expected any inkling will be given the public as to the plans drafted at the forthcoming conference, so far as strategy is concerned; but important announcements may be made as to decisions on the attitude to be taken toward capitulating enemies, government of occupied or liberated lands, treatment of the war guilty and peace objectives.

Congress Entertained

Prime Minister Mackenzie King, official conference host and participant in discussions held with the British Prime Minister and chiefs of staff here Wednesday, last night entertained the conferees who are already here, in the Chateau Frontenac.

This afternoon he will entertain newspaper, picture and radio men and women, here to cover the conference, at a reception in the citadel, vice-regal residence and the place where he entertained Mr. Churchill and is expected to be host to President Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill when they are both here later.

Quebec's city fathers are seeking to arrange a public official reception for President Roosevelt when he arrives but it is not known whether security control will permit such a demonstration.

This evening all the conferees—and reporters too—are invited to a special performance of the Canadian Army show.

GIRL IN THE GREEN COAT by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

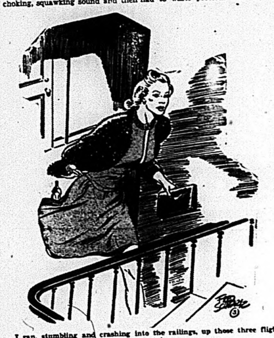
He was nearly always there at night, sometimes alone, practicing, but more often there would be two or three others sitting around talking or listening to Jan play. And, though he was meticulous about keeping the new rules and wouldn't have slept there nor cooked there as he used to, the icebox was still kept well stocked with materials for midnight snacks. If anyone was there, there would be highballs and sandwiches or sometimes scrambled eggs and coffee.

So tonight, as I came to that familiar landing, I stopped to listen to the piano and even sniffed to see if I could smell coffee, I took a few steps down the corridor, intending to go as far as Jan's door, to make sure.

And then, suddenly, I was scared, so scared that I couldn't have cried out nor run to save my life. I was just rooted to the spot with unreasonable, primitive terror. I didn't hear a thing, but I knew that I was not alone in that long, narrow hall. I knew as well as if I had seen it that there was someone, or something, waiting there, watching me. I don't know what kept me from running the few remaining steps and flinging myself, panting and pounding, onto Jan's door. My guardian angel, I guess. But I couldn't move. I just stood there, shaking, and after a while I turned my head, very, very slowly, and I saw what I had not noticed before—a pale streak of light coming from the partly open door of the vacant studio opposite Jan's. The vacant studios were always kept closed and locked, but this one was open, the street light from outside shining wanly on the floor. And as I watched, too terrified to move, that little wedge of light narrowed. Someone was in there, pushing the door shut.

I think I made some sort of choking, squawking sound and then



I ran, stumbling and crashing into the railings, up those three flights of stairs.

I ran, stumbling and crashing into the railings at the turns, up those three flights of stairs to our rooms.

Once in our own hall, I managed to pull myself together enough to turn the key in the lock and bolt the door behind me. Even then, safe in our warm, lamp-lit living room, with the hall door locked behind me and the reassuring sound of good old Peg's comfortable breathing in the room beyond, I stood there gasping and shaking, too weak to take another step.

Peg went right on sleeping peacefully. I dropped into one of the low, fat chairs, feeling a little foolish. Maybe I had imagined it. I hadn't imagined the open door into the vacant front studio, and I saw it swing closed, but maybe I imagined the breathing. I was breathing hard enough right now. Maybe Mr. Grant left the window open to air the studio and the breeze from the open window . . .

Except that Mr. Grant was never known to forget anything, and, besides, if the window was open maybe someone climbed in from the fire escape. Climbed in a front, second-storey window, right on Post Street! Very likely. Very likely, indeed!

The picture of somebody climbing in a front window on a brightly lighted street was too much even for me. Maybe it was somebody escaping out of the window. I toyed with that idea.

Anyway, I'm going to move, I thought, lying back on the down cushions beginning to relax at last. I'm going to tell Peg in the morning. I'm going to get out of here.

Yes, and go where? Back to a two-by-four apartment all by myself? Who, except the good-natured hard-sleeping Peg, would put up with me and my irregular newspaper hours? And as for getting married, whom did I want to marry? And, for that matter, who wanted to marry me?

I though back over the places where I had lived in the last few years since I had been alone. I thought of all the girls who envied me my place here with Peggy.

Still troubled, I got into bed and turned off the reading light. Then I thought I heard steps on the stairs. Don't be silly, why would anyone come up here? We never kept any money in the place, and we hadn't any jewelry. Who would bother us, a couple of none-too-beautiful working gals, not bothering anybody?

Then I thought somebody was trying the doorknob. I was practically sure somebody was trying the doorknob. Of course the door was bolted from the inside, but still there was somebody out there, trying to get in. I was positive of it.

I turned on the light. I read somewhere that if you turn on a light the prowler knows you are awake and goes away.

I sat up in bed and strained every nerve to listen. Peg went right on sleeping. It was all I could do to keep from waking her, out of sheer cowardice and misery. But I knew that she would be furious and disgusted with me if I did, so after a while I took a book and tried to read, peering around nervously and listening and shaking for what seemed hours.

The next thing I knew Peg was shaking me.

"Stay out all night if you want to, I don't care," she was saying, and she was in one of her worst before-coffee moods, "but don't expect me to fight with you to get you out of bed in the morning. It's YOUR job, and if you want to be late and lose it—"

I was in something of a mood myself.

"Considering that I WORKED last night," I began, crossly.

"If you call it work!"

"I certainly do."

I was going to ask her what she meant, but it was late and I knew it always made her mad when she had to waste precious time trying to wake me after I'd been out late.

Once she'd had her coffee, she'd be all right, I thought.

If I'd known where she thought I was—but I didn't. Looking back on it now, I wonder how I missed it. And that was just the FIRST ball I dropped.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking to himself in his private chair and ma said, William, who do you think I saw on the street today? You'll never guess in a thousand years, she said.

Then I'll save at least a lifetime by giving up before I even start, pop said, and ma said, I passed so close to him I could of touched him with my hand.

Do you suppose he would of tagged you back? pop said, and ma said, You haven't guessed who it was yet.

And you haven't told me, pop said and ma said, It was Zigfield Loose, the collumnist on the Evening Speaker who always manages to get such amazing facts about the personal life and habits of the big movie stars. For instance in yesterday's collumn he wrote that Arlene La Roo's father was an obscure junkman in the heart of Brooklyn. Imagine, William, the high and hawty Arlene La Roo, and he also said that Clinton Dangerfield, who always plays such virile he-man parts and constantly needs a shave in the pictures, is really a fugitive from his draft board in real life, and that Dolly Darly, that marvellous dancer who seems as light on her feet as 2 feathers, really suffers terribly from bunions. I knew immediately it was Zigfield Loose from his picture in the paper, ma said.

Was he wearing one purple sock and one red sock? pop said, and ma said, Such a question, why should he be?

Because I know all about the fellow, pop said. His whole life is a shady bundle of eccentricities which he tries to forget by exposing the quirks and foibles of others. He has served 2 jail sentences for chalking his name on the walls of public buildings, he shaves himself 5 times a day, using rootbeer instead of water, he doesn't dare go near the jungles because he's allergic to elefant skin, and he wears 2 parts in his hair, pop said.

Ma claiming he was just making it all up.

Labor Situation On Ontario Farms Now Quite Acute

Toronto, Aug. 14 — (CP) — The monthly crop report of the Ontario Department of Agriculture today said the labor situation on Ontario farms "is becoming more acute and is described by some as 'desperate.'"

The situation has been aggravated by the late season, periodic rains and heavy hay crops, said the report, adding that care of hoe crops and many other farm jobs are being neglected.

"Women and children are taking the place of men. Farmers and their families, in many instances, are becoming weary and are determined to cut down production accordingly next year, farm commandos have assisted to some extent with seasonal work in areas situated adjacent to urban centres."

Yields of fall wheat are disappointing and the grain is shrunken, the report said, while "reports indicate that production of spring gain in almost every county and district is likely to be much less than last year."

Pastures were better than average but have lost much of their feeding value due to maturity. While milk production dropped considerably, the decline was not as great as in previous years. All classes of livestock were reported in good condition and there have been slight increases in the hog and sheep population in some areas.

Precision Squad From ITS to Take Part in Carnival

By kind permission of Group Captain A. J. Snetsinger of No. 5 I.T.S. a precision squad from that station will give a demonstration at the opening night of the Kiwanis Carnival, which takes place on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday night of next week Front Street immediately north of the Carnival setup will be utilized for this demonstration and it will be worthwhile coming downtown to see for the members of the squad are almost mechanically perfect. All movements by the squad are completed without spoken orders, the members counting between each movement.

The members of the Kiwanis Club have gone to great length to produce a carnival that will be a worthy successor to the many that have been already given by this organization. Besides the games and general entertainment, that will be provided the club has arranged for two special draws and a contest. Tickets have been sold on a model sailing ship and a Hope Chest, which is being looked after by the Kiwanis Queens. This section of the Kiwanis organization have been most faithful in their efforts and have raised many large sums for Kiwanis work in the community.

Money derived from this carnival is not foolishly spent but is devoted to welfare and child's work and any surplus is used for the war effort. The club has a large expense in maintaining the Blood Donor Clinic and the people, who support the carnival are making this Clinic possible and the club appreciates the kindness in many ways shown to the organization. There are a large number of entries in the Miss War Worker contest, the winsome misses to be judged on the second night of the show. The Hope Chest and model sailing ship will be drawn for on the closing night. The show will be staged on Front Street between Bridge and Campbell Streets and everyone is invited to enjoy the entertainment, that will be provided.

2 NAMED AS DEAD FROM WOUNDS

First Casualty List From Sicily Includes 74 Reported Wounded

Ottawa, Aug. 14 — (CP) — The first casualty list resulting from operations of the First Division of the Canadian Army in Sicily, issued last night — more than a month after the Canadians landed on the big Italian island as part of the famous British 8th Army, July 9 — contained the names of two soldiers reported to have died from wounds and 74 reported wounded.

Other casualty lists based on Sicilian losses will be issued over the next few weeks from defence headquarters, each containing approximately the same number of names, 75 to 100.

Although Canadians were in some of the heaviest fighting on the island, it has been stated their casualties were light.

The two men reported dead in the first list were Cpl. James Bryon Henry, 23, of Calgary, Royal Canadian Corps of Signals, and Pte. George Henry Groves, 23, of Winnipeg, a member of an infantry unit.

Of the wounded, four officers and 12 other ranks were described as "seriously wounded," 43 other ranks as "wounded" and one officer and 12 other ranks as "slightly wounded."

The list — the 338th Army casualty list of the war — brought the unofficial total of reported army casualties to 1,213 dead, 821 missing and 3,419 prisoners of war. Most of the previous casualties were suffered at Hong Kong in December, 1941, and at Dieppe last August.

Listed as severely wounded in yesterday's announcement were Capt. Sydney Wilford Thomson, Salmon Arm, B. C.; Lieut. Garner Stevens Lynch, Montreal; Lieut. Andrew Walter Roy, Halifax, and Lieut. Leitch Scott, Toronto.

Berne, Aug. 14 (AP) — The Milan correspondent of the Zurich newspaper Die Tat, in a dispatch passed by the Italian censor, said today that Rome is "seeking the possibility of an agreement for a separate peace through the Vatican and Spain."

The War Today— Keep in Mind Hun Peculiarity Of Folding Up Once He's Down

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

We have in Sicily the seemingly paradoxical spectacle of the Germans battling to a bloody finish against the Anglo-American advance, whereas in the vastly important struggle for Tunisia—Hitler's last toe-hold in North Africa—the Nazis surrendered wholesale when cornered.

It is suggested by some writers that this reversal of form in the German ranks is due to recognition that the Reich now is in dire peril and must be defended to the death, whereas the Nazi troops in Tunisia didn't regard that zone as vital to the Fatherland.

Montgomery's Analysis of Germans

Having seen the Boche in operation in two wars I don't believe that's the answer to the phenomenon in Sicily. Rather I think that General Montgomery gave the key when he remarked to me in North Africa last December:—

"The German is a good soldier and will fight, though I believe it is true that once you get him down he cracks up."

As I see it the Germans quit in Tunisia, not because that country wasn't vital to their master but because they realized that continuation of the struggle was equivalent to suicide. They had no hope of beating the Allies and they had no hope of escaping from the trap into which they had been pushed.

Situation in Sicily.

The situation in Sicily, however, is quite different despite the fact that the Boche know they haven't a whisper of a hope of holding the island. While they fully recognize that they must 'abandon ship', they undoubtedly believe (1) that they have a fair chance of pulling off a Dunkirk and escaping to the mainland (in fact some of them already have made the bloody passage of Messina Strait), and (2) that once they are on the mainland they ultimately will be able to join the German troops which are holding the line of the Po River in Northern Italy in force.

In short, the German soldier doesn't look on the Italian adventure as suicidal, despite the fierceness of the struggle. That doesn't necessarily mean he thinks the Fatherland is headed for victory. He may or may not believe that. However, he probably thinks—and not without reason — that he has a chance of fighting his way back into Germany and coming through the war alive.

Nazis Hope for Chance of Getting Home.

The same psychological reaction undoubtedly inspired the Nazis who are fighting so fiercely against the onrushing Reds in Russia. The Hitlerites know that they have a chance of getting back home.

So far as concerns the Italian situation, even if the Badoglio government should surrender and the Allies are able to overrun the lower three-quarters of the peninsula rather easily, there still must be a terrific fight along the defences of the Po, if the Allies choose to force the issue. And behind the German Army of the Po there is the great Brenner Pass for retreat into the Reich.

This characteristic of the German of folding up "once you get him down" is something to keep well in mind in these fast-moving days.

NEW R.C.A.F. FLYING SUIT DEFIES STRATOSPHERE COLD

Six miles above the earth, this airman is going to be comfortable and efficient at sub-zero temperatures in the new flying clothing developed by the Royal Canadian Air Force. Fully clad, he'll wear heavy underwear, wool socks, sheepskin-lined boot fillers, the new Type "E" flying suit, flying boots, a woolen bell-jar neck cover, emergency ration belt, helmet, goggles, oxygen mask, radio equipment, Mae West, parachute harness and three-in-one gloves. It sounds heavy, but the new suit is lighter and more comfortable than the leather garments it replaces, and is designed so as to give complete freedom of movement. In the picture at left, the airman is putting on the electrically heated under-suit which enables the weight of heavy clothes to be reduced. In the succeeding pictures he pulls on the trousers and jacket, fitted with zippers which allow the whole suit to be pulled off and discarded in 15 seconds. The new clothing results from a questionnaire in which more than 4,000 airmen submitted their ideas as to what features the ideal flying suit should have.—(R.C.A.F. Photos).

Anne's Cottage Gets A New Thatch

(By John H. Bird in London Calling)

I wish you could have been with me early this morning in the lovely Stratford-on-Avon countryside. I don't usually get up so early, but today I wanted to catch the thatcher. He beat me to it. He gets up very early and, in accordance with the proverbial saying for which his forbears were responsible, he "works like a thatcher."

The thatcher was doing a special job down Warwickshire way . . Anne Hathaway's cottage at Shottery, the most visited and most photographed in the world, was having a new roof, a roof of clean, white straw. When I reached the famous cottage I found thatcher Rimell up aloft, nimbly using the shears to trim the new neatly laid straw round one of the pretty lattice windows.

John Rimell, I soon discovered, was fully appreciative of the fact that he is restoring the roof of a piece of domestic architecture which is a little bit of Britain's precious heritage. John himself put it this way: "This job's got to be done well."

The thatcher's art grows rarer and is in danger of dying out. It is true that there are still men in the neighboring shires, in the Cotswolds, the Eastern Counties and the South, who are skilled craftsmen, but to quote John Rimell: "Thatching is real hard work, quiet, plodding, unexciting, and the young 'uns won't have it today. They like motors and tractors." I asked him how he would define "a good job o' thatching." What was the secret of the craft?

"Thatchers, good thatchers, are scarce," he told me. "Without touching corn ricks I've got enough work to last me four or five years and I can find tons of work for any man as can lay a good thatch. And before anybody can hope to lay a good thatch he must first master the knack of placing his ladders. You can't thatch well at arm's length," says John coining a homely truth. "You must start from scratch and learn the work in the hard school of experience. And—this is important—you must be able to work as well with the left hand as with the right."

Well, I had noticed that John worked with as much dexterity with his left hand and that the quality of his work proved that he was a craftsman with no "jerry ideas", as he called it. The new roof he was putting on Anne's cottage is a sound, honest-to-goodness piece of thatching.

Re-thatching, by the way, is a bit of a surgical operation. The existing laths often have to be mended and the new straw must be grafted, as it were, on to the old. Before we consider further the man and his methods let us take a look at his stock in trade. Unfolding a piece of sacking tied with twine, John showed me his kit of tools. And what a kit! There were shears for trimming the straw at the eaves and gable edges; a sharp pocket knife for cutting the buckle sticks; an axe to sharpen the willow stakes; a rake to comb out the old thatch; lengths of wire and string for fastening down the straw. All that and a few ladders and there's the thatcher's outfit I thought. But, oh no! John unearthed two more tools—a nice clumpy stick and an old-fashioned open blade razor.

"That's the boy to cut," said John rubbing the blade to reveal the maker's name. "An old Sheffield steel razor will stand up to straw or wood if used properly. But it must be English steel; the old German hollow-ground razors are too brittle. They break."

Osiers, two or three years old, make the best "buckles", it seems. Buckles are the U-shaped sticks that pin down the straw. John picked up an osier stick about eighteen inches long — one end in each hand—and giving it a sharp twist as he bent it in the middle he offered for my inspection the perfect buckle ready for use in split second. The young sticks, full of say, bend and twist more easily but they do not last so long.

Willow branches are split up for the lugs. Those, I must explain, are used flat on the roof to fasten down the straw. A lad with an axe and a knife sits at the foot of the ladder cutting and trimming hundreds of buckles and lugs.

Wheat provides the best straw for thatching and John must have used about six tons before he finished Anne's cottage. Oat and barley straw are too absorbent. There is plenty of good wheat straw in the district and John has discovered that the finest possible straw is coming from land plowed up for the first time in living memory to grow more food crops.

My thatcher friend is a steady worker. "Nobody ever did a good job in a hurry," he told me as he let himself down on to a heap of straw to take refreshment. About a hundred square feet a day is his pace. It must be remembered that the thatch is usually a foot to eighteen inches thick, and the new thatch must last from fifteen to twenty years.

It was the last war that made John Rimell a thatcher. Like many other rural workers he found he was not wanted on the land when peace came. So he took up thatching and "learned the job as he went along." John has health and toughness equal to the hardest work. He has also the great gift of a pair of strong, skilled hands, and he preserves that gift. He has this piece of advice for other men working on the land: "Think above general laboring; learn a rural craft."

Even now many visitors call each day to look over Anne Hathaway's charming cottage. John Rimell, thatcher, provided them—especially members of the American and Canadian Forces—with an additional interest. And when a thousand visitors a day is the order again after the war they will find the cottage well preserved and as trim as ever.

English Shrine Dates Back to 597 A:D.

(By K. S. in Windsor Star)

In the year 597, Bertha, a princess of Gaul, was praying in the Roman-British Church of St. Martin at Canterbury, that her husband, Ethelbert, King of Kent, might be persuaded to accept the Christian faith she herself had professed. From his palace windows Ethelbert, awaiting her, saw approaching a band of men led by a man "of mighty stature," who carried high in his hands a silver cross. The man was St. Augustine. He had brought his gospel from across the sea, and Ethelbert, hearing it from his lips, took it to his own heart, with 10,000 of his subjects following him. So did Canterbury become the first English Christian city, and Kent the first English Christian kingdom. From them stemmed the whole English constitution of church and state; from the little church that Augustine founded grew the majestic stature of today's Canterbury Cathedral, the history of Anglican Christianity summed up in its warm, grey stone.

Gently capped in green hills in a happy blending of trees and architecture, Canterbury Cathedral is surrounded by some of the loveliest countryside in England. More than 520 feet long, it first offers as approached by the Christ Church gate, two massive Gothic towers. But its supreme exterior achievement is the central Perpendicular Tower, the Bell Harry of the Tudor period. This, a slender, beautifully proportioned thing of delicate carvings, rises 235 feet high. It was built to replace the Norman "Angel Steeple," that bore on its summit the golden angel that so enthralled the pilgrims at first sight of it as they came along the Pilgrim's Way above Harbledown, the "Bobbe-up-an-doun" of the Chaucerian Tales.

Of Augustine's original building there are but few traces left. Ransacked and burnt in the Danish invasions, it was rebuilt by Canute, only to be destroyed by fire some 40 years later. Fire again in 1174 partly destroyed the church and monastery built by Archbishop Lanfranc, who was brought over from France by William the Norman. The crypt, however, and other parts remained, and it may be said that these, begun in 1070, are the basis of the present structure. Much of this is of Caen stone brought laboriously across the Channel from France, for the architect, William of Sens, who was commissioned to redesign and rebuild after the fire of 1174, was a Norman. He did not complete the task, for, after four years' work, he was incapacitated by a fall from a scaffolding, and his successor was the simply known native, "William the Englishman."

Murder of Becket

But even more impressive than the cathedral's exterior features and vastness of scale, are its lofty nave and quaint side chapels, its wealth of 14th. to 19th. century monuments, its treasures of glass, old and new; and the great historical scenes that have been enacted within its walls. Chief of these, and the greatest of all historical tragedies in the mind of the medieval Englishman, was the murder of Archbishop Thomas Becket. The cathedral still has much evidence of that dramatic episode that in its final effect welded church and state more closely than before. Here, through the brooding cloisters, through the arched entrance, the prelate hurried from his palace to the sanctuary of the church on that late December afternoon in 1170. Here, the stone let into the pavement of the transept known as the "Martyrdom" is the spot where he fell, stabbed to death by the four knights pledged to the whim of an impatient king. His jewelled shrine went in the plunder and devastation of the Reformation, but the depression worn in the pavement before it by the knees of the pilgrims who at times numbered 100,000, is still there. There is a hint of their journeying, in our language; in the word "canter", the easy jog-trot pace in which they rode on their holy way.

Tombs and Crypt

The only king who appears to have been buried in the cathedral is Henry IV. With his queen he lies in a small, fan-vaulted chantry, beneath a beautifully carved and painted "tester", a canopy of wood that was often suspended over ancient monuments to protect them from falling dust. Likewise protected and lying nearer to the site of the Becket shrine, is the tomb of the son of Edward III, England's beloved Black Prince who as a small boy, played in the deanery garden. Over his bronze effigy hang his gauntlets, helmet, surcoat and scabbard, the latter empty because Cromwell, it is said, stole the sword from it. The shield of the Prince is fixed to a pillar close by.

Another interesting tomb is of the 12th. century archbishop, Stephen Langton, to whom, perhaps more than any other man, England and the English-speaking peoples since owed the final submission of King John to Magna Carta. An odd feature of this tomb is that one half of it is in St. Michael's Chapel, while the other half projects through the east wall. St. Michael's Chapel is usually referred to as the Warriors' Chapel, and contains many memorials of the East Kent Regiment, more popularly known as "The Buffs."

In the cool, low-pitched Norman crypt, there is a chapel built by the Black Prince to commemorate his marriage with Joan, the "Fair Maid of Kent." This chapel Elizabeth gave to the use of the Huguenot refugee weavers whom she allowed to carry on their weaving in the crypt, and who made Canterbury flourish anew by their manufacture of woven stuffs. A Huguenot service in the French language is still held in it every Sunday. The chapel is beneath the Anselm Tower.

Priceless Stained Glass

Of the priceless 12th. and 13th. century stained glass which was once the glory of Canterbury Cathedral, the zeal of the Puritans has left but little. The notorious parson-destroyer, known as "Blue Dick" has told, with great glee, how he stood on a ladder 60 steps high, with a pike in his hands and, as he termed it, "rattled down proud Becket's glassie bones." Even so did the men of Britain, 300 years later, stand on ladders one June night, in 1942, not to destroy, but to preserve. From a network of connecting ladders attached to the flying buttresses of the edifice they raced and scrambled, especially careless of life and limb, to fling the German incendiary bombs from the building which were dropped at the rate of dozens a minute. "Canterbury," not one corner of it, but the vast precious whole, was their shrine, the sacred shrine of the Anglican peoples, and they had seen it desecrated before them. They had seen its rare library demolished, its Deanery and great, simple Chapter House shattered, its beautiful cloisters and monastery remains disfigured, its smooth quadrangle lawns uptorn. But pilgrims to Canterbury have never ceased, and when days of peace are come again they will foregather from every corner of the British Isles, the Commonwealth, the world over, in greater numbers even than the pre-Hun August holiday month records show of 5,000 in a day.

Not a Parallel for Failure Of the German Afrika Corps

John C. Davis in an illuminating article on the campaign in Tunisia in the Cleveland Plain Dealer, writes:

The surrender of the Afrika Corps should give psychologists material for study. The Axis armies, numbering some 200,000 men, occupied a mountainous peninsula whose rugged terrain lent itself to defence. The troops there had plenty of supplies and ammunition, were well commanded and could have maintained a long defence. Most important they were not rookies but veteran soldiers with fighting records. Here is what happened:

The soldiers organized their own surrender. Ignoring officers, they voluntarily marched in orderly fashion to give themselves up. They piled aboard motor trucks and with their own men acting as traffic officers, drove to our lines and surrendered. When Gen. Von Arnim belatedly decided to lay down his sword, he found it was about all he had left to surrender. His army had called it a day. No wonder he is cutting paper dolls and chewing the rug, if any, in his British prison.

I cannot find in history a case parallel to the surrender of the Afrika Korps. There are many instances of officers surrendering their men but I can find none where soldiers organized mass surrender of a veteran, well-armed, well-supplied and strategically positioned army.

No doubt Axis military masterminds likewise are pondering this phenomena. It must give them many a gloomy moment to contemplate what may happen when the United Nations effect a substantial bridgehead on their "Fortress of Europe." The mental picture of entire armies marching or travelling by truck in orderly mass surrender, a la Afrika Korps, must cause many nightmares and have Schickelgruber steadily masticating rugs.

Cause a Mystery

I doubt if we will know until after the war just what psychological twist produced the surrender. The korps fought a long, hard, delaying campaign across North Africa, several times in the closing days of the battle for Tunis and Bizerte it launched dangerous offensives. There was no warning of the surrender, at least over here. Just two days before when it became apparent that the Axis intended to retreat to the peninsula and make a stand there, our general staff issued a bulletin saying that the hardest fighting of the campaign would be necessary to dislodge them. Instead, the Axis soldiers decided to call the whole thing off with one of the most complete and orderly surrenders in history.

Reports from Sicily indicate that the Italians are emulating the example of their comrades in Africa. Except for some hard fighting immediately after we established our bridgeheads and the battle which the German garrison is putting up around Catania, our investment of the island has been more an occupation than a campaign. Dispatches say that great bodies of Italian troops are surrendering to our boys and the Canadians. Only Montgomery's Fighting Eighth seems to be having trouble.

This reluctance to surrender to British is likewise demonstrated on the Russian front where the fighting is bitter and deadly. It was at Stalingrad that the German Sixth Army, numbering about the same strength as the Afrika Korps, obeyed Schickelgruber's order to fight to the death. I'm not suggesting that our boys are so superior to our Allies that the Axis lads curl up and quit. Men who fought in the last war recall instances of German soldiers treking to our lines to give themselves up but there is no parallel to the Africa Korps surrender.

Psychological Quirk

Failure of the Axis to defend the African peninsula offers quite a contrast to what the boys of MacArthur and their Filipino allies did at Bataan. The surrender there was made by General Wainwright only after ammunition, food and water were exhausted. But the cause was equally hopeless.

It would be interesting to know what the psychological quirk is that made the boys on Bataan fight until exhausted, then cry bitterly when their officers surrendered and what made the equally brave, well-equipped and well-supplied soldiers of the Afrika Korps organize and execute one of the most orderly surrenders of history. It will be interesting to learn why the Axis soldiers are inclined to surrender after only token resistance to our boys but fight their European foes to the death. Maybe we should give some study to it. The answer might be a valuable contribution to the peace table.

CANADIANS MAKE FRIENDS IN SICILY

German propagandists would have liked to have been able to tell the world that Allied treatment of Sicilian civilians was that of a swaggering conqueror. But such scenes as this completely shatter Axis hopes of a propaganda victory. Here, Cpl. H. H. Whitaker, of the Royal Canadian Signals, of Winnipeg, Man., gives candy and biscuits to a Sicilian boy.—(Canadian Army Overseas Photo).

END OF SICILIAN CAMPAIGN 'NOW AT HAND'

Germans in Flight And Main Escape Hatch Under Fire

British 8th Army Captures Taormina And U.S. Troops Take Milazzo

25 MILES FROM MESSINA

(By RELMAN MORIN)
(A.P. War Correspondent)

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 16 (AP) — British 8th. Army troops have raced forward to capture Taormina, strategic harbor and road junction; American troops are overrunning the Axis rearguard in the vicinity of Milazzo, and it was officially stated the end of the Sicilian campaign "now is at hand."

The Germans are in flight.

The Americans, pushing up between 12 and 15 miles, advanced well beyond Barcellona to within heavy artillery range of Messina and it was assumed this main escape hatch is under ground fire as well as aerial bombardment.

Barcellona lies six miles south-southwest of Milazzo and 16 miles west of Messina.

Pull Out Delaying Parties

All indications are that the Nazis have pulled out even their delaying parties and left Italian units to face the climactic British and American push.

The British 8th. Army and the American 7th. Army are advancing as rapidly as blown-up roads and diminishing resistance permits. The campaign is less than six weeks' old.

The British captured Taormina, on the east coast 28 miles by road from Messina; Castiglione, eight miles inland; and the town of Kaggi.

(Admitting that Axis forces are quitting Sicily, the Berlin radio declared nevertheless, in a broadcast recorded by NBC, that the Messina Strait is heavily guarded and firmly in German hands. "Anglo-American attempts to stop the ferrying service (to the Italian mainland) will be futile," it said.)

25 Miles from Messina

The arrival of detachments of American forces in the vicinity of Milazzo denied the Axis the use of its valuable evacuation area, including not only the port facilities but beaches suitable for loading small craft.

The thrust through Barcellona essentially isolated both Milazzo and the sandy cape bearing its name.

Forward elements of Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery's 8th. Army were less than 25 miles from Messina.

The joint British and American line running through central Sicily was slightly farther away, but was advancing at about the same rate as the Allied forces on the flanks.

Captured documents showed the Germans, as usual, left Italians to cover their retreat. It was indicated only some units of an Italian coastal division confronted the 8th. Army north of Taormina.

Front No Longer Exists

The Italians had been ordered to hold a five-mile line running inland from Roccalumera, 18 miles south of Messina, the documents disclosed.

In the usual sense, the Sicilian "front" no longer exists. However a ring of strongpoints has been formed about the outskirts of Messina, aerial reconnaissance showed.

Official dispatches said numbers of Germans donned civilian clothing and attempted to infiltrate Allied lines to reach the rear area. They were captured.

Britain Changes Little Despite War Activities

(Written for the Canadian Press
By CPL. DERMOT BAKER)

Somewhere in England, Aug. 16—(CP)—There is one amazing thing about Britain since the invasion months of 1940, to a Canadian it hasn't changed a bit. Every little thing that existed then exists now, with a litle more emphasis that's all. The only points of interest worthy of note, probably, are that more Canadians and Americans have arrived.

To travel the length and breadth of England, Scotland and Wales is to find the people and their thoughts the same. Their mood is to carry on the war and get it over with.

In many places, in the country, the Canadian is still a novelty, a surprising but pleasant fact. The effort still remains to show him a good time.

The cold Englishman is gone. He disappeared years ago.

The day of the blitz is past here, the Briton feels. The siren is the reminder the war is still on in the air over Britain but it doesn't sound in as many places as it used to and it doesn't cause people to glance anxiously at the sky and wonder when "it" would fall.

Workers still vie with one another in putting out the most war material. Women still take on the most amazing jobs and show they are just as efficient as men.

Over here a couple of years, you wonder what things are like at home. Of course you hear about things in letters but the mail doesn't seem to take the edge off your curiosity. Just what is it like anyway?

Papers from home are eagerly read.

The "canned press" as the Canadian Press News is known, is the soldier's bible. It dishes up the news "hot off the press." It's unfortunate it isnt 100 pages an issue.

(The Canadian Press News is an eight-page weekly newspaper containing Canadian news and pictures.)

In some things over here there are changes . . among your pals, the years do a lot. Some get married, some go home, some go up in rank, others go down.

Luftwaffe Beaten Force Marshal Coningham Tells War Correspondent

(By ROSS MUNRO)
(C.P. War Correspondent)

Somewhere in Sicily, Aug. 16 (CP Cable) — Air Marshal Sir Arthur Coningham said in an interview Sunday that the German air force has been "knocked out" and the Allies will continue to have tremendous air superiority at the end of the war, with that superiority steadily increasing.

"The Luftwaffe is a beaten force to all intents and purposes," Marshal Coningham told war correspondents. "It is out and will continue to be out as long as we continue to obey normal air rules."

He said maximum help to the Allied ground forces now is the aim of the Northwest Africa tactical air force which he heads.

"In the fighting on the English Channel front some small pockets of the Luftwaffe put up quite a good show, but in the fighting in the Mediterranean the German air force steadily went down," he added.

Speaking specifically of the Sicilian operation, Sir Arthur said the German losses were "astronomical."

"The air has been filled with hungry Spitfire pilots who go for everything with wings on. You ask what has happened to the German air force? Well, it has been knocked out. Their bomber efforts here are very half-hearted now. As for the Italian air force, one or two fighters appeared but it has more or less packed up."

BRITISH REGARD DECLARATION AS BADOGLIO RUSE

London Press Demands Allied Air Raids Continue on Rome Until Italy Quits

NO OFFICIAL COMMENT

By JAMES F. KING
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Aug. 16 —(AP)— Belief the Italian declaration of Rome as an "open city" was merely a trick by Premier Marshal Pietro Badoglio to spare it from further bombardment appeared to be growing in Great Britain today and Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express bluntly demanded that Allied air attacks be continued until Italy quits the war.

There has been no official comment in London on the Italian declaration and none was anticipated in the absence of Prime Minister Churchill now in Quebec. The Rome radio itself warned Italians they could expect security from bombs only after the Italian declaration is officially accepted by the Allies.

There were other indications the Italians were doubtful they could expect immunity. The London Daily Mail heard an Italian broadcast which reported the Prefect of Rome had issued orders to halt an influx of civilians seeking residence in the city under the impression it is a safe haven from Allied bombs.

Defence Impossible

Suspicion Badoglio's declaration was nothing but a ruse was founded upon the fact that if the Italians fulfilled the requirements necessary to make Rome truly an open city any defence of southern and central Italy would be virtually impossible.

All railroad lines on the west side of Italy run through Rome and without them the forces to the south could not be supplied or could Axis forces now retreating from Sicily be moved north of the capital.

The Express saw the hand of Hitler guiding Badoglio and said:

"So far as the open city declaration has any meaning it is this—the Germans and not the Italians are getting ready to set up a new Italian war capital farther north. It is advance notice that when the Germans fall back they mean to take the Italian government with them, willing or unwilling. It is yet another indication that Badoglio is not unwilling."

Three Reasons Listed

The London News Chronicle listed three reasons the proposal should not be accepted.

Industrial Objectives In Milan Again Attacked; Mosquitos Bomb Berlin

London, Aug. 16. (CP)—R.A.F. heavy bombers made another attack on industrial objectives of Milan last night and R.A.F. Mosquitoes bombed Berlin, the Air Ministry announced today.

The attack upon Milan, hit twice previously since early Friday morning, was made in the bright light of a full moon.

The Air Ministry said a number of enemy fighters were encountered on the route to the northern Italian industrial centre and at least two were destroyed.

"Mosquitoes bombed targets at Berlin and other aircraft were engaged in extensive minelaying in enemy waters", the communique said.

"Aircraft of the fighter command on intruder patrol attacked enemy air fields and railway targets in France and the low countries. One enemy aircraft was destroyed".

The Air Ministry, without saying whether heavy craft or Mosquitoes or both were meant, said ten bombers failed to return and two fighters were missing.

Two Hours to Pass

The night raiders were followed across the English Channel early this morning by a great fleet of Allied daylight bombers. Observers on the British southeast coast said the bombing formations, accompanied by fighters, streaked overhead at intervals for almost two hours.

The new R.A.F. blow sustained a steady British-American air offensive that included raids Saturday night on Milan and Berlin, on the Axis airfield at St. Omer, France, in daylight yesterday, and on six enemy airdromes in France and Holland at dusk.

Strong forces of heavy bombers, roaring across the Channel at the latest hour they ever have raided Europe, blasted the six airfields, officially described by the United 8th Air Force as "Germany's most important operational fighter airdromes in Western Europe". American Marauders hit St. Omer.

Take 2—Industrial Objectives

Canadians Return Safely

In an attack against Abbeville the American bombers were escorted by Canadian fighter squadrons. Other R.C.A.F. planes took part in sweeps Sunday from the coasts of Holland and Belgium to the Brest Peninsula.

All Canadian aircraft returned safely.

OVER 90 U-BOATS ARE DESTROYED IN THREE MONTHS

Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt Survey Situation

U-BOAT FAILURE

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

Washington, Aug. 16 — (AP) — Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt triumphantly announced Sunday that "a total of over 90 U-boats" were sent to the bottom of the seas during heavy fighting in May, June and July.

At the same time, the American and British leaders declared in a joint statement, which indicated the two have already met for their current war talks, that the Nazis still have large reserve forces of undersea raiders and that the Allies can expect continued success in the all-important battle of supply lines to Europe only if the most effective measures possible are continued in force and even improved in results.

The statement said that the figures were prepared after consultation with the British Admiralty, the United States Navy Department and the Canadian Department of National Defense for Naval Services.

48 JAP AIRCRAFT SHOT DOWN BY ALLIES SUNDAY

Japanese-Held Oil Port of Balikpapan in Borneo Heavily Raided

SINK, DAMAGE BARGES

Allied Headquarters, The Southwest Pacific, Aug. 16. (AP)—Allied warplanes shot down 48 Japanese aircraft —23 of them bombers—over the Southwest Pacific battlefront yesterday.

This success, reported in today's communique from Allied headquarters, was achieved at a cost of only five Allied planes and no more than three pilots. The ratio of nearly 10 to 1 bettered by far the all-over score of approximately 4 to 1 established in the six weeks since the start of the Allies' new Pacific offensive.

In a weekend of almost ceaseless activity, the Allied air forces also:

Attacked without loss the great Japanese-held oil port of Balikpapan on the east coast of Borneo, flying a record roundtrip of more than 2,500 miles to set huge fires among refineries, reservoirs and tank ships.

Dumped 99 tons of explosives yesterday on enemy positions around Komiatum, south of Lae, New Guinea.

CHURCHILL BACK IN QUEBEC AFTER SEEING ROOSEVELT

President Expected To Arrive Early This Week to Start Sixth War Conference

CONSULTS WITH KING

Quebec , Aug. 16 (CP)—In two Quebec buildings—one a vast hotel and the other the citadel, summer residence of the Governor-General—the military and political leaders of the major decocracies meet this week to draft another act of greatest drama in history: Elimination of the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo Axis.

The combined chiefs of staff of the United Kingdom and United States have been together since Friday night, working out technical details with the aid of an army of experts, uniformed and civilian.

Prime Minister Churchill is here having returned yesterday from Hyde Park, N.Y., where he spent three days with President Roosevelt. Mr. Roosevelt is coming later.

Once they are together in this 300-year-old city on the St. Lawrence River the sixth formal Churchill-Roosevelt conference will begin.

Within three minutes of his arrival at the citadel yesterday from the six-car special train which brought him from Hyde Park Mr. Churchill was hard at work in his map room. He conferred with Prime Minister Mackenzie King—host of the conference on behalf of the Canadian government—and lunched with the British chiefs of staff.

Talks Conveyed to Advisers

That he conveyed to Mr. King and his highest military advisers the results of his formal talks with Mr. Roosevelt was taken for granted, although there was no official statement to that effect.

Undoubtedly this information will be carefully considered by the British officials so they will be prepared to deal promptly with any important problem once the final stage of the meeting here is reached.

Rt. Hon. Anthony Eden, British Foreign Secretary, is coming at some stage of the meeting but there has been no indication yet just when he will be here. Perhaps Mr. Roosevelt will be accompanied by high governmental officials. It is expected, for instance, that Mr. Eden will carry to Moscow and perhaps Chungking a report of the conference, and there has been speculation that Sumner Wells, United States Under-Secretary of State, will accompany him. In this case Mr. Welles might come here with the President.

Only 26 Miles Separate Russians From Vital Centre

Battles of Great Violence Rage in North and West Of Kharkov

REACHING CLIMAX

Moscow, Aug. 16. (AP) — Four Red Army Divisions pushed ahead from the captured German bastion of Karachev on the 26-mile road to Bryansk today after severing the last main line of escape for Nazi troops trapped in the Orel Salient.

The Communist Party newspaper Pravda said that the Soviet forces were cutting through dense forests, seeking to prevent the Germans from organizing adequate defence lines on the Desna River.

Karachev fell, Pravda said, when four Russian divisions stormed strong Nazi fortifications on the hills commanding the approaches to the city and then pursued the fleeing Nazis into the streets of the burning town.

Main Escape Route Closed

The occupation of Karachev closed the main line of escape for Germans remaining in the Orel salient following the Russians' lightning drive westward .

The size of the enemy force encircled could not be estimated immediately but earlier dispatches indicated that the Germans failed to retire a large number of men and war machines from the Orel front before the base at Karachev was cut off.

Karachev lies on the edge of an immense forest covering Bryansk from the east.

The Germans based all their counter-offensives in the Bryansk sector from the vital rail junction of Karachev and intended to hold off the Red Army here long enough to erect impregnable fortifications along the Desna River.

Tass reported the battle for Kharkov had reached a climax. The Germans were said to be throwing troops into the battle as soon as they could reach the front and resistance was increasing.

Near Kharkov's Suburbs

Soviet troops attacking Kharkov from newly-captured Chuguev have advanced to within four miles of the great industrial city while other forces on the north were about one mile away from the city's outskirts.

Tass said the battle was developing with great violence and the Red airforce was throwing great formations of planes into the fight.

6 U.S. Warships Reported Lost

Washington, Aug. 16. (AP)—Loss of six United States warships, including the submarine Pickerel and the destroyer Maddox in action against the enemy, was reported by the United States Navy today.

The Pickerel was reported overdue on patrol operations and presumed to be lost. She presumably was operating in the far Pacific, under command of Lt.-Cmdr. Augustus H. Alston Jr., Augusta, Ga., reported missing in action.

The 1,700-ton destroyer Maddox was sunk in the Mediterranean off Sicily when attacked by enemy aircraft July 10.

Three smaller craft, the subchaser PC 496, the submarine rescue vessel Redwing and the minesweeper Sentinel also were reported lost in Mediterranean actions incident to the Sicilian campaign.

A sixth vessel, the gunboat Plymouth was sunk off the North Carolina coast Aug. 5, "as a result of underwater explosion".

The sinkings brought to 110 the number of American warships reported sunk, overdue and presumed lost, or destroyed to prevent capture since the war started.

Those totals include 11 submarines and 30 destroyers.

Saturday the Navy Department reported that United States submarines operating in Pacific have increased their toll of Japanese ship sinkings, probable sinkings, and damaged vessels by a total of 12 since the last bi-monthly report.

Although the department did not give dates of the actions involved, it reported that since the last announcement of July 29, American submarines have definitely sunk 7 Japanese vessels which are used dominantly to supply their armed forces in the Solomons and other seized Pacific areas, and definitely damaged five others.

The vessels ranged in size from a large transport and medium-sized freighters down to small cargo ships and a schooner.

CIVIL POLICE HEAD EXECUTED

Stockholm, Aug. 16 (AP)—A German announcement from Oslo declared today that Gunnar Elifsen, chief of Norway's civil police, had been executed and threatened the execution of other Norwegian officers in a purge to compel the police to enforce Nazi occupation orders.

See Vast Grave Opened at Orel Where Reds Say Nazis Cast 5,000 Victims

Henry C. Cassidy, chief of the A.P.'s Moscow Bureau, reached newly-freed Orel after a trip to the front in the Bryansk sector under the auspices of the press section of the Soviet foreign commissariat.

(By HENRY C. CASSIDY)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Orel, Soviet Russia, Aug. 15 (Delayed) (AP) — Under a pale moon shining over a wall of the Orel prison, Allied correspondents witnessed one of the most gruesome sights of this war in the opening of a mass grave where Soviet authorities said the Germans had cast about 5,000 bodies of their Russian victims.

These authorities, conducting a careful investigation of this and other evidences of the Germans in Orel, said most of the victims were Red army men who died of starvation while being kept in the grim, two-storey, brick prison or were shot in the back of the head behind the prison wall.

No agreement exists between the Soviet Union and Germany like the Geneva convention on the treatment of prisoners of war, but Soviet authorities indicated a belief the German conduct violated even the natural, unwritten laws of humaneness.

Although there have been numerous charges of German atrocities during the war, this was the first evidence laid open to British, United States and other Allied correspondents in Russia.

They drove thru' two layers of barbed wire into a field behind the prison where medical specialists of a special state commission investigating German atrocities were at work.

Part of a long ditch under the fence was open, exposing a heap of bodies looking more like burlap bags than the remains of human beings. The bodies were placed one by one on a wooden table for study to determine the cause of death.

Prof. Dmitry Boropaev, wearing a white robe over a Red army uniform conducted the examination with five other doctors.

So far no documents were found to establish the identity of any of the victims, but most of them wore the clothing of Red army men.

The main ditch was 100 yards long, six feet wide and 10 feet deep with the dead in layers of five. There were seven smaller trenches not yet opened.

Doctors who started work on August 6, the day after Orel was recaptured, drew up a separate protocol for each body to be submitted to a commission.

Authorities said they were informed by prisoners who had survived that the Germans carried out executions twice weekly on Tuesdays and Fridays in groups up to 20 men.

Four other mass graves were found outside the city, the authorities said. One was near a brick factory where civilians were executed.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

HIT-AND-RUN DRIVERS DAMAGE TWO CARS

City police investigated damage to a motor car in front of 113 West Moira St., on Sunday afternoon where it was alleged a hit-and-run driver had damaged a parked auto owned by George Brooks. The doors and left fenders and running board of Mr. Brooks' car were all badly crumpled and damaged as the result of the impact. P. C. Wright investigated the report and was informed the hit-and-run vehicle was driven speedily away in a westerly direction.

Another similar accident was reported by Joseph Whalen, 35 Grove St., over the weekend also. In this case the damage was done during the owner's absence and while his vehicle was parked.

MRS. EMMA REEVES WINS ROTARY DOLL

The winner of the Rotary "Dollar Covered Doll" was Mrs. Emma Reeves, 58 Charlotte St. Mrs. Reeves was the lucky holder of ticket No. 3568 which was drawn by Mrs. Porteous, of Edmonton, a casual visitor at the carnival grounds. A considerable number of tickets were sold in the city and at the carnival each night and the money realized from these sales will be used by the Rotarians in their attempt to help crippled children in and around the district. A full report on the amount obtained for this charitable work will be published at a later date.

TWO BIKES STOLEN

Bicycle thieves are becoming more daring in the Belleville area. Over the weekend two bikes were reported stolen in the city area and in both cases the bikes were taken from the private premises where the owners resided.

Harold Keck, who resides on the Cannifton Road one mile north of Belleville, had his bike stolen from his yard some time Sunday.

James Cowan Jr., reported a similar instance from his parents' home at No. 1 Forin Street. Here the bicycle was left in its accustomed position at the rear of the home when taken. This bicycle was the racing type and has no mud guards.

PROVINCIAL POLICE RECOVER MOTOR CAR

Provincial Police recovered a motor car that had been stolen in Napanee over the weekend. The vehicle had Ontario motor licence plate number 97-W-48 and was left abandoned near the home of Clayton Sullivan, Corbyville, early Sunday morning. Mr. Sullivan reported the car's presence to the O.P.P., who had only received information of the theft at Napanee a short time previously.

ARRESTED FOR FAILING TO REMAIN AT SCENE OF ACCIDENT

Wanted on a charge of failing to remain at the scene of an accident Tpr. Elwood Brant, formerly of Deseronto and now stationed in Kingston, was apprehended by Chief Langton at Deseronto while on his first military furlough Saturday afternoon. Brant was later turned over to Belleville police by Traffic Officer Harry Caldwell and held in custody here on failing to remain at the scene of an accident charge.

Belleville police alleged Brant was the driver of a motor car that was involved in an accident near the intersection of Bleecker Ave., and Station Street on Aug 7th last and had left the scene of the accident at that time. In the meantime however, he had enlisted in the Canadian armed services and was apprehended while on furlough. He is being held without bail to appear tomorrow.

ENTERED BEDROOM TO STEAL $15

And when he awoke, he found it no joke . . for someone had stolen his poke.

That's the situation Harold Stringer, lodger at No. 8 Doyle's Terrace, off Pinnacle St., found himself in Sunday morning when he awoke to find his trouser pockets had been rifled during his sleep and $15 stolen.

While Stringer slept sneak thieves entered the bedroom and removing his pocket book from his trousers, stole $15. Mr. Stringer informed city police the cash was intact when he retired about 1.30 o'clock Sunday morning, but was gone when he awoke shortly before six a.m.

CYCLISTS WARNED TO BUY LICENCE

"With the rationing of gasoline, citizens have turned to cycling for pleasure as well as transportation to daily labors. There is a marked increase in the number of bicycles being used in Belleville today over the number ridden last year, but strangely enough there isn't the same increase in the number of bicycle licences being sold at the City Hall," revealed Deputy Chief Harman today as he stated the city police department had been instructed to prosecute all cyclists found delinquent in the purchasing of their 1943 Belleville bicycle licence plates. There are scores of bicycles being ridden in the city without the necessary bike licence and owners will definitely be prosecuted unless the marker plate is obtained immediately.

TWO SONS CABLE 'SAFE AND WELL'

Mrs. Thomas Coxon, 300 Charles Street, has received a cable from her two sons in Sicily saying "please don't worry, safe and well, all our love", (Sgd.) Jack and Roy. Both boys went overseas and are serving with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

Cigarette Cause Of Minor Blaze On House Porch

A number of negligible fires broke out over a wide area of the city from Thursday to Monday but city firemen were able to subdue the flames without loss with the exception of a fire reported last Thursday, and therein lies a story.

A fire alarm sent the city firemen with their full equipment to 116 Chatham Street where they found the front porch of the house in flames. When brought under control and extinguished, the damage was assessed at approximately $200. The cause of the fire was laid to a cigarette which fell from the hand of a resident of the house and ignited the couch upon which he was lying. Spectators who viewed the scene before the arrival of the fire department describe the episode: the man made several attempts to beat out the flames with little success and came near to receiving severe burns for his trouble. The couch was burned completely.

The other fires reported were a call to the House of Refuge on Saturday afternoon to put out a small blaze that was caused by a short-circuit in the alarm system, and a call to 166 Foster Avenue when a tar barrel took fire. A bonfire on Victoria Ave. occupied the attention of the fire department this morning.

"Miss War Worker" Contestants

MANETTA TURNER

Bristol

MANETTA TURNER, North Park Street, war worker in the Bristol Aircraft Co., says she is glad she is able to do something to help along the Canadian war effort. Her job at Bristol consists of touch-up final inspection of war materials manufactured in the plant. During her eighteen months with the Bristol Company she says she has been happy and likes her work. Prior to the outbreak of war Miss Turner worked in various retail stores on Front Street but now prefers war work to her former occupation.

"It is easier to turn in a good day's work when you know you are doing something that is really worthwhile," says Manetta, "and as long as I can keep up the standard I have set for myself and maintain the standard set by the company, I will feel that I am contributing something really definite toward winning this war."

When asked what her plans for after the war were, Manetta said that she would probably get married — like all the others, which is a commendable ambition and should arouse considerable interest among the male element. She says she does not play ball for the company's baseball team, but she finds their parties and dances very entertaining and lots of fun.

PHYLLIS FOSTER

Reliance

PHYLLIS FOSTER, candidate for the title "Miss War Worker" representing the Reliance Aircraft Co., Ltd., says that she likes her work in the factory: "I have been with Reliance for eighteen months and they have been happy months, each one of them. Before the war I worked as a temporary experimental worker at the Dominion Government. Entomological Laboratory for four years. It was interesting work but right now I am happier doing what I am doing. I work in, as we call it at the plant, 'Final Inspection.; everything manufactured by Reliance goes through our department before it is shipped and we have to be on the alert all the while to be certain that no faulty equipment leaves our plant. The girls I work with are wonderfully co-operative and I don't know where I would find any nicer people."

When asked what were her plans for after the war, Phyllis proudly stated that she was going to make a home for her soldier husband, Bruce Foster, who is serving overseas with the tank corps. Phyllis' husband has been overseas since last Christmas. "You can tell any girls who may ask whether it is dirty work we do, whether we get our hands soiled, you can tell them we do . . . and are proud of it!" To illustrate the truth of her statement, Phyllis displayed her hands, small, dainty — but very dirty.

The title "Miss War Worker" will be ably worn by Phyllis Foster if she is the choice of the judges next Thursday, August 19th., when the selection will be made at the Kiwanis Karnival on Front Street.

MARGARET SIMPSON

Belleville-Sargeant

MARGARET SIMPSON, is another Belleville-Sargeant employee who started working for them before the war. She has been with the Belleville-Sargeant Co., Ltd., for five years. Margaret works with Ann Wade in the packing department and feels much the same about her job as Ann does and sees enough romance in it to make it different than ordinary packing and shipping would be. Margaret has a fiance with the R.C.A.F. overseas. She hears from him with splendid regularity and answers each of his letters with diligent promptness. "I know how pleased I am when I get a letter from him so I just assume that he, too, is pleased when he hears from me. We are going to be married as soon as he comes home and I am going to make a home for him."

Margaret plays centre field for the Belleville-Sargeant baseball team and takes part in other activities of the plant when they come along. She thinks the "Miss War Worker" contest is fun.

Madoc

Madoc (Special)—A special meeting, sponsored by Madoc Women's Institute and addressed by Mrs. Harcourt, of Brockville, and a member of W.R.A.C., was held in the Orange Hall on Tuesday evening. Mrs. Harcourt gave a very informative talk on the food and clothing situation in Canada at present and was ready to answer any question of interest to the ladies. The attendance was not so large as had been hoped and it is regretable that speakers who are made available for the public, do not take more interest in matters of such vital importance at the present time. Mrs. Moon, president of Madoc W.I., acted as chairman and introduced the speaker. Special music was provided by Mrs. Leslie Ashley, Miss Minnie Ferguson, Miss D. Dulmage and Master Billie Tumelty.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Madill, of Toronto, spent a few days with the latter's sister, Mrs. Walter Whytock.

Rev. W. A. Hunter, Mrs. Hunter and two sons spent Thursday in Madoc calling upon friends. They were returning to their home at Fort Coulonge, Que., after spending their holidays at Stoney Lake.

Mrs. Alex Cochran has returned home after visiting her daughter, Mrs. May and Mr. May in Ottawa.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Reid, of Chapleau, spent the week with Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Brown.

SWEDISH ATTITUDE STIFFENS

Stockholm, Aug. 16. (AP)—In a new stiffening of its attitude toward Germany, neutral Sweden decreed yesterday that courier aircraft must not be used to transport Nazi military personnel across Swedish territory. The regulation, announced in a communique, applies to air transit between Germany and both Norway and Finland.

Spinney Resigns As Chairman Of N.W.F. Committee

Ottawa, Aug. 16. (CP)—Finance Minister Ilsley announced today resignation of George W. Spinney of Montreal, as chairman of the National War Finance Committee because of "pressure of other responsibilities".

Mr. Spinney who is president of the Bank of Montreal, had been chairman of the committee since its inception early in the war.

The announcement said G. F. Towers, governor of the Bank of Canada, has agreed to become general chairman while K. A. Henderson, previously deputy chairman, has been appointed executive chairman.

Mr. Spinney will continue his association with the Board as honorary chairman and member of the executive committee.

Mr. Ilsley, commenting on Mr. Spinney's resignation said:—

"Mr. Spinney has been chairman during each of the four victory loans and the success of the committee's activities has in large measure been due to his very great abilities.

"I regret that he does not find it possible to continue as chairman of the National War Finance Committee. His efforts have been untiring and we are indeed grateful to him for the leadership which he has given to our public borrowing activities".

Bridal Shower Gay Occasion

Allan Mills — A pleasant event took place recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Heath when a large number of friends and neighbors gathered at their home to honor their son, Lieut. Russell Heath and his bride (nee Mary Johnson), of Toronto.

Community singing and round dancing were enjoyed until eleven o'clock. The chairman took the chair and an address was read by Mr. Ronald Brown.

The young couple were then presented with a chime clock, a purse of money and a bridge lamp. Mrs. Hiriam Mumby, president of the War Service Club, read an address and Mr. Roy Lough presented Lt. Heath with a handsome wrist watch.

Mr. and Mrs. Heath thanked their friends very kindly for the lovely gifts and invited all to visit them in the near future.

Another pleasant feature of the evening was the fact that it was the birthday of Mr. Charles Heath, B.A., of Belleville, who was present. Mr. and Mrs. R. Heath will reside at Kingston, where he is stationed. They left on Tuesday for a short furlough.

Birthday Celebration

Over thirty relatives gathered on Sunday at the home of Mrs. Hinds to help her celebrate her birthday anniversary and enjoy a chicken dinner. Her daughter, Mrs. Gerald McFaul, entered the dining room carrying a beautiful cake decorated with pink and gold candles. With her husband and four sons in the armed forces, Mrs. Frank Hinds and a 17-year-old son, Arnold, have been operating the farm. Two of her sons, Pte. Alfred Willman and Pte. Irvin Willman are now fighting in Sicily.

Deseronto Dairy Entered and $100 Taken From Safe

Safe-breakers entered the premises of the Deseronto Dairy early Sunday morning and after prying the door off the heavy office safe stole over $100. and a quantity of Canadian gasoline ration book coupons, that were secured inside. The cover of the commercial gas rationing book was left on the office floor along with other papers and articles strewn about the place indicating the robbers left in haste after obtaining their loot.

Chief Noel Langton of Deseronto, was notified of the robbery by an employee early Sunday morning. Investigations revealed, that entrance had been made by forcing a side door. On the floor in the dairy office was found a five-foot steel crowbar jack, used by wrecking companies for removing large spike. The bar-jack was used by the safe-breakers to pry the hinges loose from the safe allowing the door to fall off.

"There must have been a tremendous amount of pressure exerted on the safe door as the dairy safe is of a substantial steel structure," Chief Langton told Provincial Police, who were later called in to assist in the investigation.

Police are of the opinion there were three men implicated in the robbery and they were doubtless travelling by motor car as fresh tire marks were found adjacent to the Deseronto Dairy building during the police investigation. Nearby neighbors stated they heard no undue disturbance during the early hours of Sunday morning, when the safe-cracking was perpetrated.

Six Injured When Car Turns Over

Trenton, Aug. 16 — Six people were injured in a motor accident here on Saturday evening when a car driven by Pte. Melvin B. Sexsmith of the R.C.A.S.C., home on furlough from Newfoundland, turned over in ditch just at the east end of the town.

Sexsmith was driving west towards Trenton and when meeting a car he turned too close to the shoulder of the highway, the car slipped over into ditch and turned completely over. Passengers in the car were Mary Jones, 48 Byron St., Betty Brummell, 95 Dundas St. E., LAC. H. C. Gregg of 6 R.D., R. R. Burleight of the R.A.F., stationed at Trenton and B. A. Scarfe of the R.C.A.F.

Sexsmith was severely cut about the face and head by flying glass and was taken to the R.C.A.F. Hospital at Trenton as were Burleigh, Scarfe and Gregg. Gregg suffered from a severe sprained neck and Burleigh and Scarfe abrasions about the head and face. Miss Jones had several abrasions and Miss Brummel had abrasions and also a deep cut on her left leg. All were attended by Dr. J. V. Byrne, of Trenton.

CHURCHILL BACK

Matter of Speculation

The work to be handled at the Quebec Conference of the two Democratic leaders remains largely a matter of speculation for there has been little in the tense official communiques on the subject. But there is a general expectation that decisions of the meeting will relate to at least five parts of the war and post-war picture:

1.—Additional, stronger combined assaults against the enemy in Europe and in the Pacific area; . .

2.—A revision of the "unconditional surrender" terms of the United Nations, clarifying the bases on which capitulating countries may hope to deal with the Allies;

3.— Methods of re-establishing civil government in areas brought under Allied control;

4.—A decision on the official position of the French committee for national liberation which has as its leaders Gen .Charles de Gaulle and Gen. Henri Giraud;

5.—Some exposition of the war aims of the United Nations, more specific than the generalized terms of the Atlantic charter, signed just two years ago.

Greeted at Quebec

Before Mr. Roosevelt arrives, it was anticipated, M. Churchill and Mr. King will renew discussions begun last week after the British Prime Minister first arrived here Tuesday. The subject of these talks—liks the doings of the main conference—have been kept secret but it has been considered likely the role of the Canadian armed forces in future ofensives, and particularly the role of the army, has been discussed.

Mr. Churchill's special train arrived from Hyde Park yesterday morning. In contrast with the secrecy of his first arrival when he was taken secretly to the Citadel by motor, a crowd of correspondents and cameramen met him.

He answered with a cheerful "what they call it in the States—no comment" when persistent newspapermen sought answers to such questions as "can you tell us about your talks with the President?"

BRITISH REGARD

"First," the News Chronicle said, "because in circumstances of total war what might constitute an open city is almost incapable of satisfactory definition.

"Second, because this difficulty becomes much greater in the case of a city which like Rome at the moment is not under threat of military occupation but merely seeking immunity from air bombardment.

"Third, because in any case with every day that passes there is increasing reason to doubt the good faith in the Badoglio government."

INDUSTRIAL

Swiss dispatches to London morning newspapers reported Milan was "one gigantic ruin" from the heavy raids on Thursday and Saturday nights.

These reports said thousands were trying to get out of the blasted metropolis where the populace has repeatedly demonstrated for immediate peace.

Fires again were visible in Milan early today and bomb blasts were audible in the Swiss frontier City of Lugano, 35 miles away.

The German air force, meanwhile, lashed a south coast town, which was later identified by a Berlin broadcast as Portsmouth, with the heaviest assault in two years last night and lost five of some 25 raiders sent over in this and other scattered raids on coastal towns.

The raiders came in singly, scattering their bombs over widely-separated parts of the city and causing fairly heavy casualties including a number killed.

The heaviest damage was inflicted in the working class section of the port, which was hard hit in previous raids.

Mosquitoes bombers raided Berlin Saturday night, giving residents of the German capital a taste of what may come with the approaching longer nights.

Saturday night's R.A.F. attack on Milan was on a smaller scale than the raid Thursday night, described officially as the heaviest air blow on the war on Italy. The major Saturday night target was the Breda Armament Works in the Northeast industrial area.

The War Today—
Question of Time, Weather Important Military Problem

(By DeWITT MacKENZIE)
(Associated Press War Analyst)

While Messrs Churchill and Roosevelt will go into conference at Quebec surrounded by an atmosphere of general success, there's a tricky military problem which may give some trouble, and that's one of time—whether there is still enough good fighting weather left this season to enable the Allies to take full advantage of Hitler's unhappy position, especially on the Russian front.

In short the question is whether we are going to be able to get at the Fuehrer with both fists while he is showing signs of being hurt, or whether the bell at the end of this round will give him a breathing spell.

Weather and Fighting

Another six or eight weeks will see the weather in the European theatres going sour. Fighting will still continue, of course, but it will be greatly impeded. This will be particularly true of the air force, which will face days on end when little or nothing can be done.

What the parley at Quebec will have to figure out is where the Western Allies can best strike in the remaining good weather so as to assist the great Red drive. The Russians, of course, want a land front opened up in France, and the Western Allies also want to get at that as soon as possible. That's the operation which would do Hitler the most harm right now. But is it feasible?

Tremendous Operation

An invasion of France is a tremendous operation from every viewpoint. It will require a vast assemblage of fighting men, warships and transports, air fleets, and equipment of all sorts.

Obviously it takes time to assemble the wherewithal for such an undertaking, and the Mediterranean operations have been employing much equipment, and perhaps troops, which would be needed in England for an invasion across the Channel.

It takes time to move such an outfit. Unless some of it has been shifted, in anticipation of the speedy conclusion of the Sicilian campaign, there certainly isn't much time left before the autumn weather sets in.

Still, it strikes me that there's no reason to abandon hope that the Western Allies can stage an invasion of France this season, and perhaps carry out other measures in the Mediterranean at the same time. We are piling up striking power in all theatres fast and it may be that a realignment of the invasion forces and equipment could be carried out with sufficient speed to just about get under the wire.

Gordon Sees Let-Down of Support Of Wartime Controls at Time Need for Control Is Most Vital

Toronto, Aug. 16 (CP) — Donald Gordon, Prices Board chairman, said here Saturday that wartime controls are losing the active public support they received under the stimulus of possible defeat in the war.

"The cold fact is that we are not succeeding in holding down these costs (which lead to inflation)," Mr. Gordon said in an address prepared for delivery before a luncheon meeting of the annual convention of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association.

Asking that newspapers continue to stress the need of maintaining controls to prevent wartime inflation, the board chairman said that if he were summarizing the present situation it would be thus:

"The World War front looks promising and our home war front is far from happy."

When there was the prospect of possible defeat or at least a long-delayed victory controls had active public support.

"Everybody now is thinking of victory and a great deal of wishful thinking is being indulged in about an early peace, with a quick abandonment of wartime restriction," he continued.

"Unfortunately, this let down of public support comes at the very moment when the need for control is more vital than ever. The cumulative effect of shortages of civilian supplies and raw materials, machinery and manpower is exerting more pressure now than at any time since the beginning of the war.

"Pressures" are Indicated

"Many people fed-up with restrictions and controls are tending to let selfishness rule their judgment, forgetting that in so doing they not only weaken the drive needed for the knock-out punch to our enemies, but as well they risk losing the benefits they have achieved by their forebearance and co-operation up to the present time."

Mr. Gordon said "pressures" were making themselves felt on every side, and he referred to them as follows:

1. "Labor is militant and demanding wage adjustments all along the line. Notwithstanding the wage ceiling many thousands of wage increases are being demanded, and as one wage adjustment after another is made it is reflected immediately in the costs of production, which, in turn, means the pressure on the price ceiling is rapidly becoming insupportable.

2. "Food prices are creeping steadily upwards as the agricultural industry insists upon, and obtains, higher prices under the emergency of curtailment of essential supplies."

3. "With few exceptions, business and industry keep their eyes on profit margins and jealously protest any move to limit or control them.

"Others traffic illegally to get more than their legitimate share of available supplies. Generally speaking, our courts deal leniently with offenders against wartime controls, conveying the impression that such offences are an understandably human weakness which ought not to be punished too severely.

Inflation no Imaginary Condition

"I say definitely that inflation is no imaginary condition—we have all the circumstances and pressure which create inflation right here—now!

"We must fight tooth and nail to prevent these pressures being translated into a price inflation. We are in the greatest possible danger of failing to do so."

Declaring that the state of public morale was largely in the keeping of the press, Mr. Gordon said that he believed too much emphasis was placed on the "burdens, dislocations and so-called sacrifices of war." the majority of Canadians living at home were better off than they ever were before the war. None of the horrors of conquest had been visited on Canadian homes.

No Time For Soft-Headedness

"We cannot afford in wartime to be sentimental and soft-headed," he said. "Yet every report of a shortage, temporary or otherwise, becomes front page news and everyone rushes around to blame this person or that person for stupidity or lack of foresight, and so on."

He did not suggest the press refrain from criticism, for "plenty of situations" badly needed such a stimulating and cleansing force. The news on the home front should not be looked at so much through peace-time spectacles, "and it should be possible to get a better wartime perspective in regard to certain reports and criticisms"

The press sholld explain that orders and regulations are expedients arising out of emergencies beyond control, and the devices used could not remove the emergency but only ease and equalize its impact on all.

Trenton Soldier Reported Killed

Trenton, Aug. 16—One more Trenton man has been reported killed in action, one missing and one wounded, over the weekend.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander McCormack, 27 Ramsay Street, have been officially notified that their son Lance-Corporal Cecil Edmond McCormack, 23, has been killed in action, presumably in Sicily. He enlisted with the Hastings & Prince Edward Regiment at the outbreak of war and went overseas with the 1st Battalion in December 1939. Two other brothers also are in the service, Pte. Earl McCormack, 20, of the Royal Canadian Ordnance is serving overseas, and Gunner Ellwood McCormack, just 18, is with the Canadian Navy serving on a minesweeper.

Wounded

Mrs. Joseph Whyte, Bay Street, has been officially notified that her husband Pte. Joseph Whyte who went overseas early in 1940 and is serving with the Hastings & Prince Edward Regiment has been wounded in action. Pte. Whyte is the father of five children and was born in England.

Missing

Missing in action, according to official word received by his parents Mr. and Mrs. Michael LaFrance, is their son Pte. Harry M. LaFrance, 36. He enlisted with the Hastings & Prince Edward Regiment in 1939 and went overseas early in 1940. Two other brothers are in the service W. O. 1 Frank LaFrance, 27, is an observer instructor in Scotland and Bombardier Charles A. LaFrance, age 23, is at present stationed at Fingal, Ont.

OVER 90 U-BOATS

The statistics and tone of the statement seemed to make it clear that the one weapon on which Hitler had counted to keep his fortress of Europe impregnable had failed completely at the strategic time, due to the overwhelming success of Allied counter-measures.

Losses More Than Made Up.

Out of 2,500 vessels involved in the operations against Sicily and in moving large numbers of reinforcements following up the initial invasion, the report noted, only 80,000 tons had been lost.

Morever, it was disclosed that new ships completed by the Allies in 1943 exceed all sinkings from all causes by upward of 3,000,000 tons."

Hitler had relied on the submarine to sink so many British and Allied ships and destroy such quantities of munitions despatched from North America to the European theatre that it would be impossible for the Allies to bring the full force of their productive power to bear at the battle front.

To this end months ago he appointed Admiral Karl Doenitz, a ruthless submarine warfare expert, to head the German Navy and subordinate all other naval activities to those of submarine production and operation.

The subs, however, failed to stop the accumulation of men and materials for the Sicilian invasion, the transport of supplies for air raids against Germany and the delivery of munitions to Russia.

The statement by Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill made it clear that barring a letdown in Allied anti-submarine operations the U-boats would not be able to disrupt sea communications between America and Europe in the future any more than they have been in the last several months.

The statement declared that offensive operations now are continuing "to progress most favorably in all areas".

Principal weapons employed in crushing the undersea menace are escort aircraft carriers, which take their air umbrella right along with the convoys long-range land-based patrol bombers which rove for hundreds of miles out over both the North and South Atlantic looking for submarines, and destroyer escorts, which are modified destroyer types armed principally with depth charges and anti-aircraft weapons.

After noting that Germany still has large submarine reserves, the Anglo-American statement remarked:

"It is necessary, therefore, to prepare for intensification of the battle both at sea and in the shipyards and to use our shipping with utmost economy to strengthen and speed the general offensive of the United Nations. But we can expect continued success only if we do not delay our efforts in any way.

The statement went on to say that July was probably the most successful month in the anti-submarine warfare because Allied imports "have been high, shipping losses moderate and U-boats sinkings heavy".

Picton and District

Three P.E. County Casualties Listed

Picton, Aug. 16—Three more casualties among Prince Edward County men with Hastings & Prince Edward Regiment were officially reported on Saturday. This brings the total to six killed and fifteen wounded.

Wounded were Cpl. Oran Greatrix, Pte. Fred Forshee and Pte. Vernon Hudgin.

Cpl. Greatrix is the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Greatrix, West Lake, and went overseas with the local regiment in 1939. Earlier last week they had received a personal cable from him in hospital, this stating that "operation over, condition satisfactory, health improving," and giving his address as No. 2 General Hospital Middle East Forces. This is interpreted by his family to mean that he underwent an operation after being wounded and is progressing satisfactorily. He has a brother, Pte. Victor Greatrix, also overseas.

Pte. Forshee is the son of Mrs. Ernest Boyer, Picton, and his wife is at preent employed at Batawa. He resided here before his enlistment in 1939. His wife was formerly Elsie Mead, and her brother, Pte. Eric Mead, was one of the first casualties reported, being seriously wounded on July 10.

Pte. Hudgin is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Egbert Hudgin of South Bay, and went overseas with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

No details were given in these messages.

Some confusion is being caused by the fact that messages are being received by families from those wounded before the official notice is received. These usually state that they are doing well, yet the recipients are unaware that they had met with mishap. Lack of an official casualty list, published without delay, is the cause of many unfounded rumors, which cause additional anxiety.

GERMANS

Military booty includes 293 75-millimeter guns as well as some larger artillery pieces and 188 tanks. The number of prisoners was not announced, mainly because they are being rounded up too fast for counting. More than 130,000 were held last week.

Chances Diminishing

Hour by hour, the German chances of removing what is left of three divisions, the Herman Goering, the 15th. Armored and the 29th. Motoried, are diminishing.

Italian opposition is not expected to be serious, but there remains the problem of moving the Allied armies along the narrow roads, which have been cut in many places by Axis demolition parties.

Allied engineers are working furiously to put roads and bridges back in shape, clearing mines and road blocks and constructing bypasses around the worst spots.

In addition to the ring of strong points about Messina, Allied units are coming within range of 15-inch bateries on the Italian shore which can throw shells weighing more than a ton about 20 miles.

German troops are expected to man the miniature hedgehog fortifications about Messina, on a radius some five miles from the heart of the city, if the Allied pursuit endangers them before the main Nazi forces have had time to escape.

Use Power Launches

The Germans crossing to the mainland generally use power launches and the gun-bearing Seibel ferries, which make the two-mile trip in 15 or 20 minutes. By necessity most of the evacuation traffic is carried on by night.

British and Canadian Wellington bombers are hammering this nocturnal traffic. By daylight Allied warplanes of all types, swarming through the heavy anti-aircraft fire, are raining bombs, cannon shells and machine-gun bullets upon the escape craft.

British and American warships meanwhile are patrolling the outer perimeter of the area, braving the fire of enemy shore batteries.

Forces of Democracy

How wide the aims of the United Nations as they battle against the Axis are, is indicated in the comment on Saturday the second anniversary of the Atlantic Charter signing made by President Roosevelt, "We are determined that we shall gain total victory over our enemies, and we recognize the fact that our enemies are not only Germany, Italy and Japan; they are all the forces of oppression, intollerance, insecurity ond injustice, which have impeded the forward march of civilization."

For the first time in history the lines are clearly drawn. Never was there so just a cause as that which inspires and directs the Allied Powers. The Axis nations have formed the most sinister plans and plots in all history with a diabolical emphasis the like of which the world has never before seen. It is these enemies who have served to direct attention to "the oppression, intolerance, insecurity and injustice which have impeded the forward march of civilization," for they are the exponents of these very evils. This war forced upon the world is seen not as people in other eras have looked upon wars but the world sees in this struggle how evil in all the worst aspects have been the Axis nations. So along with the Axis must be crushed those forces which the United States President names, "all the forces of oppression, intolerance, insecurity and injustice."

The United Nations today see clearly the satanic pattern and design of the enemy.

Two years after the signing of the Atlantic Charter the world of peace-loving nations which are warring to destroy the evil things, Nazism and Fascism, have seen tremendous advance since the days of August, 1941. Then much remained to be done. Thanks to the high leadership of men like Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt and also Mr. Stalin and Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, the war is moving definitely in the direction of Allied victory and triumph. Before the signing of the Charter Britain had alone held off the German attempt to dominate the British skies with the air blitzkrieg of the Germans and had just recently been joined in the war by Russia which had a few weeks before been attacked by Germany. Then the United States was not officially in the war, though she was a staunch friend lending every help against aggression wherever found. Since that time, Japan threw in her lot with the enemies of the free peoples and declared war on the United States and Britain. Through these two years, the star of the United Nations has risen, particularly in the last year as the Allies brought their full weight of production and their united courage to bear upon the Axis whether in Europe, on the Atlantic or on the Pacific.

Today the enemy is being forced back and to use the words of Mr. Roosevelt, "we stand upon the threshold of major developments in this war."

So far has the vision of the Atlantic Charter been realized in not only many Allied impressive victories which have demonstrated that the offensive definitely rests with the Allies, and foretells victory, but the pact formed two years ago shows that it definitely meets the high motives of the nations who are fighting for freedom, "the right of self-determination becoming once more a definite reality."

Axis Anxiety

Germany and Japan cannot avoid sustained interest in the forthcoming sixth conference between Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt.

Past conferences of these men have spoken with definite results in a manner which has made an abiding impression upon the world, the world of the free peoples and the world of the Axis. The Churchill-Roosevelt decisions in the five vital parleys in which the chiefs of the staffs of the powers also met have spelled steady increase of misfortune for the enemy. The Axis peoples know what they have had to endure since Casablanca. And they must wonder what the Hyde Park-Quebec parleys will mean in further attrition against Germany, Italy and Japan. For Germany pounded as she is and in retirement in Russia and in Sicily and possibly from most of Italy should Italy see the wisdom of getting out of the war at the Allied suggestion and urging, and Italy practically forced out of the struggle and Japan bearing losses in air, on the sea and in the field at the rate much greater than American, must all see no easing of the punishment they have been forced to undergo but rather an intensification of it which will neutralize their power to such an extent that their strength will crumble and they will be made to yield without condition.

The enemies know the Allies can strike when and where they will. They therefore must realize that the deliberations are freighted with more punishment for the three enemy nations.

While therefore the parleys not only plan a course of action, that is set to smash the Axis, they also upset the nervous system and the morale of the enemy states and leaders. On the other hand these gatherings are an inspiration for the intensification of the spirit of service in all the Allied lands.

2-Ounce Gooseberries

(Leeds Yorkshire Post.

It is no earth-shaking matter, but wartime regulations now stipulate that gooseberries may weigh as little as 1-2 ounce each, compared with the previous standard of 3-4 ounce. Yet how this announcement would have shaken the old north country gooseberry growers! Smaller gooseberries? That would have been almost sacrilege to men who have had one central aim in life—to grow bigger and still bigger gooseberries.

They were working-men growers. They spent their evenings and weekends, and not a little of their wages, striving to produce mammoth gooseberries. They succeeded; by careful nursing and fattening some of their berries turned the scale at nearly 2 ounces each. They raised gooseberry-growing to a fine art which was seen at its highest in Lancashire. Shows were held exclusively devoted to gooseberries—that is, big gooseberries.

From the long experience and methods of these gooseberry growers emerged many of the superior types of berries now familiar in modern gardening. The big gooseberry was their legacy to posterity.

This England

(London Spectator)

If anyone desires a picture of scenic beauty that is more than skin deep let him go out into any part he chooses of the English country today. Almost every parish is like a new place, and familiar scenes are bright with a strange light.

Wherever you look the colored ears of grain or the comely shocks pattern out the landscape as never before in memory, at any rate in mid August.

Some of the eastern counties, which were once the granary of London, do not share in this revelation, for their harvest is rather less good than elsewhere and their fields have always been arable; but elsewhere the harvest is bountiful and early almost beyond precedent, and a multitude of older grass fields are the most richly adorned.

This England is more English than ever it was. It differs from all other countries by reason of the multitude of single trees that frame these harvest scenes and embower the homesteads and church towers as well as by the hedgerows.

CARO, MICHIGAN

In the little town of Caro, in the thumb of Michigan,
The members of the Rotary Club are cheering to a man.
There's a local church elated and a school that's very proud
And a druggist telling stories to a happy, youthful crowd.
They've a hero now to boast of in a boy they've grown up with,
For the little town of Caro is the home of Maynard Smith.

I have visited in Caro when this flyer was a lad
I knew the judge, his father, and his friendship long I had.
I have met the village doctor and the blacksmith and the sage
And I knew the gallant Maynard long before he came of age.
So I know the joy of Caro and the cheer in every throat
When the Congress sent its medal to be pinned on Maynard's coat.

We have given the highest honor that our country can bestow
To that youngster born in Caro two and thirty years ago,
And so lang as history's written for the benefit of man
There will be a line of splendor penned for Caro, Michigan.
Now the town is made immortal by a boy's deeds alone,
And the little town of Caro shares his glory as its own.

"Will the new market building be completed this season"? is a question frequently asked. The present rate of progress on the work does not seem to warrant an affirmative answer to the question, as the number of men employed is small and there is yet much work to be done. Probably the delay in completing the tower is due to the non-arrival of the clock.

Milan Reported Urging Peace To Save Italy

London, Aug. 16. (CP)—Dispatches from the Swiss Border said the people of Milan were crying frenziedly for peace and that all five anti-Fascist parties in Italy have united to demand immediate peace as "the only way to save Italy".

A resolution reported adopted by the five parties was said to declare Premier Pietro Badoglio was only "a continuation of Mussolini" and that the House of Savoy was linked to the old regime and was "not acceptable to democratic Italy".

A Rome broadcast reported by the Ministry of Information last night said the Mayor of Milan, Senator Gallari Scotti, had resigned and that Prefect Giorgio Boltra Fio had been named to head the municipality.

Two Drowned In Stoney Lake

Peterborough, Aug. 16 —(CP) — Two persons lost their lives Sunday when a canoe upset on Stoney Lake, near McCracken's landing, 20 miles northeast of here.

Miss Daisy Adla, 40, and William Lloyd Jordan, 43, both of Peterborough, had gone on a fishing trip and discovery of their overturned canoe some time later indicated the tragedy. The woman's body was discovered in shallow water near the shore of an island and it is believed she swam to land and then collapsed. Jordan's body was recovered about 30 feet from the island.

Windsor, Aug. 16—(CP)—Thieves who opened the safe in the Service Building of the Detroit-Windsor Tunnel Co., early today stole between $4,000 and $5,000, about half of it in American currency.

The safe was opened by means of the combination between 4 and 6 a.m., police estimate. Company officials said the combination was known to all drivers and tollmen who customarily placed their receipts in safety boxes in the safe.

About 20 of the safety boxes were taken from the safe and ripped open.

Bombed Vila, Japan's last remaining airfield in the Central Solomons;

Raided enemy-held villages and possible supply centres on New Britain and New Guinea;

Sank or damaged 19 more Japanese supply barges of the coasts of those islands.

In the strictly aerial combat yesterday, Americans of the Solomons Air Command accounted for 12 dive bombers and 22 fighters against a loss of two planes.

Twenty-seven of the enemy craft, intercepted as they winged southward toward the New Georgia fighting zone, were shot down in the neighborhood of Vella Lavella Island. The other seven were knocked out over their home base of Kahili.

The air war, for the moment, dominated the Pacific fighting scene. On New Georgia, American troops were reported closing a pincers from north and south on an enemy centre of resistance three or four miles below the Japanese base at Bairoko. There was no detail as to the strength or effect of the movement.

Dispatches direct from New Guinea said Allied troops, in renewed fighting Saturday, had improved their positions on ridges overlooking Tambu Bay, a few miles from Salamaua.

The first paper mill in the United States was established in 1690 at Germantown near Philadelphia by the Rittenhouse family, which had come over with the first German settlers in William Penn's colony seven years earlier.

When earlier settlers in the American wilderness took possession of a piece of land they marked its boundaries by cutting notches in trees with a hatchet; such a farm by squatter's right was known as a "Tomahawk claim."

British soldiers at the time of the American Revolution carried a total load of about 125 pounds.

It is estimated that about 25,000 Americans served in the British army during the American Revolution.

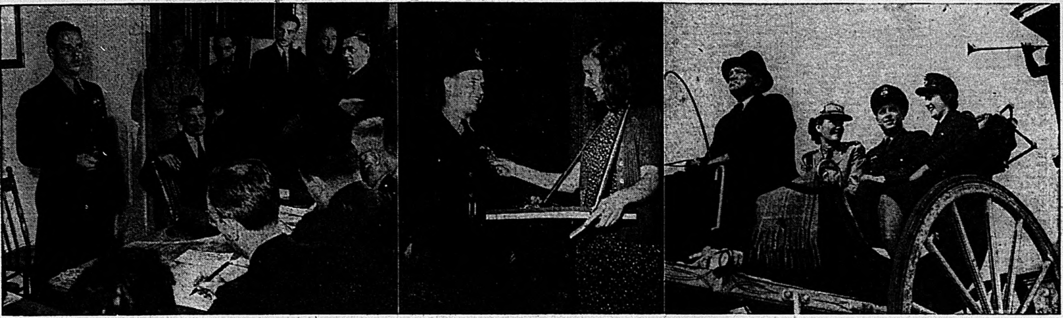
When the moon is far to the north it is popularly called a "cold moon," because some people then suppose it to be a sign of cold weather. There is probably no relation whatever between the weather and the apparent position of the moon. The motions of the moon are uniform and its position can be accurately computed for years and even centuries ahead. No such uniformity exists in regard to the weather.

R.A.F. DAM BUSTER TALKS TO PRESS, BUYS WAR SAVING STAMPS, SEES QUEBEC SIGHTS WITH CANADIAN SERVICE GIRLS



Quebec, August 16 — Wing Commander G. P. Gibson, V.C., D.S.O., and Bar, D.F.C. and Bar, who led the now famous raid on the Mohne and Eder dams in Germany, spent the afternoon of his 25th birthday recently talking to reporters and seeing some of Quebec City's historic sights with Assistant Section Officer Noreen Cambon, Women's Division R.C.A.F., and Lieutenant Carren Murray, Acting Officer Commanding No. 9 Company C.W.A.C., both of Quebec.

Wing Commander Gibson came over from England with Prime Minister Churchill's party. Following his press conference (left) the young flyer stopped long enough in the street to buy war savings stamps (centre) and then, with the two Canadian service girls (right) got into a high, two-wheeled caleche and went for a short ride. Assistant Section Officer Cambon was overseas in Gibson's squadron from January, 1942, to August, 1942, but never before had the two met. She has a brother, Kenneth, of the Royal Rifles, who is a prisoner in Hong Kong, and a sister, Marjorie, who has been overseas as a nurse for three years.—(National Film Board Photo.)

YOUTHS OF 18 TO BE CALLED FOR TRAINING

Labor Minister Mitchell Says Married Men, 27 to 30 to be Drafted

Ottawa, Aug. 15 —(CP)— Men reaching the age of 18 this year and married men up to 30 years of age now are subject to call for compulsory military service under an extension of the callable classes announced by Labor Minister Mitchell over the weekend.

The new orders drop the minimum callable age from 19 to 18, but provide that men shall not be served with notice to report for medical examination until they reach the age of 18 years and six months.

The extension makes married men betwen the ages of 27 and 30 subject to call for the first time. Previously married men up to 25 were made liable to call, and as the classes go by date of birth those who were 25 when the previous extension was made now are 26 and still liable to call with their birth-year class.

No estimate was available of the number of men who may be obtained for the armed forces under the change in regulations. About 100,000 men turn 18 in a year, and all of these who are physically fit and have not enlisted in the armed forces voluntarily will be callable.

The number of married men in the age group from 27 to 30 who may be called also depends on the number who have enlisted. It is not expected to be large, because all men married since July, 1940, have been treated as single men since the start of compulsory service.

Married Men Affected.

The extension applies to men who were married before July, 1940.

The last extension of the callable groups was made in December, 1942, when the minimum age was dropped from 20 to 19, and married men up to the age of 25 were made subject to call.

The present extension comes just three years after the start of compulsory mobilization with the taking of the national registration in August, 1940. The first call-up was of single men in their early twenties, who were required to report for 30 days' training and then permitted to return to civilian life while awaiting a further call.

In March, 1941, the training period was extended to four months, and in April, 1941, an order was made requiring all men called to remain on duty for the duration of the war. Since then, there has been a progressive extension of the callable age groups until the present situation, where single men fr m 18 to 40 and married men from 19 to 30 are callable.

Tells of Convention Highlights

At the regular meeting of the Lions Club in the Gilbert Hotel on Thursday evening, Mr. V. P. Carswell, principal of College St. School, gave an interesting and enlightening address on his recent visits to the Canadian Lions Convention at Niagara Falls and also the Lions International at Cleveland.

One of the highlights at Niagara, where the convention was held in the General Brock Hotel, was the observance of the 21st. Anniversary of their Lions Club. Guest speaker for the occasion was Rev. Harold Young, United Church clergyman of Toronto, who compared our duties and responsibilities to the ever widening circle in a pond, into which a pebble has been dropped. Our first duty to our country, then the British Commonwealth, and then to the world. He emphasized the fact that Canada always stuck to the British traditions even though her flag flew alongside that of the United States.

The talk given by Doctor Kenneth Rodgers, secretary of the Big Brothers Movement of Toronto, imparted to members of the Convention many brilliant ideas and suggestions for their work, especially that done among boys. He spoke of the growing increase in juvenile delinquency, partly due to the many mothers who are working and come home tired and weary at night to find trouble looming large and long. "Our gathering social heritage," he said, "reminds one of the gathering of puss in a sore." Democracy could be lost because of various tioning, selective service and general tightening up of privileges formerly enjoyed by all. He warned that all must watch for the coming storm which would be considerably worse unless we are able to tie ourselves and others down to the rocks of civilization. More faith must be pinned to the family, the education, and religion, or in simpler words the home, the school, and the church. He warned Lions in all Canada to prepare to help improve social order, and to see to it that the schools were made to suit the children and the church for the people and not for the Creed.

He asked the Lions to be prepared to spend money on the boys and girls, a work which would be well repaid with great dividends in the future, and insisted that they not forget their community even tho' they were diligently working for the war effort. "Form your postwar committees," he urged, "have meetings, discuss and plan for emergencies and community work following the war."

Mr. Carswell stated that while the keynote of the Niagara convention was "To Assist Juvenile Delinquency," that of the Lions International at Cleveland was definitely "Patriotism." Many interesting talks were given at the latter, one of which dealt with the Norden bomb-sight.

AIKENS W. M. S.

Sidney 3rd — "Stewardship of Time" was the theme for the August meeting of the Aikens Womans Missionary Society, which was held at the church on Thursday afternoon.

The worship service, in charge of the President, Miss Fred Westover, opened with a Hymn, and was followed with prayer by Mrs. Westover. Scripture verses were read and comments given on use of time by the President, Mrs. E. Bush, Mrs. Bailey and Mrs. C. McMullen assisted in this part of the service.

During the business period it was decided not to have the special meeting until later, when Miss McKenzie might be available as speaker. The Whitby school for leaders was brought to the attention of the group. The offering was received and Mrs. Earl Bush sang a solo.

Mrs. Fred Moon, secretary of Christian Stewardship, then took charge and introduced the topic for discussion. The members present took part, answering questions on ways of conserving time which were asked by the leader.

Mrs. Ken Jones read the story of Mary and Martha. Mrs. Moon further suggested that Christian Stewardship was more comprehensive than generally supposed, and could not be limited to time and money. A period of silent prayer was followed by singing of two verses. Mrs. Spafford read an article on "Advance" which pertained to Christian Stewardship. A piano solo by Mrs. Lee Grills was enjoyed by all. Mrs. Moon read a short article on Growth, as applied to membership. The budget was again brought to the attention of the members.

Mrs. Garnet Grills, of Hamilton, Bermuda, was present, and was welcomed by the President. Mrs. Grills responded with well chosen words of greeting and encouragement.

Mrs. Westover closed the meeting with a poem, followed by the National Anthem.

WEEKLY WARTIME NUTRITION HINTS

Beefsteak and Kidney Pie

A nutritionally valuable dish you can prepare the day before and complete in 30 minutes the next day

Busy wartime housewives are coming more and more to ask for recipes that permit pre-preparation. It's a great comfort to know—when you come home late from the Red Cross, for instance—that there is a savoury beefsteak and kidney pie all ready to pop into the oven. While it cooks you can fix your face, change your dress and set the table. It would be nice, if you had a little extra time, to have a hot leafy green vegetable to go with it: but if this is impossible, a green salad—with emphasis on watercress—would complete a fine nutritionally valuable meal.

Now here's what you do the evening before to make all this possible: Soak a veal or beef kidney in cold salted water for 30 minutes. Meanwhile, cut 1 lb. (or as much as you can spare from your ration) of beef chuck or round steak into neat pieces. Slice an onion and brown slowly in saved meat dripping or lard. Now drain the kidney, remove tubes and membranes and cut into ½-inch cubes. Add meats to the browning onion and brown well on all sides. Cover with boiling water or stock. Add 1 teaspoon Worcester Sauce—pinch of thyme, savoury, marjoram or poultry dressing—salt and pepper. Simmer covered for two hours. Thicken liquid with flour blended to smooth consistency with cold liquid. Transfer to baking dish. Cover top with flaky pastry with eyelets cut for escape of steam . . . 30 minutes in a 375° oven and the pie is ready to serve. Note:—suitable vegetables may be added.

The bride's sister, Miss Freida Bonter, was attired in a turquoise suit of jersey with navy accessories and corsage of roses.

LAC. Bernard Hewson, of the R.C.A.F., Trenton, acted as groomsman.

For the reception at the home of the bride, the bride's mother was wearing a black lace frock with black hat and corsage of red roses. The groom's sister, Mrs. R. Hodges, was in a white shark skin suit with navy accessories.

Following a wedding trip to Western Ontario, the bridal couple will reside in Trenton. The bride is a popular member of the Bank of Commerce staff here.

R.R. Hannah, Cooper, Honored at Family Picnic Held at Oak Lake

In spite of the fact that Friday, Aug. 13th would be considered by many unlucky, the family of Mr. R. R. Hannah, Cooper, spent a very enjoyable day at Oak Lake, the occasion being a surprise party in honor of Mr. Hannah's eighty-fourth birthday.

Of the family twenty-seven were present of the immediate family with their children and grandchildren. Six grandchildren and two great grandchildren were not present. Also at the gathering was the only surviving member of Mr. Hannah's family, a sister, Mrs. Martin Miller, of Hartsmere and her husband and son.

After all had partaken of a picnic lunch, a short address was read by Mrs. Maurice Reynolds and a presentation was made to the guest of honor by two great grandchildren, Nancy Reynolds and Roddy Grills, of a cane, although it is far from being necessary for the recipient to use one at present.

A beautifully decorated birthday cake was also made and presented by Mrs. Miller.

During the afternoon those who enjoyed the water spent considerable time in the lake, while others visited each other, enjoying an afternoon of leisure in such beautiful surroundings. Mr. Hannah donned a bathing suit and spent a half hour or more in the lake showing the family some stunts that doubtless to say, scarcely any of them could perform.

At the close of the afternoon the different families wended their way to their several homes wishing Mr. Hannah many more happy birthdays and, that his present health and activities would be enjoyed for some time yet.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Soldier Hesitates To Visit "Snooty" Kin

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Mother was worth a dozen of dad if she did come from the wrong side of the track. Dad's family ignored her, though they took a halfway interest in us children. Mother worked like a galley-slave, kept a nice home for us, while Dad drank to forget his failure which he ascribed to marrying beneath him. Both parents are dead now, and I'm in the Armed Forces.

The other night at a service dance, I met a first cousin, my father's niece—right side of the railroad track. But the girl was swell. We had several dances together and she asked me to come and see her and her mother invited me for my next furlough. Still I can never forget their horrid snobbery to my mother. Shall I ignore my "snooty" kin or would it be well to go and prove I don't eat with my knife, don't use bad language and the spoons (if counted) will prove to be the same number as when I came.

—E. F. D.

Go along and show these "snooty" kinfolk how well you were reared by your good mother. When they know you better they'll regret their treatment of her.

Married Couple Consider Reuniting

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My husband and I have been separated for two years now. Recently we have planned to reunite after the war. Do you think that two people can be happy again, trusting and placing faith in each other, taking up where they left off with that much of a gap in their lives? Or do you think the thing that separated us will again crop up and make us unhappy? What is your opinion?

—A. W. W.

It depends largely on the cause of your separation. If the same cause of disagreement still exists, and you and your husband have not changed in regard to this issue it's naturally likely that further difficulties will arise.

If you have lived down this cause of unhappiness, whatever it might have been and you still retain enough of the old love to forgive and forget, there's no reason why you shouldn't make a go of it. I sincerely hope this may be the case.

Soldier Doesn't Want Wife to Work

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm the wife of a soldier who is overseas. I feel that being married to a service man, my place is in the service too. But my husband thinks I should stay home and take care of my father as my mother is dead. And my father thinks the same as I do, as he got along very well without me before I was married. How can I make my husband see this in the same light? He still says a girl ought to stay at home. I think he's too old-fashioned, don't you?

—A. S. W.

In not wanting you to work, your husband is showing a devotion rather unusual in these days, when a nation is clamoring for every pair of useful hands.

The biggest difficulty that most young wives encounter in war work is giving small children suitable care. If this isn't one of your problems, I see no objection to your plan. Your father might write your husband approving of your views, if your husband isn't the type who would resent it.

FIRST—I've learned to buy coffee that gives me more flavor ounce for ounce : : : Chase & Sanborn Coffee. It's super-rich!

But my best rule, I think, is that first one: Get Chase & Sanborn Coffee. And, remember, quality coffee goes further.

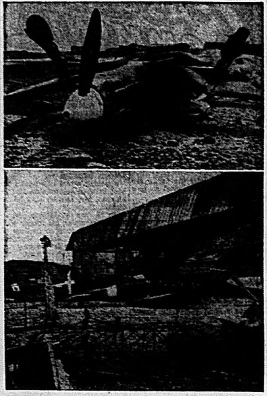
AIR MASTERY AIDED FINAL ASSAULT AGAINST CATANIA



Down a hot, dusty road in mountainous Sicily, tanks of Canadian armored unit roll forward as the Dominion's troops advanced, while in front of them a Sicilian native jogs along in his donkey cart, apparently impervious to the war raging around him. White dust covered the countryside as the Canadian troops battled onward, each tank leaving a cloud in its rear. — (Canadian Army Overseas Photo).

CANADIAN TANK UNIT ROLLS FORWARD IN SICILY

Stubbornly defended Catania, important port city in Sicily, fell to advancing British and Canadian forces only after a terrific air and land bombardment and bitter fighting. Allied mastery of the skies which permitted annihilation of enemy airfields and air defences is illustrated by these pictures showing (top) a wrecked Axis fighter plane, and (lower) smashed planes and charred airdromes at Catania. This is a radiophoto from the Canadian Army Film Unit, via U. S. Signal Corps and W. I. B.

TWO VIEWS IN CATANIA AFTER CITY FELL TO ALLIED MIGHT

Sicilian residents of Catania are shown (top) clapping their hands in welcome as Allied troops, British and Canadian, rolled into Catania after the stubbornly defended city had fallen. NATIVES PROVE FRIENDLY TO CANUCKS IN SICILY

Native Sicilians who met Canadian troops engaged in the fighting soon discovered that the newcomers were friendly liberators, not conquerors, and they reciprocated. At top Gunner A. E. Berg of Toronto personally takes some of the responsibility of feeding the Sicilians by handing out service biscuits to children in Assoro. In the lower pictures some of the Canadians with a little time to relax find the water hole near a Sicilian home an excellent place for a bath, while the housekeeper goes on washing clothes unconcernedly. — (Canadian Army Overseas Photo).

"DUCK" SHOOTING ON THE KUBAN FRONT

Looking for all the world like a group of sportsmen in new-type duck blinds, these are Red army sharpshooters in the one-man rubber rafts they used to navigate in the Kuban swamps during the June Russian offensive against the Nazi armies. Guns ready, the men move toward an island held by the enemy.

SOLDIERS REST AFTER CAPTURING SICILIAN TOWN

Two American soldiers who helped capture the town of Nicosia, Sicily, from the Axis, join natives in a peaceful siesta-time sit on the steps of a church in the town.

NAZI PRISONERS IN RUSSIA APPEAR BEATEN MEN

Not much of the arrogance of the "supermen" is left as these German and Rumanian prisoners shuffle to an internment camp after their capture by the Red army near Novorosisk. Many thousands of prisoners have been taken by the Red army in its offensive in the Orel sector.

CANADIAN GUNNERS GIVE AXIS LINES IN SICILY A POUNDING

Stripped to the waist, artillerymen with the Canadian forces in Sicily are pictured feeding one of the guns engaged in pounding German defence lines near Nissoria. The formidable fire power of their batteries and efficiency of the Canadian gunners was responsible in no small measure for infantry advances in the bitter fighting inland toward Mount Etna. One knocked-out target is shown at top—the wrecked hulk of a German tank discarded in the main street of Leonforte. — (Canadian Army Overseas Photo).

Ending of Sewell's Losing Streak and Booming Bat Of Rudy York Supply Headlines

Sewell Knocks Off Pirates for 18th Win and York Hits Two Homers

DODGERS WALLOPED

(By TED MEIER)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The ending of Rip Sewell's two-game losing streak and the booming home run bat of Rudy York supplied the headlines for the major leagues yesterday.

After losing two in a row to the Cardinals and the Phillies, Sewell finally won his 18th game for Pittsburgh by beating the Braves, 11-1, and gave the Pirates a split of a twin bill. He yielded only four hits and also banged out two hits and stole two bases.

The Braves knocked the Pirates out of a 2nd place tie with Cincinnati by taking the opener, 5-1, for Jim Tobin's 10th victory.

York connected for two homers—his 22nd and 23rd—as Detroit beat Philadelphia Athletics twice 5-4 and 3-2. He now has clouted 10 homers during August and needs only nine more to set a major league record for the most in one month.

Cincinnati beat the Giants twice, 5-4 and 6-5, to take undisputed possession of second place. A ninth inning double by Bert Haas won the opener. Lonnie Frey's sixth inning single drove in the deciding tally in the nightcap.

Charley Keller's 19th homer and Joe Gordon's two-run triple helped New York Yankees wallop Chicago White Sox, 7-2, for Ernie Bonham's 11th victory. But the Sox got a split by taking the nightcap, 4-3, on successive homers by Joe Kuhel and Vince Castino in the seventh inning.

Dodgers Walloped.

With Stan Musial and Ray Sanders each smacking two homers St. Louis Cardinals walloped Brooklyn, 11-3, for the eighth straight time in the first game of their bargain bill, but the Dodgers broke the spell by winning the second game, 4-3, in ten innings.

Cleveland ran its winning streak to eight by beating Washington, 6-2, behind Vern Kennedy's six-hit twirling, but the Senators abruptly ended the streak by winning the second game 4-0, as Milt Haefner came up with a six-hit shutout.

Chicago Cubs dropped the Phillies to seventh place by winning a doubleheader, 5-2 and 3-0. Hi Bithorn chalked up his 15th win in the opener.

Boston Red Sox swept their twin bill from St. Louis Browns, 3-2 and 4-0. Bobby Doerr's 14th homer helped win the opener.

Saturday's play saw some lopsides scores in the National League. St. Louis trimmed New York 11-1, but in the second game New York lost 8-0. Cincinnati took a doubleheader from Brooklyn 9-2 and 4-3, while Boston won over Chicago, 3-2. Pittsburgh took both ends of a doubleheader from Philadelphia 8-2, and 2-1.

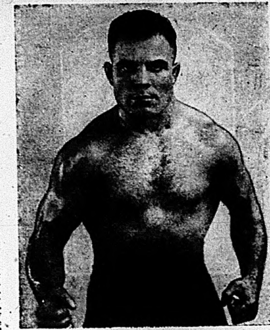
True Melodramic Setting for Hero and Villain

"TOAR" MORGAN



JOHN KATAN

Here they are, the baby-face hero, and the pugnacious arch ring villain, who will be the principals during Wednesday night's main bout at the Hume Arena. You have on one side the popular "Toar" Morgan, ex-Marine, who fought at Guadalcanal, while the villain for this melodrama is none other than John "Killer" Katan, the Palermo assassin, who held the world champion to a draw last week. Morgan has only tasted the bitter pill of defeat once in a local ring, that being at the hands of "Rough-house John." Morgan demanded a return bout and Katan agreed despite the fact he clamored for Longson, but the champ. wasn't having any part of Katan this week or for some time to come.

Supporting this return bout the fans will see a new face in Freddie Steele, the Glendale, Cal., blonde-haired wrestler who meets the unscrupulous "Texas Dick" Bishop, while in the opener a guaranteed bout brings Joe Maich and George Tofalos, the little Golden Greek together to give an all-around all-star card for this show. It's perhaps a good idea to get your reserve seats early by phoning Bill Cook's news stand at 74 now.

TORONTO LEAFS DROP 3 GAMES OVER WEEKEND

Defeated in Doubleheader by Orioles and Single Game by Chiefs

NEWARK GAINS

(By The Associated Press)

Apparently all Ed Klieman, Baltimore's competent pitcher, needed to win his 20th International League game of the season was the knowledge he would be given a trial in the big leagues next spring.

Repulsed twice for the elusive 20th game after having chalked up his first 19 while losing only four, Klieman came through yesterday with a five-hit, 3-2 verdict over Buffalo only a few days after Cleveland had expressed its desire to look at the youngster in 1944.

Buffalo took the first game of the double header, 6-1.

In the day's other games, Rochester and Jersey City divided as did Newark and Montreal while Syracuse scored four times in the first frame of its single contest with Toronto for a 4-3 verdict.

The Rochester-Jersey City games were a "hello and goodbye" affair, with Eddie Mack playing his final games for the Red Birds before reporting to Columbus of the American Association and Dick Lajeskie, 17-year-old $10,000 shortstop, making his debut with the Little Giants.

Traded For Sturdy

Mack has been traded for Jack Sturdy, scheduled to report tonight.

The Jerseys were checked in the first, 9-3, the defeat being the 17th of the season for Bill Voiselle. In the nightcap, however, they hammered a quartet of pitchers for 15 hits and a 14-5 triumph.

Ed Levy was the hero of the Montreal-Newark battles, getting three blows as the Bears garnered the first game, 8-4, and getting his team's entire collection of hits as the Royals won, 1-0, behind Bob Chipman's brilliant pitching in the second game.

Doubleheader sweeps featured Saturday's play. Jersey City won a pair from Montreal, 3-1 and 3-0, Baltimore landed on the league-leading Leafs 4-3 and 4-1, Newark walloped Rochester 6-2 and 10-5 and Syracuse took the measure of Buffalo 2-1 and 7-5.

Former Western University Football Star Signs With Pros

By the Canadian Press

Joe Krol, Windsor, London and Hamilton athlete, will shift his team sport activities, having signed a pro contract to play football with the Detroit Lions in the National Football League, coached by Charles E. (Gus) Dorais, former mentor of University of Detroit squads.

One of the outstanding team athletes of wartime Canada, Krol made his early mark as an interscholastic gridder at Windsor, later graduating to the Mustangs of the University of Western Ontario to figure on the last Intercollegiate Senior championship team in 1939. Later, he migrated to Hamilton and recently had been playing baseball with the Hamilton Co-ops who were beaten in the National Congress Tourney week before last. He has departed from this team to prepare for his pro career. Meanwhile, Tony Golab took similar steps from Windsor to Sarnia and thence to Ottawa Rough Riders after which he enlisted in the R. C. A. F., becoming a pilot, and is now in the overseas theatre of war.

Krol is adept at basketball and made his mark with the Western Mustangs in the college court game but his first love is football in which he is an effective broken-field runner and forward passer. He played the U. S. code at Windsor.

In a field day for long shots at Saratoga's transplanted meeting on Belmont track, New York, Saturday, Mrs. Barclay Douglas' entry, Eurasian, copped the 74th running of the Travers stakes, oldest horse racing fixture in the U. S., the colt paying $15.20 for $2.

Dorothy Germain, 19, of Philadelphia, captured the Women's Western Amateur Golf title at Evanston, Ill., Saturday, defeating Mary Agnes Wall of Menominee, Mich., 5 and 4, over the 36-hole route. Miss Germain was the first easterner to win the event in 43 years.

Joe Kelley of Baltimore, once renowned in the Canadian end of organized baseball as manager of the Toronto Leafs, died a year's ill-Saturday night after a year's illness. His fame as an outfielder started with the old Baltimore or Cles along with John McGraw, Wee Willie Keller and Hughey Jennings.

With war workers and members of the Armed Forces banned from playing unless stationed in Scotland, the Scottish soccer season was featured by upsets in league openings Saturday, some of the clubs finding it necessary to do without their guest stars of last year. The same situation is expected to develop in the English League which opens Aug. 28.

Baseball greats attended the Old Timers vs Police Ball Game at London, Ont., to thrill the crowd of 4,000, the feature guest being Connie Mack, 81-year-old President of the Philadelphia Athletics who addressed the fans. Former diamond stars present included Honus Wagner of the Pittsburgh Pirates and George (Mooney) Gibson of London. The Coppers were licked 15-5.

A member of Canada's last Olympic team, Mrs. Gordon Kerr of Winnipeg Saturday won the Women's Western Canada Wrigley mile swim at Saskatoon covering the distance in 27 minutes 58 2-5 seconds. Doug Lemin of Edmonton took the men's mile.

NO OFFSIDES TO CENTRE ICE

Red Line Will Mark Where the Puck Can be Passed to Toronto, Aug. 16 (CP)—Faster, more skillful hockey was forecast for the coming season by officials of the National Hockey League and the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association at the conclusion of a two-day joint rules meeting here yesterday.

Feature of the meeting was the adoption Saturday of a new rule which permits players of the defending team to make forward passes as far as centre ice without an offside being called. The rule has been adopted by the C.A.H.A. and will be presented to the Board of Governors of the N.H.L. at their next meeting.

A new red line called the "centre line" will be drawn across the rink at centre ice to distinguish the new zone. Other minor changes in playing rules were agreed upon and will be released when approved by both organizations.

Both leagues were prepared to continue operations for the coming season if approval is given by authorities in Ottawa.

The C.A.H.A. plans to send representatives to the annual meeting of the N.H.L. with minor-professional hockey officials to be held in New York Sept 10.

The Yankees have now played 74 straight games without running into that military secret you carry an umbrella for....Which comes close to being a record....After bidding in that Blenheim colt for $66,000 at the Kentucky yearling sales last week, Bill Hells, the Louisiana oil man, told pals he was ready to go to $166,000 to get him....And Mrs. E. Graham Lewis (Elizabeth Arden of the face creams), bidding against Hells, had to be flagged down by her agent—because she was all set to hit the 100 G's mark if she had to....If the United States navy doesn't give Ensign Ted Schroeder leave to play in the tennis Nationals, don't be surprised if Francisco Segura's top threat turns out to be Bob Falkenburg, the new National junior champ from California.

Cured.

A woman dashed up to the doctor's door in a very agitated manner and rang the bell.

"Oh, doctor, do come round and look at my husband," she gasped "he's awfully ill!"

"All right," said the doctor, breezily. "Just go back and take his temperature, and I'll be along straightaway."

A short time later the doctor arrived at the house to meet a now smiling woman.

"Thanks ever so, doctor," she said, "it cured him!"

"Cured him?"

"Yes, you said take his temperature, so I took the barometer out of the hall and put it on his chest, and it said 'very dry.' So I fetched him a pint of beer, and he's gone to work now."

Softball Round up.

With a five day rest under their belts the No. 5 I. T. S. Flyers and Reliance resume their city league softball finals Tuesday evening. The Flyers are leading two games to one in a best-in-seven. Coach FO. Warren of the Flyers, has his two unbeaten hurlers to toss in against Spike Pryke's Reliance nine—Bill Bancroft, the former Winnipeg moundsman, and Steve Borovitch, the Yankee softball hurler from Detroit. Bill Kurlyak was the losing Flyer pitcher.

In the Reliance camp both Manager Bud Wilkins and Coach Pryke were non-commital today when it came to naming a starting pitcher for Tuesday's important meeting. "Freddie Vasil beat the Airmen last time out, but we haven't used either Bill Anderson nor Ding Luffman against the No. I. T. S. squad in several weeks now. Luffman beat the Airmen early in the league schedule, but whether we'll start these or Johnnie Bawden can't be decided until just before game time," commented Skipper Pryke today.

In the meantime the girls' softball play-offs open with Bristol and Bell-Sargents prying off the lid tonight.

Promotion for Lawson.

Whether they need it or not is merely one person's opinion, but regardless the Ontario Athletic Commission has named Phil Lawson "supervisor of wrestlers in Ontario", or at least that's the monicker Lawson introduced himself to us by last week at the local palace de sport. What the official duties are, besides managing Billie Watson, refereeing bouts in Toronto, Ottawa and Belleville and acting as Frank Tunney's man Friday we are not in a position to say.

However, Supervisor Phil, is high in his praises of Belleville wrestling fans. "I have been coming into your city for several years in different capacities pertaining to wrestling and one thing has struck me very pronounced Belleville rassalin's fans know good wrestling when they see it and have the happy faculty of exemplifying their feelings so that the participants and more particularly the promoter know how they feel. Belleville fans appreciate good orthodox wrestling, as can be proven in the fact you always heard a resounding handclap of applause when two keen, agile wrestlers stage a clean strong bout. Also I have noted that your fans are quick to react. That is to say the moment a ring villian encrouches or violates the regulations, Belleville patrons are what you might call—right on the bit—and protest strongly," Supervisor Lawson informed us.

Speaking about this week's main bout between John Katan and Toar Morgan, Mr. Lawson said he was certain Belleville fans still had faith in the ex-Marine, who is rapidly regaining his former weight and will try to even matters with the villianous John Wednesday night, as Katan is the only man ever to beat Morgan here. "Yes, and I'm sure Belleville fans will like this new boy Freddie Steele of Glendale, Cal.," added Supervisor Lawson.

Riddle Short of Mark.

Pitcher Elmer Riddle of the Cincinnati Reds fell more than 40 games short of the major league record for errorless games by twirlers when he made his first miscue in 102 contests, August 3. Lon Warneke of the Cubs holds the record, having gone 146 games in succession without an error up to August 11, and is continuing to add to his mark. His last miscue came in the game of September 28, 1938. Warneke appeared in two errorless contests before that season closed 34 in 1938, 33 in 1940, 37 in 1941, 27 in 1942 and 13 so far this season.

Riddle committed his first major league error, August 3, when he made a wild throw to second base in an attempt at a force play on a sacrifice.

Fred Heimach, formerly of the Athletics, Yankees, Red Sox and Dodgers, compiled a string of 138 errorless games during his tenure in the two leagues. The American League mark still stands at 88, set by Ted Lyons, ex-White Sox ace.

Remember When—

The immortal Lou Gehrig equalled Everett Scott's all time major league baseball record of playing 1,307 consecutive games ten years ago today. The New York Yankees first baseman started his "Iron man" streak on June 1st of 1925 and in 14 years played 2,130 consecutive games. He died in June of 1941. Strangely enough both Scott and Gehrig established their records while playing for the Yankees.

This and That.

Two former teammates will oppose each other when the gals' softball league commences its league play-offs tonight. . . "Pee Wee" Colden will be on the hilltop for Bristols ,while Bessie Doolittle will be on the firing line for Bell-Sargent. . .Incidentally these two lassies were the chief pitching strength for the three-time city champion Zellar girls ,now defunct. . . . .Joe Krol, Windsor's versatile athlete, signed a contract to play professional football with the Detroit Lions. . . .Krol is the first Canadian-born gridder to hop to the rugged Yankee pro. grid ranks.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 148

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

The bridge hall of fame is a snooty spot. There are billions of unusual bridge deals. Yet, surprisingly few of them find popular rank in history or tradition.

Among the famous deals of the past is the Mississippi heart hand. The time-place-occasion of its debut is hazy. The names of the persons involved are obscured.

Rumor has it that the origin dates from a trip on a Mississippi river steamboat. Seemingly, it was during Mark Twain's time, although he never mentioned it.

In those days, southern planters went north by boat to sell their season's crop. On the return trip, each had a bundle of greenbacks big enough to choke a horse.

Some had the lettuce sticking out of their ears, looking for any kind of excitement. These gents would bet on almost anything at almost any stakes if they thought they had a chance.

The boats became infested with all sorts of skin games. When the victims became wary of faro and poker, some turned to the safer-looking game of bid whist, an early form of bridge.

When the time was ripe, a pair of sharps would cold-deck this deal:

NORTH

♠J 10
♥NONE
♦10 9 8 7 6
♣J 10 9 8 7 6

WEST

♠9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2

SOUTH

♥K J 9
♦A KQ J
♣A K Q

When these cards were held, the suckers would be sitting south and north. The slickers held the west and east hands.

The bidding would be coaxed along until west and east reached a bid of seven hearts. This would be doubled by south, of course. And one of the sharpers would redouble.

The lambs would lead a spade and east would trump. A trump would be led by east and west would cover any heart played by south. A spade would then be led by west.

East would trump that and lead another trump. Again west would cover any heart played by south and lead another spade. East would trump that and lead a club or diamond.

Trumping that, west would lead his highest trump and pick up the last trump held by south. By this time, west is still in the lead and all his remaining spades are good to the last drop.

Instead of a spade, south might start out with an opening lead of a top club or diamond. In that case, west would trump and lead a spade. That wins with a similar east and west routine.

Any time somebody says: "Give the little girl a big hand," slip her that one.

Up to now you may not have felt a need for a Horse Sense Bridge rule book. But if you want the story in simple, easy lessons, you can obtain one of the two-bit books by sending 25-cents with your request to Sam Gordon in care of this newspaper.

LESSON NO. 149

Very likely you have been looking at the same face across the breakfast table for years. So, don't get peeved because you must hold the same hand for two weeks.

This is the hand:

♠9 5 2
♥K 7 6 3
♣A Q 7 4

This has been your responding hand for a week. You have been using it to learn about second round bids. Use it for the same purpose for another week.

Each day this hand has been geared to a new combination of bids. For the balance of this week, apply it to other bid groups. They may look similar. But each will present a new angle.

Keep in mind that the basis for a responder is two tricks. Each raise consumes an additional trick. And all bids follow the order of choice in T-A-N; takeout, assist, no-trump.

If you takeout, you must have another biddable suit or your first mentioned suit must be rebiddable. If you assist, you must have enough support for partner's suit.

Adequate support for a biddable suit is any four cards or a queen and two more. Adequate support for a rebiddable suit is one less card.

Suppose partner starts with an opening bid of one spade. Your first response is two clubs. Having raised the contract, you consume three tricks so far.

Suppose partner then bids two spades. He shows a rebiddable suit. With no more takeouts, you look for an assist. Your three small spades are adequate support for partner's rebiddable spade suit.

So your second round bid is an assist to three spades. This is another raise. So you now promise four tricks. You must have them: An ace, a king, a queen, and a short card in diamonds.

There are players who prefer to use fancier methods of deciding their bids. But they are not as accurate. Not by a long shot.

What is your partner trying to tell you when he taps his ring finger with the index finger of his other hand? You won't know what partner is telling you unless you remember ALL the Horse Sense Bridge rules. They're contained in a slim little two-bit rule book you can obtain by sending your quarter to Sam Gordon in care of this newspaper.

By HYE BOSSIN

If your memory goes back far enough you may remember when Gene Lockhart, in company with Bea Lillie and Jack and Mary Pickford, used to be a juvenile attraction in the towns of his native Ontario. Gene was quite a youthful athlete, having won the Toronto across-the-bay-swim three times.

Now one of Hollywood's leading actors, Gene still writes poems and sketches, and lectures on the drama. And he's no dub at song-writing. One day in 1919 he looked at the dull sky above the University of Toronto and wrote a poem called "The World is Waiting for the Sunrise." Pianist Ernest Seitz wrote music for it and it's still one of the most popular songs in the world.

As youngsters Gene, Bea Lillie and the Pickfords were little devils. But their teacher, the late Harold Rich, Sr., never stood for any of their nonsense. Once they were sent to a small Ontario town to entertain. The manager skipped with all the money. Bea, the brave one, was given the job of letting Mr. Rich know. She telephoned him.

"Stranded, eh?" laughed Mr. Rich. "Now you're really and truly actors!"

A parrot ruined a scene during the making of "Second Honeymoon." The talking bird, imitating the director's voice, shouted "Cut!" Cameras and actors stopped work. "That's the first time," said Director Edward Lilley, "that I've known a director to have a stand-in!" . . . Popeye the Sailor Man is now in the army. Jack Mercer, who provides the screen voice for the funny-paper salt, has been drafted. Incidentally, Mercer's wife is the voice of Olive Oyl . . . Paul Lukas, who is wonderful in "Watch on the Rhine," will play a leading part in the next Errol Flynn film . . . Walda Winchell, daughter of Walter, is being screen-tested. . . . A film will be made in England about the Canadian soldiers who rebuilt a bombed church. They recruited tradesmen from their ranks who were glad of the chance to follow their peacetime occupations. The wreckage was sorted out, even the memorial windows being put together. The incident won much interest in England . . . Virginia Bruce, long a film favorite, will be back on the screen soon. . . . Canadian commandos will again be seen in a fictional film, "First Comes Courage," with Brian Aherne and Merle Oberon. The war scenes were filmed on Vancouver Island.

Here are a few fast sizeups of current films:

"Coney Island." Big, boisterous, beautiful and tops in Technicolor and entertainment. You escape to the Gay 90s. Betty Grable, Cesar Romero, George Montgomery, Phil Silvers and Charles Winninger as a very funny old codger. Musical comedy.

"Hit the Ice." The funniest Abbott & Costello film since "Buck Privates." The boys are street photographers. Sun Valley background and part musical. Ginny Sims, Patric Knowles, Elyse Knox and Johnny Long and his Orchestra.

"Action in the North Atlantic." The first real tribute to the Merchant Marine. Humphrey Bogart, Raymond Massey and Julie Bishop. Filled with action and thrills.

"Pilot No. 5." A strong condemnation of native fascism. Some war scenes. Excellently played by Franchot Tone, Gene Kelly, Marsha Hunt and Van Johnson.

Understanding of Russia Said Jeopardized by Eastman Blast

A fabulous publication with a circulation estimated at about 7,500,000, the Reader's Digest last month published an article (not a reprint, as is the Digest's custom) by Max Eastman, an articulate supporter of Trotskyist communism. Offered as an evaluation of Russia, it presents our ally in this war as an unspeakable nation, dominated by a brutal leader, lacking in good faith and dedicated to the destruction of democracy. Since then many rebuttals have appeared in press and magazines. The article below is typical of this reaction.

By Edmund Stevens, Staff Correspondent of the Christian Science Monitor, formerly stationed in the U.S.S.R.

Russia's record in the war against the Axis, and the growing importance of American-Russian collaboration now and in the future have roused the American people to an eagerness to be put right about the U.S.S.R.

Valuable contributions toward meeting this demand have been made by such outstanding men as Joseph Davies and Wendell Willkie and by practically the entire corps of American press correspondents in Moscow. Rather different is the tenor of Max Eastman's "We Must Face the Facts About Russia" in the current issue of the Reader's Digest. Mr. Eastman is — or was —a left-wing Socialist and supporter of the late Leon Trotsky.

Mr. Eastman starts off plausibly enough by paying brief tribute to the Russians' "incomparable feat of arms." He goes on to say "Russia's stand has taught many Americans who did not know it before that the Soviet Union is a going concern . . . Collaboration with a powerful Russia will be a main preoccupation of living Americans for a long time to come." He concludes: "If this collaboration is to be successful it must be based on facts, not propaganda."

But far from improving Americans' understanding of Russia, his article can only have the effect of reviving all the old prejudices and suspicions, confounding confusion. Take this attitude toward Russian resistance — the biggest fact about Russia today.

After cautioning that "it is natural since she fights so brilliantly beside us, to be a little undiscriminating in our praise of the Soviet Union," Mr. Eastman practically accuses anyone with a word of good to say about the Soviet Union of being the agent or dupe of Communist propaganda: "An astonishing number of our influential men are fawning on Russia." His list includes President Roosevelt, Vice-President Wallace, Joseph Davies, Wendell Willkie, and others.

Mr. Eastman refuses to grant that Russia's war record reflects any credit whatever on the regime: "The stubborn resistance of the Russians no more justifies communism than the stupendous assault of the Germans justifies nazism." (Here the subtle corollary is that fighting in defence of one's homeland is no more praiseworthy than fighting in a war of aggression.)

Yet virtually all observers who have been in Russia recently for any length of time attribute Russian resistance and steadfastness to the circumstances that the Soviet regime, whatever its deflects and whether or not it is now "communism," has given the average Russian a stake he considers worth fighting for. Ignoring this first-hand evidence, Mr. Eastman describes these same Russians as "enslaved masses" and flatly states "the wage scale is lower, in relation to prices than it was under the czars."

Pursuing the point, he takes issue with Mr. Willkie's assertion in his recent book, "One World." "There is hardly a resident of Russia today whose lot is not as good or better than his parents' lot was prior to the revolution." He quotes Mr. Willkie's own description of the present privation and suffering in Russia as proof of the contrary, completely omitting the circumstances that it was privation, both before and after Hitler attacked, that enabled Russia to resist.

Mr. Eastman not only fails utterly to help the reader understand successful Russian resistance: his various arguments if accepted would also render all thought of collaboration with Russia grotesque and confirm everything Hitler and Dr. Goebbels have been saying on behalf of their anti-Soviet crusade. For the article's professions about helping Americans to collaborate realistically with Russia are so much camouflage for a collection of most of the charges against the Soviets with a few new ones added. So long as it serves his purpose Mr. Eastman is not over particular about the source of his material. Some of it like the story of the ten thousand murdered Polish officers, bears the unmistakable label: "Made in Germany."

In his consistent denial that good can come out of Moscow, he refuses to attribute any importance to the dissolution of the Comintern. Like so many other phenomena apparent to every recent foreign observer in the Soviet Union, the trend of Kremlin policy away from world revolution toward preoccupation with home affairs has escaped Mr. Eastman. In this one respect he is still back in the Moscow of 1922 which he visited as a delegate of the American Communist Party.

"My Friend Flicka"

Filmed in vivid Technicolor amid the craggy mountains of Utah, the screen version of Mary O'Hara's popular novel, "My Friend Flicka" is a classically simple story.

With Roddy McDowall, Preston Foster and Rita Johnson featured, the 20th Century-Fox picture opened Saturday at the Belle Theatre to an enthusiastic audience. Capturing the spirit of today's glorious West, the deep and tender love of its women, and the courage of its rugged men, "My Friend Flicka" is filled with swift and tumultuous action.

The millions of readers of the novel will be happy to learn that it has been faithfully brought to the screen—that Producer Ralph Dietrich has followed the pattern so successful in the film production of other novels—notably "The Grapes of Wrath," "This Above All" and "How Green Was My Valley."

Touchingly and effectively told is the tale of the sensitive young lad and his love for the filly, Flicka. Roddy McDowall adds to his reputation in a well-rounded performance of the lad whose youthful short-comings are the bane of his strong-willed father—Preston Foster.

Though his mother, Rita Johnson, understands her son, it takes the appearance of Flicka to bring all three together—with the realization that understanding is the basis of a happy family relationship.

Director Harold Schuster has brilliantly colored the film with the resplendent hues of the West in addition to neatly pacing the action.

"Yankee Doodle Dandy"

No one's life makes so dazzling a story as that of a showman and there's no greater showman than George M. Cohan. Warner Bros.' "Yankee Doodle Dandy," which opened Sunday midnight at the Capitol Theatre, tells the story of his exciting career. The whole glittering show-world is brought to life in the lavish production that has a cast which will always be remembered as most perfect for the times and characters it was to represent.

George M. Cohan is played by the inimitable James Cagney, who doesn't try so much to look like Cohan as he does to imitate his manner of speaking, singing and dancing. The picture starts when Jerry Cohan, portrayed by Walter Huston, breaks away from his "Irish Minstrel" act of the 4th of July, long enough to join his wife, Nellie, played by Rosemary DeCamp, who has just given birth to a baby boy. At first they are at a loss for a name, but the doctor suggests George Washington, because it was Independence Day. But Nellie thought Washington was too long for the billboards, so they compromised on the good old Irish name, Michael.

George was only out of rompers a few years when he joined the act that barn-stormed every town that was large enough to have a theatre. Sometime later, his sister Josie, portrayed by Jeanne Cagney, made her worldly debut and when she was old enough to be trained, she became known as the youngest skirt dancer in America, and the act itself gained nationwide fame as "The Four Cohans."

Some time passed and one day, while the Cohans were playing in Buffalo, Mary, played by Joan Leslie, a young girl, stage struck and eager, comes to George after the performance. He takes an interest in her and offers to help her toward her career, but later finds out that he'd rather have her become Mrs. George M. Cohan than an actress, and she agrees with him.

Young George rises high and fast in the theatrical world. He writes songs, sketches, plays. He produces, acts and sings. Success follows success.

He meets Sam H. Harris, a role played by Richard Whorf, and they form a partnership that was to produce many hits.

The picture is replete with Cohan music and grand production numbers. "Mary's A Grand Old Name," "Give My Regards to Broadway," "Over There," "You're A Grand Old Flag" and "The Yankee Doodle Boy" are just a few of the fine tunes that will bring a touch of nostalgia together with an urge to join in the singing.

The added sensation, "Train Busters" a Canada Carriers on feature is also shown.

CHAPTER 4

I owed Peg too much to let one of her rare before-breakfast tempers rankle, so I dressed as fast as I could, and was out of the kitchen while she was still grumbling over the new permanent with which she couldn't do a thing.

I started the coffee and got out the cups and looked in the icebox for oranges. I was supposed to bring some home yesterday. This would be the time I'd forget. There was one grapefruit there, but Peg doesn't care for grapefruit. There wouldn't be the least bit of use trying to borrow from anyone except Jan—nobody else ever had anything—and Jan seldom got to his studio before nine.

Still, he hadn't been there the night before, so he might be early this morning. It wouldn't take a minute to run down and find out. I don't mind stairs in the daytime. I just mind them at night when it's dark.

So, with the measuring spoon for the coffee still in my hand, and a gingham smock over the tweed suit I was wearing to the office, I clattered down the stairs and started down the second floor hallway to Jan's.

The door was open, and the room was full of scared, half-dressed people, looking down at something on the floor.

I looked too. It was a man in a dark blue suit, his long, slender body stretched out gracefully, easily, on the rug. He had dark hair, and there was something awful about the back of his head. I saw the dark, sticky pool on the rug, and looked away hastily.

One of the women—Mrs. Strom it was, the wife of the furrier whose workroom was directly above, kept saying over and over: "The poor young man! And us asleep right upstairs!"

Nobody else said anything. We just stood there. The bright morning sun came through the mullioned windows, and Jan's canary chirped in his cage. The room looked just as it always looked, beautiful and orderly, except for the ominous little group, and the dead man on the floor.

"Jan," I said, "is Jan—"

"He hasn't come in yet," somebody said.

I pushed by Mrs. Strom. After all, I was a newspaper woman, and here was a story.

"Does anyone know—" I began, and then I really saw him.

I went to the telephone and called my office. We were on the street with the story before the homicide squad was through checking.

"Gil Castle," I told the city desk. "Gilbert Penn Castle, II, socialite yachtsman. The old man made his money in borax. His widow has that big old house on Pacific Ave. There must be lots about him in 'the morgue.' We had his picture last year when his yacht turned over in the Honolulu race. No, it couldn't be suicide, it's the back of his head, and the gun is on the floor, right near him. One of the tenants reported it but the police aren't here yet—nobody's here. I used to know him—that's how I know."

It never occurred to me that I could be wrong. I had not seen the man in nearly five years. Not one of us, not even I, the newspaper woman, thought of looking in his pocket or wallet for identification. No one else knew him. No one but I had ever seen him before. Except for the few minutes that I spent in the bedroom, telephoning, with the door shut behind me, we all stood around gaping and wringing our hands, and whispering:

"Oh, isnt it awful!"

"Who could have done it?"

"Isn't it terrible!"

"When do you suppose it happened?"

Of course, five minutes after the homicide squad got there, neck and neck with our ace cameraman, Frank Heney, followed closely by all the other papers' cameramen and half a dozen reporters, it was common knowledge that the murdered man was Gilbert Penn Castle II, and the wires were humming with it. But The Times was already on the street and we went right on scooping the town on subsequent editions because the story was a natural for me, with a first-hand account of what happened in the building the night before, interviews with all the tenants and even an interview with Mrs. Eleanora Castle, the mother.

I didn't enjoy it much, and I lost 10 pounds in the next few weeks—pounds I could ill afford to lose, being a scant 115 at best, because no matter how hungry I got, and I was hungry most of the time, I couldnt eat and no matter how tired I got, I couldn't sleep.

I'd go to lunch with the others, or sit down to dinner with Peg in the studio at night, feeling half-starved, and then at the first sight or smell of food I'd run like a seasick passenger in a storm, for cover. I lived on black coffee and bromides and every time I closed my eyes and tried to sleep I'd see Gil, with his wide-open eyes staring, and his head in a dark, sticky pool on Jan Proust's Persian rug.

For this was the man I'd loved, hopelessly and secretly, for almost seven years.

There isn't much to tell. It was just a shipboard romance. Maybe it wasn't even a romance for him. It was on a boat coming from New York to San Francisco, after I finished school in the east. I think he cared a little, for a while. I like to think so. He was older, of course and much more experienced. But he was sweet to me, and no matter what they say about Gil Castle—and about every despicable thing that can be said about a man has been said about Gil, there is a place in my heart that must always be his.

He was my first love, and my first romance, and though it is all long swell of the green sea and the mixed up in my mind with the eerie gleam of phosphorescence on moonlight waves, the rhumba and the fragrance of the perfume he bought me in Panama, it was something I had that nobody could take away from me.

In my heart I suppose I'd known all along that it couldn't last. He was rich and important and I was a nobody. I never felt bitter toward Gil when he dropped me, after we got back home, though I shed tears enough. I put in the usual empty hours sitting by the telephone, waiting for it to ring. I watched for the mailman. I humbled myself to write foolish little notes, studiously gay, transparent enough I'm sure. I even telephoned his home, and was answered by the cold, discreetly scornful voices of servants who took my name and number, politely.

Once, very soon after the ship, I went to his home for dinner. I thought it meant something, that the gracious little note I had from his mother meant that he had been talking about me, and she wanted to meet me. I know now that he would have kept me away if it had meant anything. He just told her about me because it didn't.

And now he was dead, on Jan Proust's rug, and I of all the people in the world had to write the story.

I had not been a working reporter for nearly six years for nothing. I managed to do the job—a good job. I turned out page after page of copy every day, laughing at the office jokes between times and noting the new cruise and resort fashions in the shop windows on my way to and from work. And I was pretty pleased with myself, because I was making the first page with exclusive by-line stories.

That's the way your mind works when you're a newspaper woman.

The woman part is different. That's why you can't eat and you can't sleep. That's why you cry your heart out at night, and beat your pillow with your fists in the dark.

Because it doesn't matter that the man you loved never loved you. It just matters that you loved him and he's dead. And instead of keening over him with flowers, you piece out a sordid story, little by little, day by day, for the curious to read.

EGG CONTAINS THREE YOLKS

Toronto, Aug. 14 — (CP) — Two yolks in an egg are fairly common but Mrs. S. Kermerman of Toronto was surprised when she cracked "a large ugly egg with a slight bump on one end," to discover it contained three yolks. Egg dealers said such an egg was one in 100,000,000.

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper I came around to the stationary and candy store to get pop some cigars, Shorty Judge going with me, and on the way out Shorty said, Hay look at that, that's a heck of a note.

Meaning a sign saying Owing to war conditions no more double decker ice cream cones will be sold, and there will be only one cone sold to each customer, please try to cooperate.

G what do you know about that, and they try to tell you this is a free country, I said. Just think, if we each had a million dollars in our pockets it still wouldn't be any use, he wouldn't give us more than one cone, I said, and Shorty said, Oh yes, this is a free country all right, like fun, my father claims certain people are taking advantage of the war and everything to get rich at our expense. I bet there's probably lots of ice cream hid away different places, he said.

Sure there is, there must be, good night, I said. Oh well I guess even just one cone would be better that none if you had to take your choice, I said, and Shorty said, Oh, sure, and anyways it takes just as long to eat one slow as what it does to eat 2 fast. Why dont you buy one? he said.

I haven't got a nickel, I said. Why dont you? I said, and he said, Neither have I. Maybe we've got enough between us to buy one together, he said.

Which we didn't, on account of neither of us even having a cent, and the stationary store man said, Are you boys still here? Are you waiting for an ice cream cone? he said.

No sir, nothing doing, not if we can only have one apiece, I said, and Shorty said, Sure, we wont buy any at all at that rate.

And we walked out looking independent and feeling partly better.

Upper School Exam Results Known Very Soon

Toronto, Aug. 16 (CP) — Upper School examination certificates for students in the fifth forms of Ontario High Schools and Collegiates, "were mailed today to all persons designated by local authorities to receive them." J. P. Cowles, registrar and assistant deputy Minister of Education for Ontario, announced today.

There has been no delay in sending out the certificates, except in cases where students obtaining standing on the basis of farm employment had not completed the required time on Ontario farms, the Department of Education said.

The recent death of Hon. Duncan McArthur did not delay the signing of examination certificates, Mr. Cowles said.

HOW BIG WAS THE BEAR?

Sudbury, Ont., Aug. 16.—(CP) Mrs. W. H. Hall of Nearty Raphoe, was berry picking when she encountered a big black bear chewing on a rotted log. Mrs. Hall began to stare at the animal and it returned her gaze. Finally, she resumed her berry picking and the bear returned to its log chewing task.

SEA GOING HOG

To anyone else "Soule," shown here being enticed up ladder by Third Steward Peter Rose, might look like just a black, yellow paint splotched wild boar — but to the men of her ship, at former trans-Pacific liner, now in war service—she has a personality all her own. "Soule" was picked up by a party on searchlight detail on a south Pacific island last April, and since that time has served as ship's mascot. "Soule" has run of the ship when not at dock, and never gets seasick, according to Rose.

Police Ask Public To Be on Guard Against Gypsy Fraud

The gypsies'll getcha if ya don't watch out might have been all right to frighten junior a generation ago, but today the theme's changed. It's junior who can warn his parental guide something like this, "The gypies'll 'gyp ya' if you don't keep your hands on your wallet.'

Today Acting Inspector Harry Storey, of District No. 8 Headquarters of Ontario Provincial Police, learned that a group of so-called gypsies, who had gone streamlined in this day and age and are travelling in motor cars, were heading westerly out of District No. 9 in the Perth-Ottawa area and were believed bound for the Hastings County area.

"In the Ottawa Valley these roving bands of nomads have been practising their ancient methods of extracting money from unsuspecting people.

"Their approach is usually the same, with the female members of the band offering to tell her victims fortune, provided, however, the intended victim crosses her palm with money. Usually the unsuspecting person places his money in the soothsayer's hand, of course, keeping a watchful eye on his poke. Then the fortune-teller reveals just about what the victim wants to hear and returns the purse. But strangely enough, when the gypsies leave the victim is always 'gyped' and minus a goodly sum sometimes," said Acting Inspector Storey. He asked district farmers to co-operate in the detection of these parties.

"Generally speaking the victim is so embarrassed upon learning of his or her loss they hesitate in reporting the theft to police. Unless we are acquainted with the facts it is impossible to apprehend the guilty parties," explained the inspector.

Melrose

Melrose — The Women's Missionary Society held their August meeting at the United Church on Wednesday afternoon with the president Mrs. F. Bennett in charge.

A miscellaneous shower was held on Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Weese in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Clare Weese (nee Miss Olive Treverton), who were recently married. During the evening the young couple were given seats of honor and Miss Evelyn Embury read an appropriate address. Ancient Chest Causes Hubbub Among Servants

(By SYDNEY GRUSON)

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Aug. 14 (CP) — Sweyne I of Denmark, kicked up quite a fuss in England with his successful invasion of the country back in the early part of the 11th. century. Now a sarcophagus believed to contain his remains has caused some fur to fly among Britain's archaeologists.

The sarcophagus, a 3½ ton affair with a sword and crown carved on it, was dug up nearly 40 years ago on the unkingly grounds of the Thetford gas works.

The majority of British archaeological opinion, contrary to the Encyclopedia Britannica, hold that Sweyne, or Sweyn and Swegen as he was also known, was stabbed to death at Thetford on February 2, 1014, and that the monks of the monastery of the Saxon St. Edmund buried him in a chapel where the gas works now stand.

The encyclopaedia says that Sweyne died "suddenly"—which could possible be by stabbing—but that he came to what most people of the time have considered a timely end at Gainsborough on February 13.

There is a minority archaeological opinion in agreement with the Encyclopedia in that Sweyne died at Gainsborough, and from illness and not stab wounds. This opinion holds that the sarcophagus contains the remains of Earl Warren, who founded the monastery of the Canons of the Holy Sepulchre in Thetford.

Quite a Controversy

To confuse the issue even further, historians go back to Roger of Wendover, an historian of the time, who recorded in the 14th. century that "Swegen was pierced by an arrow and that after dreadful bodily suffering departed to hell on the 3rd. of February."

There would be no point in the whole affair having been revived except that Mrs. E. T. Jameson, an enthusiastic amateur archaeologist, had made arrangements for a re-committal service in the form of Sweyne's time to be held on the grounds of her home where the ruins of Earl Warren's monaster are located.

Mrs. Jameson has consulted the British Museum whose authorities, she says, are satisfied that the sarcophagus contains Sweyne's remains. But just to keep everybody happy, she's postponed the ceremony while experts from Cambridge University attempt to settle the controversy to the satisfaction of all parties.

It might be argued that Sweyne, whose son was Canute the Great, was not a decent enough character to incur all this bother. Among his more unpleasant accomplishments was to start a war against his father as soon as he had reached warrior stature. The father, Harold Bluetooth, the Christianizer of Denmark, was killed in the war. Later, after the death of the King of Sweden, Eric Sersel who booted Sweyne out of Denmark for a time, Sweyne repudiated his first wife and married Eric's widow, Sigrid.

Magic Suit Keeps Out Heat and Cold

(By Brian Hill, in London Calling)

Midnight. A British ship plows her way steadily through the dark waters of the Atlantic. Suddenly there is a stunning shock. The ship begins to settle down in the water. A torpedo from a U-boat has found its mark.

Lifeboats are quickly launched and manned. In one of them a woman passenger—no time in the dark and confusion to dress—sits shivering in a thin nightdress. A member of the boat's crew peels off a sweater and gives it to her. Another hands her a waterproof case about the size of a service gas mask carrier. "Put that on," he says, "and you'll soon be warm."

In that little case is what seamen unanimously agree is "the finest present Lord Leathers has given the Merchant Navy." Lord Leathers is the Minister of War Transport and his "present" is an entirely new kind of protective suit issued by the Ministry for the use of torpedoed ship's crews.

When a rescuing ship picked up the occupants of the lifeboat the woman passenger was warm and cheerful—in spite of being three days at sea. The protective suit had saved her life.

What is the story behind this mysterious protective clothing which is saving the lives of countless people exposed to all weathers in lifeboats and on rafts at sea? The suit itself has an odd suggestion of the magic garments presented by fairies to heroes in the old stories, for it is equally effective against the burning heat of the tropical sun as against the bitter cold of the North Atlantic. Its extraordinary powers are traced back to the more prosaic but equally efficient magicians of today — the scientists.

The men who brought the idea of protective clothing for shipwrecked seamen to the urgent notice of the Ministry of War Transport were Sir Leonard Hill and Sir Robert Davis. After the last war, Sir Leonard devoted much time to researches into the problem of escape dresses for shipwrecked crews.

When the U-boat menace reappeared in this war, Sir Leonard asked himself why should not some means of conserving body heat be provided for men exposed in open boats to bitter weather, and he called the Minister's attention to the scientific possibilities of weather-proof clothing as a life-saver.

Credit for designing a suit that would be simple, practical and 100 per cent efficient for its purpose must go to the Ministry. There were numerous difficulties to overcome before the problem was solved. Many people said it was insoluble, but a way was found. Lifeboats have no storage room for protective clothing, nor would there be time for the crews to put on their suits after the torpedo had done its work. The dress had to be light and capable of packing into a small space so that it could be carried easily in the course of a man's ordinary duties and put on after he had taken his place in the lifeboat or raft.

The Ministry asked shipwrecked sailors for their ideas on the subject—and paid heed to their replies. Advice on points of construction and suitable material was sought from the Joint Committee for the Production of Rubberized Clothing, appointed by the Ministry of Supply, and was given promptly, and with enthusiasm. Sir Leonard Hill put his scientific knowledge freely at the Ministry's disposal, and was always "on call" for the discussion of doubts and difficulties.

The result is the suit that is doing so much to save the lives of our seamen who have to run the gauntlet of the U-boat wolf packs. Last year its designer, Mr. Thomas Metcalfe, O.B.E., of the Ministry of War Transport, was awarded the Thomas Gray Prize by the Royal Society of Arts.

The suit itself is a two-piece garment of tough, light rubberized material. It consist of a jumper with a hood, and trousers, which encase not only the legs but the feet. The main point about the trousers is the zipp fasteners in the back of the legs which allow limbs to be slipped out for massage. Such massage is a frequent necessity to relieve the terrible cramp induced by days of sitting in a crowded boat. The sleeves of the jumper are fitted with elastic wristbands and are long enough to pull over the hands to keep them warm.

The hood attached to the suit also has its special uses. In the first place it protects the wearer's head against the sun or wind. In the second it acts as a bucket for collecting fresh water in squally weather. When boats are weeks at sea a pint of rainwater may mean the difference between life and death.

Finally it is hood and container in one, for the suits are so light that they can be packed into the hood (turned inside out) which has a strap attached so that a man can sling it over his shoulder, just like a gas mask.

Even the brilliant sunflower yellow color of the suits has its special purpose. The wearers look so conspicuous that they give rise to plenty of stock jokes about "canaries." But if there is one moment in the life of the most retiring individual when he or she wants to look conspicuous it is when he is floating in the open boat on a vast desert of sea. The bright yellow is visible for a long distance from sea or air so that the suit acts as a highly effective rescue signal for its wearer.

Here are examples which show how seamen have strong reasons to be grateful for the Minister's present:

One seaman was taken into a lifeboat from the water. He was blue and stiff with cold. He was given a massage and put into a protective suit. In half an hour he was the most active member of the boat's creaw.

The crew of another boat sailed for a month in the tropics before reaching land. "The protective suits," said the men, "were the finest things in the boat. They kept us warm at night and saved us from sunburn by day."

The crew of a third boat was drifting for 37 days. The men wore their protective suits throughout. When the rescue ship came alongside, every man was strong enough to climb unaided the ladder to the deck.

Even though men have to put on their suits over clothing soaked with icy water, they not only soon feel warm, but they stay warm. The suit has been found of very great value in flooded boats.

More than 250,000 suits have been issued to officers and men of the Merchant Navy, and the Ministry are now providing them for passengers as well.

One man who will certainly wear his suit if another ship is sunk under him is the master of a vessel that was the victim of a U-boat a little while ago. He ordered the men in his lifeboat to put on their protective clothing, but neglected to wear his own. He was the only man in the boat to suffer from frostbite.

The protective suit for seamen is only one of many life-saving measures introduced by Lord Leathers which serve to illustrate the deep sincerity of his message to the Shipping World in which he said: "So long as a single life is lost which could conceivably have been saved, we shall not regard our work as complete."

FALL OF MESSINA CLOSES SICILIAN CAMPAIGN

Americans Take City After Much Bitter Fighting

Demolitions Carried Out On Mainland by Enemy

(By RELMAN MORIN, ASSOCIATED PRESS CORRESPONDENT)

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 17 — (AP)— The American 7th Army surged into Messina today, writing a spectacular finish to the 38-day campaign in Sicily.

The German radio declared the last German and Italian soldiers had been evacuated to the mainland.

In the scarred streets of the sprawling hillside port of Messina troops of the American 3rd Division smashed at lingering enemy resistance in hand-to-hand fighting after reaching the outskirts at 8 o'clock last night.

They were the first to reach the city, but eight miles to the south British commandos, after a devil-may-care landing from the sea in defiance of the enemy's guns on both sides of the strait, had cleared the way for the approach of Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's British 8th Army.

Bombard Mainland

American "Long Tom" artillery had already opened fire on the enemy in Italy across the two-mile wide strait.

Fearful of immediate Allied amphibious attacks against the exposed Italian foe, Axis forces were observed carrying out demolitions in the Calabria region across the narrow waters.

This first indication of a possible enemy withdrawal up the Italian peninsula came as British naval batteries built a wall of gunfire around the foot of Italy to within 100 miles of Naples.

Meanwhile a vanguard of the British 8th Army, forced to deal with greater demolitions and to set back a strong enemy counter-attack, had leap-frogged to a point eight miles south of Messina by staging a commando-type landing.

The main force, an Allied headquarters communique said, was at Santa Teresa Di Riva, approximately 20 miles south of Messina.

Wipe Up Italians

The complete occupation of Sicily, the entering wedge in the fortress of Europe, was only a matter of hours as the Allies wiped up hapless Italian forces left stranded by their German allies.

The American 3rd Division in which Gen. Dwight D Eisenhower once commanded a regiment, reached the outskirts of Messina about 8 p.m. yesterday, then stormed into the city this morning.

There was hand-to-hand fighting through the bomb-scarred streets of Messina, a hillside port less than three miles from Italy.

American 155-millimetre "Long Tom" artillery has already shelled the enemy on the Italian mainland said dispatches from the front.

Germans Admit Fall of Sicily

(The German radio, in a broadcast recorded in London, conceded the fall of Sicily.

(Although admitting the withdrawal was carried out in the course of "heavy fighting," the Germans pictured the evacuation as a "first-class achievement" which had "concluded the fight for one outpost of Europe.")

The advance of the Americans, 14 miles from Messina yesterday, was facilitated by a sea-borne landing. This latest landing of amphibious troops by the U. S. Navy, the fourth such attack in the last 10 days, was near Milazzo and was carried out yesterday morning without great difficulty.

Blockade by Navy

Meanwhile, a Naval communique announced strong Allied Naval Forces were blockading the foot of the Italian Peninsula from the Gulf of Policastro, 150 miles up

Capt. D. Whytock Missing in Action In Sicilian Drive

Official word has been received today stating that Capt. Donald Brown Whytock son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Whytock, Madoc, has officially been listed as missing in action resulting from the fighting in Sicily.

Capt. Whytock enlisted in the First Battalion Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment in September of 1939 and proceeded overseas with his unit three months later. He enlisted as a Lieutenant and was promoted to Captain and Adjutant of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

Capt. Whytock was wellknown in sport and business circles throughout Hastings County, taking a marked interest in the sporting activities of his native Madoc prior to 1939.

U.S. Airmen Blast Heart of Germany At Will With Day Precision Raids

(By ROBT. N. STURDEVANT)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Aug. 17 (AP) — The United States 8th. Air Force has demonstrated its ability to reach the heart of Germany at will with devastating daylight precision raids, Brig.-Gen. Frederick L. Anderson declared today in a review of the force's combat operations which began exactly one year ago.

In that year the air force has developed from a nucleus to a powerful striking force, has showered 15,733 short tons of bombs in 82 missions on Axis targets, and has proved its efficiency by blasting European objectives in the face of the strongest opposition, Gen. Anderson said.

For a loss of 419 bombers, planes of the air force have destroyed 1,728 enemy craft, possibly destroyed 671 and damaged 870 since a formation of 12 Flying Fortresses launched operations with an attack on the railway yards at Rouen on August 17, 1942, his review said.

Anderson said the first year of combat had proved the defensive power of American heavy bombers against the strongest Axis fighter opposition.

The big bombers "decisively won the first round in the daylight battle of Germany during July," Anderson said, when they unloaded 3,600 short tons of high explosives, certainly destroyed 506 planes, possibly destroyed 159 more and damaged 351, while losing 108 bombers.

"But we are far from complacent," the general said. "Our immediate problem is to make the most effective use of the strength at our disposal. As our force grows we shall be able to attack an increasing number of vital targets simultaneously, thus bringing closer the end of the war with Germany."

DAYLIGHT SWEEP ON EUROPE AFTER HITTING TURIN

A Great Offensive Has Been Under Way For 48 Hours With Few Interruptions

NAZIS OVER BRITAIN

London, Aug. 17—(CP)—Large formations of R.A.F. and American bombers blasted at Western Europe by daylight today after the heavyweights of the R.A.F. had hammered Turin in their third successive night assault on Northern Italy.

Reports from the British southeast coast said squadron after squadron of planes headed out across Dover Strait in mid-morning to continue a great offensive which has been under way for nearly 48 hours with only minor interruptions.

The R.A.F. attack on Turin last night represented the fourth raid on Northern Italy in five nights.

The Turin show cost the British four bombers.

Turin got what was officially called a "well concentrated" attack —which meant many tons of explosives fell upon it, although perhaps not with such a paralyzing effect as in the recent raids on Milan.

Must Pass Through Turin

Axis troops using the main Mont Cenis railway route must pass through Turin going north.

R.A.F. fighter planes simultaneously attacked Nazi airdromes and communications in France and the Lowlands and destroyed one enemy bomber over its base.

The three previous assaults on North Italy all were directed against the industrial centre of Milan, now reported in ruins. Milan had an alert again last night but it proved a false alarm.

Londoners were treated to a rare sight last night as the fleets of British bombers at the outset flew directly over the capital—a course they seldom take. Thousands in the streets cheered.

Minor enemy aerial activity, meanwhile, was reported over the Thames estuary and a few bombs were scattered along the coast. Only one fatality and slight damage was reported, however.

Just before midnight an air raid alarm sounded in London and the sound of gunfire was heard from outlying districts. The all-clear soon sounded. It was London's first night alert since July 29.

Yesterday heavy bombers swept over France during daylight, blasting Le Bourget, Paris' main airport. Six other Nazi-held fields in France and the big steel and engineering works at Denain, near Valenciennes were bombed. Fires and explosions were observed at the later target.

Poix, Abbeville, Bernay, Tricqueville, Amiens-Glisy and Beaumont Le Rouget were the other airfields on the day's visiting list. A communique reported 39 enemy planes destroyed with 20 Allied planes missing.

Covering the withdrawal from these attacks, the R.C.A.F. put in one of their busiest days in months without suffering a single loss.

They provided fighter escorts for bombers returning from Le Bourget, Triqueville, Beaumont Le Rouget and Bernay air fields as well as for those returning from the raid at Denain.

The Paris area was hit hard, with 17 German fighters downed in dog fights over the city, while Allied bombers accounted for the rest of the Allied score.

The German controlled Vichy radio said 180 persons were killed in the northeast and southeast suburbs of Paris.

INVESTIGATE DISCOVERY OF TWO SKELETONS

Brantford, Ont., Aug 17—(CP)— City and County Police today are investigating the possibility that skeletons of a woman and child unearthed during excavation for a building here are the remains of Mrs. Ethel Chatafield and her small son who disappeared from the Cathcart Disrtict 35 years ago.

The investigation was started following information received from a woman living near Hamilton who read of the finding of the skeletons last Tuesday. She told police that Mrs. Chatafield and her on disappeared 35 years ago and nothing had been heard of them since.

HAPPY CHURCHILLS REUNITED IN QUEBEC

Ahead of Britain's prime minister, Mrs. Churchill descended the steps of the train that brought her husband and daughter Mary, back from the United States. Mr. Churchill stepped from the train to a waiting car without a coat despite a rain storm. It was evident to newspapermen present that neither Mrs. Churchill's cheerful enthusiasm nor her husband's cigar were affected by the weather.

Crucial Phase of War Council To Be Reached On Roosevelt's Arrival

(By JOHN DAUPHINEE)
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Quebec, Aug. 17. (CP)—The crucial phase of the sixth Churchill-Roosevelt War Council will be reached within a few days with the arrival of the United States President.

Aside from the official Washington announcement that Mr. Roosevelt will be here "this week", there has been no definite word on his plans. Movements of the President are kept secret until completed.

But a group of almost thirty American newspapermen came in a group late yesterday to join about twenty already here—an indication they anticipate the most important part of the meeting to get under way almost immediately.

Last week's informal talks at Hyde Park, N.Y., between Prime Minister Churchill and the President may have resulted in major decisions even before their sixth formal war conference begins here, it was indicated last night in reports from Britain.

London Cabinet in Session

London morning newspapers said the war cabinet was in constant session yesterday, that it was in touch by telephone with Mr. Churchill here, and that there was an impression important developments were pending.

The Hyde Park discussions have been kept secret but presumably the two war leaders considered many phases of the global war. A report of the informal meeting probably was transmitted at once to London for the war cabinet's information.

This report may have been before the war cabinet yesterday, perhaps its contents necessitated a decision by ministers in London before the President and Mr. Churchill meet again.

Possibility a new, unprecedented combined operation against Axis occupied Europe, either in the west or in the Middle East, would be approved and ordered at the forthcoming conference was a subject of much speculation here.

JAPAN'S HOLDINGS IN C. SOLOMONS ARE NOW DOOMED

Surprise Invasion of Vella Lavella Island by Americans.

U.S. MASTERY OF AIR

Allied Headquarters, the Southwest Pacific, Aug. 17.—(AP)—Japan's holdings throughout the Central Solomons are virtually doomed and enemy oases still barring the way to his fortress of Rabaul are gravely menaced as the consequence of a surprise invasion of Vella Lavella Island.

United States forces in considerable strength seized it Sunday and Allied headquarters disclosed the new move in today's communique.

The Americans by-passed Kolombangara Island, on which Vila is situated, and overwhelmed Vella Lavella, 45 miles northwest of New Georgia. Seizure of this northernmost island of the New Georgia group seemed to seal the fate of all other intervening islands—Ganongga, Gizo, Wanawana and Arundel as well as Kolombangara.

It does even more. It puts United States forces within 80 miles of Bougainville. On and around Bougainville are four of the six air bases in the Solomons still in Japanese hands—Kahili and Kieta on Bougainville, Ballale below it, Buka above it. Vila and the sea-

Air Blows Rain On Bridgehead, Italian Mainland

By DANIEL DE LUCE
(Associated Press War Correspondent)

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 17—(AP)—The Allied aerial onslaught against the enemy's dwindling Messina bridgehead raged unceasingly yesterday and squadrons struck Italian mainland objectives both north and south of Rome, it was announced today.

R. A. F. and Canadian Wellingtons, with blockbusters among their loads, pitted the railway yards of Viterbo, 40 miles north of Rome, and started fires.

The seaplane base at Lake Bracciano, 15 miles north of Rome, and the coastal railway lines south of the capital also were raided, a communique said.

In all the widespread operations by northwest African squadrons, five planes were lost. Three of the enemy's planes were destroyed.

Middle East Planes Take Part

Co-ordinated with the blows of the northwest African squadrons was an attack Saturday night by Middle East R. A. F. Liberators and Halifaxes on the railway installations, freight yards and Messina Strait ferry terminus at San Giovanni. A Cairo communique said the attack resulted in many hits and the kindling of fires.

Governor-General To Entertain Many Distinguished Guests

Quebec, Aug. 17 (CP)—The Governor-General and Princess Alice are here for one day stay in the citadel Vice-Regal residence now occupied by Prime Minister Mackenzie King, Prime Minister Churchill and Mrs. Churchill and will entertain tonight at a dinner at which observers here believed President Roosevelt to be one of the distinguished guests.

Their Excellencies came from Ottawa on private cars attached to a train. They are making their headquarters on their cars and will leave for Ottawa late tonight.

Arrival of President Roosevelt to join Mr. Churchill for the final meetings of their sixth war conference has been a subject of great speculation and no time has been made public.

But the arrival of their Excellencies for a one day stay, their first visit to the conference centre, was looked upon as a significant move at this stage.

This morning their Exxcellencies received Mr. and Mrs. Churchill and Mr. King and at luncheon the Churchills were to be host in the citadel.

At the dinner this evening their Excellencies will be hosts to the two Prime Ministers and to other guests whose names were not given.

CONVICTION THAT HOUR NEAR FOR POWERFUL BLOWS

Britain Clearing All Non-Residents From Barricaded Coastal Areas

MANY DEVELOPMENTS

By JAMES F. KING
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

London, Aug. 17 (AP) — Great Britain began clearing all non-residents from her barricaded coastal areas today as a conviction gripped the country that the hour is near for a powerful new blow at Hitler's European fortress.

Invasion talk was heard everywhere amid cries in both Britain and Russia for speedy opening of a second front.

From every angle new moves appeared directed at invasion, but whether in the Mediterranean, the Balkans or across the English channel was the Allied war chiefs' secret.

Significant Developments

Significant, however, were these developments:-

1. Heavy and repeated air raids on Axis airfields in France—natural targets as a prelude to any new offensive.

2. Declaration of a state of siege in Norway by apparently jittery German occupation authorities.

3. Virtual isolation of Italy by severance of that country's telephone and telegraphic communications with Switzerland, giving rise to the belief important developments might be in the offing.

(Dispatches from the Swiss border town of Chiasso quoted the Swiss Telegraphic Agency as saying the situation throughout Italy "remained grave, with possibility of radical changes from one moment to the next.")

4. The British war cabinet was reported in constant session all day yesterday, keeping in direct touch with Prime Minister Churchill in Quebec.

5. The diversion of R.A.F. heavy bomber attacks from German war industries to an all-out attempt to knock Italy out of the war by destroying her industrial facilities.

All Planes Being Used

As the Allies' great aerial offensive roared on, every available plane based in Britain was reported being thrown into the fight—a further indication an all-out drive might be imminent.

Very Tense Battles Rage at Kharkov Where Enemy Pours In Reinforcements

TAKE 150 VILLAGES

(By HENRY C. CASSIDY)
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, Aug. 17. (AP)—The drive on Bryansk, the hinge of the German front southwest of Moscow, is moving at the fastest pace of any of the three current Red Army thrusts, the Russian army newspaper, Red Star indicated today.

With Soviet troops meeting stiff resistance in the battle for Kharkov, other Russian divisions were moving steadily ahead toward Bryansk supported by the push further north from Spas Demensk.

Around Kharkov, Red Star said, the Germans were hurling large concentrations of reserves backed up by units of from 40 to 50 tanks and air squadron in an effort to improve their precarious position.

'Very Tense' Battles

(The Soviet Monitor in London recorded a Moscow broadcast of a front line dispatch to Red Star which said "very tense battles" were raging around Kharkov.)

The Germans were meeting with little success in the counter thrusts despite the use of picked troops, Red Star said.

The Russians driving through the shattered German defences west of Karachev are within 15 miles of Bryansk, Moscow announced last night.

The war bulletin reported Red Army successes all along the 500-mile front from Spas Demensk, 200 miles southwest of Moscow, to besieged Kharkov. Fall of Kharkov was expected almost any time.

May Start Encirclement

Russian divisions attacking on the Bryansk front, the communique said, advanced rapidly yesterday through heavily mined territory, capturing 130 villages and thrusting a spearhead well to the northeast of the city which may be the start of an encirclement drive such as the one which led to the capture of Orel.

Canadian Airmen in North Africa Work and Live Under Real Hardships

(By LOUIS V. HUNTER)
Canadian Press War Correpondent

At a Tunisian Bomber Base, Aug. 16. (CP)—A dusty, isolated spot in the sweltering wasteland of inland Africa is home for Canadian Bomber crews who are battering Italian targets almost nightly, hastening the end of the Sicilian campaign and paving the way for the land forces that shall surely move on into Italy if the country persists in opposing the Allies.

These young Canadians work under almost incredible conditions, discouraging hardships that would test the moral fibre of a much less sturdy lot. They sleep, eat and live under canvas, with dust and tropical flies of all descriptions their constant, unwelcome companions.

Their airfield is just a spot in an expanse of land seemingly more vast than the Canadian Prairies, but devoid of almost any vegetation save clumps of stubby camel shrub —a meagre, scanty dressing on top of the ground— and a few blades of grass burned brown by the sun There isn't a tree to be seen.

The entrance to the airfield is marked by two petrol drums each painted with the letter "L. G." — Landing Ground. The ends of the runways are marked by white L's. It's the only way the pilots have of telling where the runways begin and where they end.

Tents are scattered with apparent abandon over the sprawling drome. Big marquee tents house messes, administration and operational offices. Furnishings in all of them are makeshift. The airmen and ground crews sleep in smaller, inverated V-shaped tents. Some have still smaller bivouac tents, big enough for only one person.

During a rain and windstorm a couple of days before I reached the camp for an overnight visit many tents were blown away, including the officers' mess tent, and only sections of it had been recovered. The ground was as hard as rock, laced with cracks, and a soft, warm breeze spread a blanket of dust over everything.

My welcome to the camp was a flying tackle by the irrepressible Sqdn. Ldr. Danny McCann of Ottawa, adjutant of the Squadron commanded by Wing Cmdr. Dan McIntosh, D.F.C., of Regina.

Looking around the tent, the scene was strictly a Hollywood one —fantastic.

Packing cases had been converted into tables. The chairs were made of the thick, round, heavy paperboard cases for bomb fins, and were complete with backs.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

ORDERS ARE DELAYED

It was announced today at the Belleville office of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board that the effective date of its order A8(9) fixing maximum prices for fancy meats and meat by-products had been changed from August 16 to Monday, August 23.

It was further announced that the order of the Board bringing about an additional limitation of creamery trucks which it was proposed to bring into effect on August 16 would not become effective until about October 1.

FAVORITE DOG DIES

An old friend of practically everyone in the city has passed on and will be missed most sadly. Michael is his name. Michael, or Mike, the red Irish setter so well known and popular among the merchants on Front Street died on Sunday night from a ruptured kidney. For some time Mike has visited and been petted and welcomed, now Michael has gone on to wherever dogs go when they die and where he will find a welcome, if there is such a place, that will be a happy one. Mike was owned by Mr. I. Lippman, Front St. merchant.

HIS CONDITION IS SATISFACTORY.

Mrs. Albert St. Denis who recently received word that her husband, Trooper St. Denis, was reported wounded in action in Sicily has received further cable notification that his condition is satisfactory. Trooper St. Denis went overseas late in 1939 with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

PORCH FIRE WAS AT 119 CHATHAM ST.

The porch fire on Chatham St., reported in yesterday's edition of the paper as being at 116 Chatham St., was erroneous and should have been 119 Chatham St. This error developed through a misunderstanding of the Fire Department, the alarm being telephoned to the fire station from the 116 address to report the fire at 119.

THREE BICYCLES AT POLICE STATION

Belleville police are in possession of three bicycles which have been found abandoned in various parts of the city after presumably being taken by joy-riders. The bikes may be had by identification of the same by their owners.

On Monday Robert Arthurs, 22 Brassey St., reported his C.C.M. bike stolen from its parking position off Station St., while James Cowan, No. 1 Forin St., informed police he had recovered his racing bicycle, which was reported missing on Monday.

MAYOR ROLLINS TO TAKE SALUTE

The civilian public of Belleville and environs is invited to attend the annual sports day at No. 5 I.T.S. (R.C.A.F.) base on Wednesday afternoon. Wing Commander A. J. Snetsinger, officer commanding the unit, today announced this interesting station sports day program would be open to the public. His Worship, Mayor Harry Rollins will take the salute of the competing athletes from No. 5 I.T.S. at 1.45 p.m. Wednesday afternoon.

Walter Luscombe Observes 42nd Anniversary With Quick & Robertson

Mr. Walter Luscombe entered the service of Messrs. Quick & Robertson forty-two years ago today, which was a short time after this well known firm commenced business here. As a result of the ability which he possessed, the interest he took in the advancement of the business and by loyalty to his employers he steadily advanced and for some years he has filled in a capable manner the important position of manager.

During the years Mr. Luscombe has been engaged in the men's clothing and furnishing business he has seen many changes in styles and he recalls the tight fitting trousers, short coats, low cut vests, the stiff front shirts, high choker collars and Ascot ties which were thought to be the last word in proper attire for the well dressed man. The hats, too, were a joy to behold. Mr. Luscombe's many friends will be pleased to extend to him congratulations upon his 42nd business anniversary.

AMERICANS TAKE

the west coast and half way to Naples, to Cape Rizzuto on the heel of the boot.

The sea forces have been sweeping nightly into Messina Strait, it was announced, and have carried out a series of bombardments of the Italian coast.

Scalea on the south side of the Gulf of Policastro was heavily shelled Saturday night, with 1,000

(It claimed German and Italian troops had been evacuated from Sicily with all their equipment "to the last machine-gun" after destruction of all military installations and harbor works at Messina.

("Not only all wounded but also several thousands of British, American and Canadian prisoners of war were brought to the mainland," it said. Maj.-Gen. Hube was said to have been the German general in Sicily.

shells thrown into the port in the space of 20 minutes.

Fear New Landings

Presumably the fear that the Allies would launch other amphibious operations, this time against the mainland in pursuit of the enemy, accounted for the demolitions observed by British destroyers off the south coast of the Italian toe.

Meanwhile, large formations of Allied planes thundering heralds of the Allied advance, pounded communications in Italy and to lesser extend in Sicily with hundreds of tons of explosives yesterday.

A large force from the Middle East command attacked Foggia, Tortorella and San Nicola airdromes in southern Italy with more than 300,000 pounds of bombs and shot down 43 of the nearly 100 enemy fighters that gave them a fierce battle. Eight bombers were lost.

The full power of the northwest African air forces was thrown into the battle to prevent the Germans and Italians from regrouping on the mainland, slashing at roads and bridges in an effort to keep the tired enemy from reaching points of safety inland.

The Viterbo airdrome, 45 miles north of Rome, was again hammered.

4 Ships Torpedoed

Ten barges were destroyed and 16 damaged and four merchant vessels torpedoed by Allied aircraft in harassing attacks on shipping and blows at the last evacuation efforts of the enemy. Two of the ships were caught 35 miles north of Naples, another close to the mouth of the Tiber, and a fourth near Imperia on the west side of the Gulf of Genoa.

The Americans pressed into Messina from the north coast, writing a finish to the 38-day campaign launched July 10 by the biggest amphibious invasion in history.

The Germans made a brief stand at Spadafora San Martino, on the coast less than eight miles from Messina, but the Americans crashed through in a spectacular last dash.

From then on it was a bloodless scramble to reach the battered goal.

As they were reaching the outskirts, Gen. Eisenhower was addressing a group of W.A.C.S. at Allied headquarters and telling them, "Messina will fall tonight or tomorrow".

Before the penetration into Messina was announced an Allied headquarters communique said the Americans had reached Monforte San Giorgio and Gessa, jut to the west of the port.

The Germans had no time to lay their usual networks of mines, and the Americans captured an entire train of enemy trucks as they moved up.

But an almost complete eclipse of the moon early Sunday night gave the enemy an unusual opportunity to escape.

The 3rd Division, which had twice outflanked the Nazis on the Sicilian north coast by amphibious operations last week, raced the final 14 miles from Milazzo to Messina in 24 hours as German resistance broke completely.

3rd Commando Landing

(Reuters News Agency in London reported a special communique from Allied headquarters in North Africa saying that a Third Commando type landing was made by British troops on the Eastern Sicilian coast early yesterday morning only eight miles from Messina.)

With American forces in Messina the last avenue of escape was closed for the Axis forces still attempting to resist the advance of the British troops further south.

Hooks of Plug Cause Painful Accident

Bancroft— Mrs. Broadworth, a sister of Dr. F. R. Ross who was camping at Trout Lake, met with a freak yet painful accident while watching one of the boys in their party casting of Stewart's point. The boy had made several casts successfully and then the unforeseen happened. Instead of the plug striking the water it swung in an arc striking Mrs. Broadworth on the left side of the head. One set of hooks passed through her ear and the other set buried themselves under the skin near the temple. She managed to get the line out from the plug and ran around the shore to Wiggin's cottage where Reginald Wiggins drove her into town and Dr. S. S. Lumb removed the embeded hooks. Mrs. Broadworth later returned to her cottage.

Personals

David Joynt, of the R. C. A. F., was home over Sunday visiting with his parents in Bancroft, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Joynt.

Dr. F. R. Ross, Belleville, physician, who just arrived at Trout Lake near Bancroft for a vacation on Saturday, was stricken with an acute attack of appendicitis and rushed to Bancroft at midnight where he consulted Dr. S. S. Lumb, afterwards motoring to Belleville where he underwent an operation early Sunday morning.

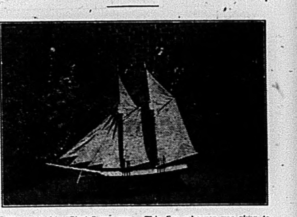
Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wiggins and family of Kingston arrived in town Saturday evening, where they will spend a two weeks' vacation with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Wiggins.

Mr. John Goodkey, of the R. C. A. F., is spending a two weeks' furlough at his home in Bancroft.

JOINS R.C.A.F.

Constable F. C. Norman of the Ontario Volunteer Constabulary left last week for Quebec, having enlisted with R.C.A.F. Service Police. Constable Norman was well known here and since the first of the year has acted as liaison officer between the Belleville unit of the O.V.C. and local police authorities. Mr. Norman will be better remembered by many people in Belleville as a radio serviceman, having been associated with Hitchon Radio Service and later Fralicks Radio Service. Constable Norman served in the Royal Army Medical Corps in the last war and saw service in France.

The Good Ship Pirate



The good ship "Pirate" was contributed by the late Robert Baldwin Milburn.

Robert B. Milburn was a brother of the late E. P. Milburn, one time Principal of the Belleville High School.

Robert Milburn's hobby was the art of carving out of wood. He was a master craftsman in this field. One of his outstanding achievements in this line was the carving of the good ship "Pirate." The ship was carved entirely by hand, even to the minutest detail.

It is a two-masted schooner, with five jibs. It has two holds in its spacious deck. It contains a full crew of men at action stations, these men also being carved out of wood. It contains life-boats and all other fittings that go to make the ship complete.

The ship is approximately five feet in length and five feet in height. It was made by Mr. Milburn in his spare time, during the winter months, some fifty years ago, and it is surely a masterpiece of what may be becoming a lost art.

This fine schooner was given to Mr. Ned Milburn, a nephew of the late Mr. Milburn when completed. Ned was very proud of his schooner and found great enjoyment in his youth sailing it on the bay.

Since that time the "Pirate" has rested on the mantel in the Milburn home on Charles Street for the past many years. To the family, this work of art is truly a treasured memory.

Through the kindness and generosity of the Milburn sisters, this ship was presented to the Kiwanis Club of Belleville, to be put up as a prize to be drawn for at the annual carnival on Thursday, August 19th., 1943. The entire proceeds from the sale of tickets will be used to further the war efforts of the Kiwanis Club, as well as the Blood Donors Clinic work.

President Bruce Lattimer and the entire membership of the Club are indeed deeply grateful for the noble and patriotic gesture on the part of the Milburn Sisters.

Tickets are on sale everywhere. The boat may be seen on display in the window of Lipson's Dept. Store.

London, Aug. 17 (CP)—Maj.-Gen. George Head, Chief of the United States Army Air Transport Command has arrived in London, it was announced today.

Activities and Objectives of S.A. Outlined to Rotary by Maj. Marsh

The Rotary Club of Belleville were the hosts to Major Marsh of the Salvation Army at their weekly luncheon in the Quinte Hotel Monday. Major Marsh told a brief story of the work and objective of the Salvation Army and related one or two instances from his experience while stationed at Montreal. Major Marsh served in New Brunswick and Newfoundland before being transferred to Montreal. He was associated with his organization in Newfoundland for 26 years and took his training there. Major Marsh has three sons serving with the active forces, one with the R.C.A.F., one with the R.A.F. and one son who has been wounded in Sicily.

Major Marsh said that he was not pleading for recognition of the Army or trying to sell the Salvation Army. He said that the Salvation Army was not the only army of its kind but the Salvation Army were the pioneers in many of the activities now shared by these other organizations. "We do not claim that these activities would not have been done if we had not started them, that if the Salvation Army had not come forward there is no doubt that somebody else would have recognized the need and have done the work.

Variety of Functions

"The Salvation Army takes an active part in a variety of functions, it can be an army of aggression of defence, or an army of occupation," said Major Marsh, describing the activities of the Salvation Army. "The Salvation Army has been all three of these. Our main objective is a peculiar one," the Major continued, "we are working to do ourselves out of a job, to make conditions so perfect in the world that there will no longer be a need for the Salvation Army, or any organization of its type."

Several factors of the work done by the local branch of the Salvation Army were mentioned by Major Marsh and a reference was made by him to the forthcoming drive for funds but said that he was not pleading, that the people of Belleville had always been generous in this necessary appeal for finances. The Major stated that the Salvation Army spent $4,625 during 1942 in expenditures to the needy of which $2,625 was derived from the Community Drive.

An unprepared report was submitted to the luncheon about the amount of money made at their annual carnival. This amount was estimated at approximately $523 with $150 made on the sale of the "Dollar Covered Doll." More detailed and exact figures were assured for the next meeting of the club.

The Greatest of Russian Guerillas Tells of His Most Famous Exploit

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Orel, U.S.S.R., Aug. 16—(AP)—Mikhail Petrovich Romashin, the greatest of Russian guerillas, whose band has been the scourge of Germans in the Bryansk region, says the partisans have been playing an important part in the current Red Army offensive.

Although the guerillas abandoned large-scale operations to save the local population from mass reprisals, Romashin said Sunday they are still operating in small but effective groups, derailing trains, blowing up bridges and hampering the movement of enemy troops and supplies.

Co-ordination between the Red Army and the guerillas, he said, was effected by the partisans themselves who carry radios, hear communiques and know the best time and place to strike.

Romashin, 38, has been decorated as a hero of the Soviet Union for his leadership of one of the largest guerilla organizations. He returned through the German lines to become Mayor of Otel.

He told foreign correspondents his most famous job was blowing up the "Blue Bridge" over the Desna River near Bryansk.

The Germans had 200 men defending the railroad bridge and anothre 500 in reserve, watching for guerillas to come from the forests, Romashin said.

His band made a 12-mile detour, approached the bridge through an open field where the Germans did not expect them and cut the railroad four miles each side of the bridge to prevent armored trains from coming to the aid of the defending garrison.

The guerilla units struck simultaneously at 1 a.m. Romashin said they wiped out most of the Germans, blew up both spans of the bridge and escaped before the enemy knew what hit them. The entire operation took 26 minutes. An hour later the partisan party downed one of two reconnaissance planes which the Germans sent over.

It is sometimes difficult to believe accounts of guerilla deeds, but Romashin supplied convincing he said and offered 1,500 rubels, details.

The Germans knew him by name about 37 acres of land, a house, two cows and a horse for his head.

"The people thought it was too cheap," he laughed. "They wouldn't sell me."

YOUR WARMTH NEXT WINTER
DEPENDS ON WHAT YOU DO
today
FURNACE REPAIRS and WEATHERPROOFING

Here are some questions and answers about the coal situation which will help you understand why you must prepare your home for winter right now.

Q. Is the coal situation in Canada really serious?
A. Yes. The Prime Minister has proclaimed it a National Emergency.

Q. What will happen next winter?
A. Canadian householders will have less coal than usual.

Q. Won't that be disastrous in many cases?
A. Not if householders are practical and farsighted : : : not if they prepare their homes for winter NOW.

Q. What do you mean by "preparing a home for winter"?
A. Many homes waste their fuel through unnecessary heat losses. Preparing your home means eliminating these wastes.

Q. How can you waste heat?
A. By letting valuable heat escape through doors and windows : : : by heating rooms which are not used . . . by having insufficient insulation and faulty or inadequate heating equipment : : : by careless, and improper firing.

Q. What can I do to eliminate these heat losses?
A. You should have your insulation, furnace and heating equipment properly inspected. Make sure now that your furnace is working efficiently . . . that it is delivering heat throughout your home evenly, effectively and economically . . . and that your home is protected against heat losses. Learn how to fire your furnace properly. Get busy now!

Q. Why all the hurry? . . . it's only August!
A. Skilled workman and supplies are scarce. If you wait until the fall, you may not get the services you need.

You can't start too soon to prepare your home against the winter blasts. You will have to use less coal next winter . . . so make sure you'll get adequate warmth when the cold weather arrives.

Activities and Objectives of S.A. Outlined to Rotary by Maj. Marsh

The Rotary Club of Belleville were the hosts to Major Marsh of the Salvation Army at their weekly luncheon in the Quinte Hotel Monday. Major Marsh told a brief story of the work and objective of the Salvation Army and related one or two instances from his experience while stationed at Montreal. Major Marsh served in New Brunswick and Newfoundland before being transferred to Montreal. He was associated with his organization in Newfoundland for 26 years and took his training there. Major Marsh has three sons serving with the active forces, one with the R.C.A.F., one with the R.A.F. and one son who has been wounded in Sicily.

Major Marsh said that he was not pleading for recognition of the Army or trying to sell the Salvation Army. He said that the Salvation Army was not the only army of its kind but the Salvation Army were the pioneers in many of the activities now shared by these other organizations. "We do not claim that these activities would not have been done if we had not started them, that if the Salvation Army had not come forward there is no doubt that somebody else would have recognized the need and have done the work.

Variety of Functions

"The Salvation Army takes an active part in a variety of functions, it can be an army of aggression of defence, or an army of occupation," said Major Marsh, describing the activities of the Salvation Army. "The Salvation Army has been all three of these. Our main objective is a peculiar one," the Major continued, "we are working to do ourselves out of a job, to make conditions so perfect in the world that there will no longer be a need for the Salvation Army, or any organization of its type."

Several factors of the work done by the local branch of the Salvation Army were mentioned by Major Marsh and a reference was made by him to the forthcoming drive for funds but said that he was not pleading, that the people of Belleville had always been generous in this necessary appeal for finances. The Major stated that the Salvation Army spent $4,625 during 1942 in expenditures to the needy of which $2,625 was derived from the Community Drive.

An unprepared report was submitted to the luncheon about the amount of money made at their annual carnival. This amount was estimated at approximately $523 with $150 made on the sale of the "Dollar Covered Doll." More detailed and exact figures were assured for the next meeting of the club.

YOUR WARMTH NEXT WINTER
FURNACE REPAIRS and WEATHERPROOFING
DEPENDS ON WHAT YOU DO
today

Here are some questions and answers about the coal situation which will help you understand why you must prepare your home for winter right now.

Q. Is the coal situation in Canada really serious?
A. Yes. The Prime Minister has proclaimed it a National Emergency.

Q. What will happen next winter?
A. Canadian householders will have less coal than usual.

Q. Won't that be disastrous in many cases?
A. Not if householders are practical and farsighted : : : not if they prepare their homes for winter NOW.

Q. What do you mean by "preparing a home for winter"?
A. Many homes waste their fuel through unnecessary heat losses. Preparing your home means eliminating these wastes.

Q. How can you waste heat?
A. By letting valuable heat escape through doors and windows : : : by heating rooms which are not used . . . by having insufficient insulation and faulty or inadequate heating equipment : : : by careless, and improper firing.

Q. What can I do to eliminate these heat losses?
A. You should have your insulation, furnace and heating equipment properly inspected. Make sure now that your furnace is working efficiently . . . that it is delivering heat throughout your home evenly, effectively and economically . . . and that your home is protected against heat losses. Learn how to fire your furnace properly. Get busy now!

Q. Why all the hurry? . . . it's only August!
A. Skilled workman and supplies are scarce. If you wait until the fall, you may not get the services you need.

You can't start too soon to prepare your home against the winter blasts. You will have to use less coal next winter . . . so make sure you'll get adequate warmth when the cold weather arrives.

Luftwaffe Beaten

That the German Luftwaffe is beaten and that Allied superiority in air will grow steadily is the statement of Air Marshal Sir Arthur Coningham.

Germany has been long since overtaken in the race of production of planes which Hitler, in planning the war, realized would play a prominent part. His aim was to make the Luftwaffe an invincible body which would sweep everything before it.

His first failure was against Britain when his Luftwaffe on the fifteenth of September, 1940, was so badly beaten by losses of planes that he had to give up. That was his first major defeat of the war.

The spirit of the British people and the intrepid courage of the airmen were the reasons for that British triumph. With this foundation and with the cooperation of the workers of Britain and the lease-lend program of the United States in its effort against the enemies of democracy, the vast superiority of the Allied air fleets came about.

Now in the important present phase of the war air power is vital and Germany has not much to use as compared with that of the Allies.

What the world has not yet seen remains for Britain and the United States to demonstrate with their air power. They are immensely superior and will still further gain against a foe with his falling resources. The war moving to its climax, finds in the hands of the Allies one of the great weapons of warfare of all time, air power.

British and Empire and American wisdom and foresight get the credit for the overhauling of the Nazi Luftwaffe and the steadily climbing of plane production and the majestic role call of airmen of the Commonwealth plan.

Goebbels' Effort Fails

Dr. Paul Goebbels, Nazi propagandist, admits that the British and American air raids have caused the Germans much difficulty and sorrows and that Germany would have to manage to overcome these growing difficulties.

Dr. Goebbels, in trying to minimize the effects of the air raids and of the effect upon the morale of the German people had an unlimited task on his hands for there is ample evidence that Germany is being whittled down in her war industrial production by the interference with the routine of the plants, the communications and by the forced evacuations.

Photographs taken from the air indicate the nature of the havoc and by these photographs the course of the air war is mapped out by the Allies.

Stories from bombed Milan relate how the people in that Italian centre are demanding Italy pursue a policy of making peace with the Allies.

No one believes Goebbels' story that the air war is not interfering with the conduct of the war by Germany. His anxiety to speak to the German people on that subject is evidence enough that air blows are having a tremendous result, despite Goebbels.

It is so devastating of German war industrial economy that Goebbels has had to endeavor to minimize the smashing blows which British, Canadian and American airmen have delivered against the war plants of the German nation.

Deadly Blows at U-Boats

Enemy U-boats have been delivered a stunning blow in the past three months when an average of one a day was sent to the bottom of the oceans by Allied counter-measures. These figures of over ninety enemy submarines lost stand for the months of May, June and July.

The submarine, Mr. Churchill and President Roosevelt pointed out in a Sunday statement, was one of the weapons on which Hitler set his mind as playing a vital part in the war. This had failed. In the great Sicilian operations only about 80,000 tons of Allied shipping had been lost, while the construction of Allied shipping excelled the losses in 1943 by over three million tons. Hitler had planned the submarine to play a more destructive role but in this he was foiled by the Allied counter-measures.

There was a warning note in the statement that "we can expect continued success only if we do not delay our efforts in any way," for Germany has large submarine reserves.

The Allies will strive to maintain and increase that battle against the enemy submarines which has been so victoriously carried on in recent months.

Loss of enemy submarines must have one powerful effect on the enemy, the lowering of the morale of the German crewmen. Such was also noted in the first war when there was mutiny among the German submarine crews on account of the losses caused to Germany's undersea boats.

Births in Wartime

(London Spectator)

The birthrate in the first quarter of this year was higher than it has been in any first quarter since 1928, the increase as compared with 1940 being from 15.0 to 16.8 per thousand.

It must not be supposed that this is evidence that the reproduction trend has taken a real turn for the better. Under the conditions of this war, as in the last, there is a tendency for marriage to be advanced and for family life to be started earlier, but there is nothing to show that the families will ultimately be larger, having arrived earlier.

Nonetheless, the increase in the number of children in wartime is a fact, and it is one which it would be profitable to examine. No doubt it is partly due to the fact that young men and women want to have children while both mother and father are still alive. But the increased birthrate may also partly be due to the fact that more money is available in wartime and that the economic burden of children presents fewer dreads. These are matters which deserve further examination.

Unsung Heroes of the Army

(London Sunday Chronicle)

Field Marshal Lord Milne has made a compelling appeal in the House of Lords for greater publicity for the Army. He told of a battery in North Africa, of whom only five per cent survived, still holding their position, "a feat of arms which in another campaign won four V.C.'s on the spot." Why was this tale of heroism not made public? Scarcely a family in this land but has one member in the Army. Must their doings remain unhonored and unsung?

THE ABSENTEE

The boy has cabled home to say
That he is safe at Nassau Bay:
'Seven days and nights adrift at sea,
Rescued by friends at last to be!
Hungry and thirsty, cold and wet,
By peril every hour beset;
Chiefly sustained by faith and prayer,
Believing God would hear them there.
And I must say, if he should ask.
That I was absent from my task.

I must admit, should he enquire,
That pleasure is my chief desire.
While he with death was face to face,
I turned my back upon my place.
Him, and his comrades, I forgot
And thought my shirking mattered not.
The while my task I failed to do
He fought for life the whole week through.
The while he thirsted, starved and prayed,
I stayed away from work and played.

The cable came today to tell:
"Rescued at sea, and all is well!"
We fathers have no way to know
How close to death our sons must go,
Nor where they are on land or sea.
But this henceforth my shame must be,
That while he drifted, night and day,
And turned to God in faith to pray,
And struggled on the open sea,
I was an idling absentee.

Food was just what one would expect in the field—bully beef with a covering of pastry, but onions and tomatoes were luxuries after Britain and the lemons were something the boys had not seen much of in England before they came out here.

I arrived at the airfield just before take-off time and some of the big Wellingtons were already airborne when McCann's truck bounced us along to the end of the runway to watch the heavily-laden bombers set out for an attack against Monte Corivino airport near Naples.

After the take-off, McCann escorted me to a tent that still wasn't completely operational after the storm, for a couple of hours' rest until the bombers returned. Flt. Lt. John Bue of London, Eng., the interrogation officer, awakened me in time for the arrival of the first crews. He was assisting Sqdn. Ldr. Paul Henault of Montreal.

One by one crews came into Bue's tent to report. The raid had been a success. Bombs found the runways of Monte Corivino and fires were left burning in the hangars. Opposition was light and no aircraft were missing.

The crews sat on folding benches across the table from Bue. While they answered questions they swatted at flies buzzing all around them. One big fly made a perfect three-point landing right on Bue's report sheet. "That's a super one," laughed FO. Lloyd McPhee of (457 Pitt St.) Cornwall, Ont.

FO. Bob McKeekin of Kenora, Ont., was skipper of one crew. With him were FO. M. C. Jones and FO. Mile Charlesworth of Toronto, the navigator, Sgt. Gnr. Stuart Meeks of Kingston, Ont., and PO. Edgar Black of Barrie, Ont. wireless operator.

After interrogation the fliers adjourned to the men's mess quarters sheltered under tarpaulins over steel frames, where they queued for eggs, bacon and tea which they devoured by the light of a solitary flashlight at the end of the table.

Then to bed, under a mosquito tent, for some rest before another busy day.

Compel Germans To Dig Into U-Boat Reserves

Washington, Aug. 17 — (AP) — Navy Secretary Frank Knox said today combat losses and Allied bombings of production centres undoubtedly were compelling the Germans to dig into their U-boat reserves in order to operate against Allied supply lines in the Atlantic.

Commenting on the announcement by Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt that more than 80 submarines were destroyed in May, June and July by Allied anti-submarine weapons, the Secretary said it must also be true the Axis have "lost some of their best skippers."

This, Knox told his press conference, is even worse than the less of the ships because there is no way to replace an experienced commander.

Knox recalled that when U-boat operations were at their height he had estimated the Germans had 400 to 500 submarines. This included, he said, many in reserve which were employed for training in the Baltic Sea.

THE WAR TODAY

By DEWITT MacKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst.)

After Messina—what?

The terrible devastation wrought by Royal Air Force bombers during the past few nights in ancient Milan, richest industrial city of Italy and next to Rome the largest metropolis of the country, may well presage its destruction, if, indeed, it hasn't already been virtually levelled.

That statement may come as a personal shock to a lot of people who, like the writer, know Milan well and have loved the old place. Still, war is a shocking business and this is one of the cities which must pay the price of Mussolini's iniquity.

Milan not only is the centre of great war industries, but it lies north of the River Po, which runs across northern Italy from west to east and provides the strategic line of fortifications which the Germans have manned as a defence against any Allied advance from the south. This city, and other unhapy places like neighboring Turin, will remain in German-held territory and be subject to continual bombardment even if the rest of Italy surrenders.

As things now stand, the Huns are likely to sacrifice all northern Italy in order to delay the surge of the Allies towards victory.

Whether the rest of Italy must suffer a similar fate depends on old Marshal Badoglio's government.

Thus far the only thing Badoglio has done to try to save his country has been his unsupported declaration that Rome is an "open city" a statement which his government has the grace to admit can't be expected to save the eternal city unless it's proven. Pending production of such proof the bombardment of Rome will have to proceed if the exigencies of war demand it. The capital not only is the strategic railway centre of all Italy, but it is filled with war industries.

There are two chances, it seems to me, that the portion of Italy south of the Po may shortly find peace.

One is that the peace demonstrations of the people may swell into such proportions the government will be compelled to surrender.

The other is the possibility that now the Germans have withdrawn as many of their troops and as much of their equipment as they can from Sicily, Hitler may release Badoglio from further Nazi bondage and let him save what he can by surrender.

SACK OF ROME

One of the first great disasters that befell Rome was the capture of the city by the Celtic Gauls under a chief who bore the name or title of Brennus.

In 31 B.C. Brennus at the head of a host invaded Italy, ravaged Etruria, annihilated a Roman army of about 40,000 and marched against Rome.

The Romans, unable to man their walls, garrisoned and provishoned the Capitol, sent the women and children out of the city and left the government in charge of aged patricians who had held office in the state.

At first the barbarians were so awed by the great city and the aged patricians that they molested nothing.

But after a few days, angered because they could not overpower the garrison in the Capitol, they sacked and burned the city.

Until the great conflagration in the time of Nero, the sacking and burning of the city by the Gauls under Brennus was the greatest disaster that Rome had ever known.

After the Capitol garrison had with stood a siege of six months, the Gauls abandoned all hope of taking it.

On one occasion, according to a classic legend, the Capitol was saved from surprise by the cackling of the sacred geese and the courage and resolution of Marcus Manlius.

Finally the Gauls agreed to withdraw from the ruined city if the Romans would pay a ransom of a thousand pounds of gold.

While the gold was being weighed Brennus threw his heavy sword into the scales. Asked by the tribune of Rome what this act meant, the Gaul replied, "Woe to the Conquered."

One version of the legend says that while the ransom gold was being weighed a general named, Furius Camillus suddenly appeared with a Roman army and defeated Brennus and his host. The usual version, however, is that Brennus and his barbarians withdrew from Rome, disappeared into the mountains to the north with their plunder and were never heard of again in Italy.

This sudden and unexpected invasion from the north, the destruction of the city and the years required to rebuild it made a profound impression on the republic, which resolved to strengthen its military power, to conquer the warlike peoples on the distant frontiers and to prevent similar threats to her security.

WEDDINGS

DAFOE—HICKS

A very pretty midsummer wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Hicks, Corbyville, Ont., on Aug. 14th at 2.30 p.m., when their youngest daughter, Hazel Maude, became the bride of Earl Maynes Dafoe, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Winsor Dafoe, Plainfield, Ont. Standards of gladioli, ferns and other summer flowers formed a very pretty background for the occasion. Rev. J. R. Trumpour Cannifton, performed the ceremony. Wedding music was played by Miss Ruth Brintnell, of Plainfield.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a white floor-length gown of net over taffeta with lace bodice and full skirt. The sweetheart neckline framed her only ornament, a single strand of pearls. Her finger-tip veil of tulle illusion was gathered into a pleated coronet banded with white rosebuds. She carried a bouquet or Briarcliffe roses, baby breath and fern.

Her sister, Miss Marguerite Hicks, was her only attendant, wearing a floor-length gown of forget-me-not blue sheer crepe with full skirt, fitted bodice and a matching shoulder-length veil. She carried a bouquet of summer flowers in dainty pastel hues. Mr. Raymond Gunsolus, Belleville, was best man.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held, the bride's mother receiving in a black lace ensemble and corsage of Talisman roses. The groom's mother was attired in figured powder blue silk with white accessories and corsage of Talisman roses. The tea table looked charming spread with a hand painted linen table cloth, centred with a three-tiered wedding cake and flanked with pink tapers. Mrs. Edward Sherry, Belleville and Mrs. Ernest Chambers, Corbyville, poured tea. Miss Marion Chambers, Mrs. Elmer Urch, Mrs. Clarence Barlow and Mrs. James Reynolds served the guests under the supervision of Mrs. B. A. Clarke, Corbyville.

The bride and groom left amid showers of good wishes for a honeymoon trip to Algonquin Park. The bride travelled in a rose jersey gown with white accessories. Later the young couple will take up residence at Plainfield. The groom's gift to the bride was a silver tea service in grape design; to the bridesmaid, a glamour pin; to the best man, a travelling case; to the pianist, a china cream and sugar set.

Out-of-town guests were present from Belleville, Caledonia, Alymer, West Huntington and Peterboro.

WOODMAN—FOLLIS

The wedding took place in Peterboro August. 14th, in All Saints Anglican Church, decorated with ferns and gladioli for the occasion, of Velma Yvonne Follis, Reg.N., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Follis, of Napanee, Ont., to Cpl. Earl A. Woodman, R.C.A.F., son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Woodman, of Stoney Creek, Ont. Rev. W. A. Filer performed the ceremony, with Mrs. W. A. Logan at the organ and Mrs. Melville Shadgett singing "Because" during the signing of the register. The bride is a graduate of the Nicholls Hospital School of Nursing.

The bride was lovely in a floor-length gown of white sheer with a lace yoke and collar and long full sleeves. Her veil of embroidered bridal net fell from a Queen Anne coronet and she carried a bouquet of white gladioli and bouvardia. Mrs. H. Cheesman, sister of the bride, was matron of honor, in a floor-length blue sheer gown with an embroidered bodice and long full sleeves. Sylvia Follis was junior bridesmaid in a charming gown of floor-length apricot taffeta. Both carried Colonial nosegays, the matron of honor having pink roses and baby's breath and the bridesmaid forget-me-nots and Johanna Hill roses.

The best man was Mr. Maurice Harvey, of Hamilton and the ushers were Sgt. Hugh Cheesman, R.C.O.C., London and Mr. Eric Edmondson of Peterboro.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's grandmother, 508 Patterson St., at which her mother received in a gown of French blue with navy accessories. She was assisted by the groom's mother, who wore grey crepe with black accessories. Both wore corsages of pastel shaded sweet peas.

When the couple left on a trip to Haliburton the bride was wearing a two-piece powder blue dress with navy accessories and a corsage of sweet peas. They will live in Montreal, where the groom is stationed.

DOUGLAS—BOYLE

George Street United Church, Peterboro, decorated with huge bouquets of gladioli, was the scene on Saturday, Aug. 14th, for the wedding of Marjorie E., daughter of Mrs. Dorothy F. Boyle and the late Henry J. Boyle to Donald Warren Douglas, son of Mr. Daniel Douglas and the late Mrs. Douglas. Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe officiated and Miss Lenore Skitch played the wedding music, playing "Because" during the signing of the register.

Given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Charles Boyle, of Lindsay, the bride was charming in a street-length gown of white sheer with lace insets at waist and neck and a heart-shaped veil of white net. She wore a single strand of pearls and carried a bouquet of deep red roses. She was attended by her sister, Miss Dorothy Boyle and by Miss Frances Merritt, both of whom wore frocks of heaven blue sheer with lace peplums and bodices. Dutch caps of matching net trimmed with white lace and single strand pearl necklaces. They carried bouquets of pink gladioli tied nosegay-fashion with white ribbons.

Mr. Alex Chivas of Oshawa was best man and the ushers were LAC. Charles Daering and AC2 Edward Freeman.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's mother, who received in a dress of turquoise blue crepe and black straw hat trimmed with white flowers, wearing a corsage of pink roses. Later the happy couple left on a motor trip to Toronto, the bride travelling in a two-piece cinnamon dotted crepe suit with a beige Chesterfield coat and matching accessories.

"LOOT SUIT"

New York, Aug. 17—(AP)—Enter the "loot suit." David Hauser, arrested 28 times as a pickpocket, so described his costume when he pleaded guilty to a petty larceny charge. It had wide-waisted trousers, with snug cuffs that prevented stolen articles from slipping out.

JAPS IN BUURMA STRAFED

New Delhi, Aug. 17—(AP)—R.A.F. Hurricanes attacked Japanese troop concentrations and installations in Burma in the Maungdaw and Buthedaung areas and at Sinoh on the Maypu Peninsula yesterday, a joint Allied communique said today.

Other aircraft, the communique added, swooped down on loaded supply vessels on the Kaladan River north of Akrab, destroying six and damaging others.

Fighters bombed and strafed a river steamer and supply dumps on the Chindwin River at Kongyi in the Kalewa district, with unannounced results.

The Marry-Go-Round

Just in Passing

You can't sell a girl a hat by telling her that it makes her look "sensible" any more than you can sell a man a necktie by telling him that it makes him look "cute". But they will both fall for the simple remark "It makes you look ten years younger".

Many a bachelor who has faced the hazards of free-lancing in the love-game for eight or ten years, signs the marriage certificate with a sigh of relief and a comforting glow of safety.

A popular service man on leave tells me that if he is half an hour late for a date, the girl is sure to be peeved but if he keeps her waiting in suspense for an hour or two, she will fall on his neck with relief instead of jumping on it with reproach. "That's women", he adds.

Marriage turns a girl into a wife; but it merely makes an ex-bachelor out of a man. It will take a year or so of home-training, when he comes back, to make a nice lawn-mowing, furnace-tending husband out of him.

Life is a vicious circle. A girl has to spend half her time shopping for the proper clothes if she wants to go places—and the other half fishing for dates to go to the places where she can wear them.

Most people are looking for a fool-proof marriage which will bind them together yet leave them free to go their separate ways—you know, something like an open window, which will let in the breeze and keep out the noise.

To the average man, a moonlight drive without kisses is like serving the canapes without the cocktails. His mind works as automatically as a movie-director's: man—girl—moon—what no love-scene?

It is astonishing how many women a man has to make love to, in order to find out that the one he married doesn't understand him.

Go slow on these mid-summer romances. Once a man gets the impression that a girl is in love with him, it sinks in like a laundry mark—and no acid will remove it.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Now She's Sorry

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm a girl of 17 and very fond of a boy who won't even speak to me. When I was 15, he seemed to think a lot of me, but I didn't want to be bothered with boys at that time, so ignored him.

I really regret it today. He is now 18 and will soon leave for the army, but he has become conceited all of a sudden and won't even recognize me on the street. I think the reason he acts this way is that some of the girls probably told him how I felt about him, and he doesn't know how to take it.

When he leaves for the Army, shall I write him, or do you think he would turn against me still more?

K. S. B.

Just write him a nice friendly letter before he goes into the Army, and tell him you wish him all the luck in the world. Suggest that you realize that the cause of your quarrel was just "kid stuff", and express the hope that you see him before he goes.

Wants to Leave Home

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm a girl of 18 and would like some help. I took up defense work in a school, and after finishing the course was sent to another town to take a test for the shipyard and passed. But I didn't like the town, so I came home.

Ever since that time, my step-mother has been fussing at me, and when I ran away from home to find a job, they caught me the next day and brought me home again. My step-mother is saying terrible things about me, which are not true, and the neighbors are hearing them. How can I prove to these people that I'm a good girl?

I want to go to another town to get a job, but dad won't give me any money to pay for room and board until I get the job I want. I want to work to help win this war, but they won't believe me.

M. N.

As you were not contented in the town where you went to take up war work, your father naturally thinks you might be equally unhappy in your next venture. Eighteen is rather young for a girl to leave home in times like these, and your father, in withholding money for your room and board 'til you take root somewhere else, is doing what he considers best for your own good.

Isn't there some work you could get in your own home town? Don't worry too much about your step-mother's gossip. The neighbors will draw their own conclusions about the type of girl you are without any assistance from her.

FASHION FLASHES

THE BEST FINISH to top off a short-skirted dinner dress or to dress up a suit after dark is a feathered hat. A draped toque of pink velvet is trimmed with a huge ostrich plume of pink shading to rose and brown. The feather flows down the back to one side. Matching muff of draped velvet with ostrich trim.

Back again comes the chemise dress but this time for the short-skirted evening dress. An autumn model is a soft chemise dress with U-shaped neckline and tiny cap sleeves. Wide diagonal stripes are formed by dark brown and copper-colored sequins.

There's nothing yet been devised to compare with flashes of white on deep black. A new dressy suit of black woollen has a tiny Peter Pan collar of ermine and an ermine bow tie at the waistline above a rather flaring peplum.

Voting was heavy at a career and college girls' club for the sequined calot as the favorite after-dark, dress-up hat in place of the flowers and veiling that has held sway for so long.

New heights mark some of the latest hats designed for general wear. A postilion of gray felt is trimmed in front with a tall spike fancy of overlapping mercury wings in mauve and gray.

plane base at Rekata Bay, Santa Isabel, are the others. Both Vila and Rekata Bay were bombed yesterday.

Even as the Americans moved up the Solomons nearer Rabaul, Australians in tough mountain fighting, finally wiped out Japanese resistance on northeastern New Guinea at Tambu Bay, only six miles south of the enemy air base at Salamaua. At least 200 Japanese were killed.

Maintaining mastery of New Guinea's skies, high altitude fighters of the 5th United States army airforce intercepted a formation of 25 Japanese Divebombers and Zeros over the Watut Valley 40 miles southwest of the Salamaua-Lae sector Monday, shooting down 12 and probably destroying two others at a cost of only one plane.

Proving to the Japanese that last Friday night's record-breaking raid on the enemy oil port of Balikpapan, Borneo, was not a stunt, other Allied bombers early Monday repeated the 2,500 mile roundtrip flight.

Delegation Told All Players Subject to Call Would Be Taken

(By The Canadian Press)

Uncertain about prospects for the coming hockey season because of manpower requirements, six officials of the N.H.L., the American Hockey League and the Montreal Forum, yesterday waited upon Arthur MacNamara, director of National Selective Service, in Ottawa, for a discussion of the situation.

Lester Patrick, spokesman, declared the deputation sought no concessions but wanted to know how hockey fitted into the manpower picture. The head of the New York Rangers admitted they were told "politely and firmly" hockey could not have men who were subject to call for military training but the government realized hockey is a great morale-builder. Available players would include those rejected by the armed services and unskilled workers in essential industries who could secure permission from employers. Patrick said it had been suggested at the meeting the Canadian Government would consult with Washington on an agreement to permit such players to enter the United States. This would be done to avoid any embarrassment for the U.S. government.

TEAMS BATTLE FOR SIX FRAMES; 'NO CONTEST'

Bell Sargents Leading Over Bristols When the Game is Called.

LOSERS OUTHIT

It was "no contest" as the first game of the Belleville Ladies Softball League play-offs was called in the top half of the seventh inning on account of darkness at the Armouries Lawn last night. At the time Bell-Sargents were leading the Bristol girls 13 to 8, but as league regulations call for seven innings of softball, except in case of rain, to constitute a game last night's playdown was just "no contest".

A five-run splurge in the third inning gave the Sargents a substantial lead when Betty Clarke cleared the bases with a home after Helen Garrow doubled. Two more Sargent runs in the fourth saw Lois Calcutt, the Bristol starting pitcher, relieved by Pee Wee Colden, who fared little better as the Sargents added five more in the fifth as the result of Miss Colden's wildness and some shaky fielding. "Pudgy" Donovan and Helen Benn paced the Sargents on the attack, while Miss Donovan sustained an ankle injury in the final frame that needed medical attention.

After scoring an unearned run in the first Bristols were kept off the run column by Bessie Doolittle on the Sargents' mound until the fourth when G. Waite hoisted one over the fence for a three-run circuit blow. Hits by Allison Benn and Vickers gave Bristol four more in the sixth as two errors and a fielder's choice interspersed into the Sargents' fielding effort.

As the result of last night's "no contest" Reliance and SWACO will play Wednesday night, Bell Sargent and Bristol Friday night, while last night's game will be replayed next Monday evening.

JACKIE CALLURA KNOCKED OUT IN EIGHTH ROUND

Hamilton Boxer Loses the Featherweight Crown to Phil Terranova

WON TITLE IN 1941

By EDDIE PAGNAC
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New Orleans, Aug. 17 — (AP)—Fighting Phil Terranova, new N. B. A. featherweight champion of the world, plans to defend his title against all comers.

Both he and his manager, Bobby Gleason, made this plain last night after Terranova knocked out defending champion Jackie Callura of Hamilton, Ont., in the eighth round of a scheduled 15-round bout before 8,500 spectators.

Callura forced the fighting in the early rounds and had a slight edge, but Terranova appeared to grow stronger as the fight progressed while his opponent tired fast after the fifth round.

A series of hard rights and lefts to the body and head softened Callura in the seventh and sent him to the canvas for a count of nine early in the eighth. Although the champion jumped to his feet at the count he was no match for the hard punching challenger from the Bronx and went down for good from a crushing right uppercut to the jaw in the first minute of the round. Callura weighed 124¼ and Terranova 124.

Leo P. Bradley, manager of Callura, said his fighter got careless while Callura blamed his defeat on butting.

The title came to Terranova after less than two years of professional boxing.

It was the ninth appearance of the little Canadian in a New Orleans ring, and his second loss. Callura got his start toward the N.B.A. crown on March 20, 1941, battling Jimmy Perrin, then a top ranking featherweight, to a draw. With the exception of a 10-round decision loss to Vince Dell'Orto, Callura had whipped all comers until last night.

DODGER YOUTH MOVEMENT BRINGS WIN OVER COOPER

New First Baseman Helps With 15 Perfect Chances and Two Hits

CINCINNATI SECOND

(Association Press Sports Writer.)

The transformation of Brooklyn Dodgers from an old men's club to a youths' society is going on from day to day and in spite of the ridicule that has been heaped upon Branch Rickey for his trading, the changes are showing results.

How different the Dodgers look from the good old days can be exemplified in one sentence: They had outfielder Frenchy Bordagaray playing third base last night.

But in beating the world champion St. Louis —Cardinals 7-3 they also had a new first baseman, young Howard Sch[illegible], a 6 feet 6 1-2 inch bean pole, who handled 15 fielding chances successfully and contributed a double and a single to Brooklyn's attack on Mort Cooper and two other hurlers.

Whitlow Wyatt officiated at yesterday's triumph over the Cardinals holding them to eight hits and himself getting two doubles and a single.

Cincinnati Reds captured their fifth triumph in three days by overriding New York Giants 5-2 behind Johnny Vander Meer's eight-hit hurling and maintained their hold on second place. A double by Steve Mesner with the bases loaded in the first inning provided the winning margin.

In the other National League games Johnny Gee pitched Pittsburgh Pirates to a 5-1 decision over Boston Braves, allowing only seven hits, and Philadelphia Phillies nosed out Chicago Cubs 4-3 in a night game with Schoolboy Rowe allowing only five safeties in gaining his 11th victory.

New York Yankees, leading the American League, walked over Chicago White Sox 7-0 with Hank Borowy pitching four-hit ball.

Washington Senators outslugged Cleveland Indians to win 6-3 for Wilfred Lefebvre, the onetime Boston Red Sox hurler.

In the only other major league encounter scheduled Boston Red Sox rode roughshod over St. Louis Browns 9-0 to give Louis (Bobo) Newsom another defeat, his seventh unsuccessful start since coming into the American League.

Morgan's Most Important Bout Is With Katan

The complete card for Wednesday night's wrestling show at the Hume Arena was announced by Promoter Frank Tunney.

"I realize the importance of the main bout to "Toar" Morgan," stated Promoter Tunney today as he reviewed wrestling throughout the province today. "Morgan has only been beaten once here and that was by Katan. Naturally he is entitled to a return bout on the showing in Belleville, Ottawa and Toronto. In the meantime Katan wrestled the world champion, "Wild Bill" Longson, to a draw here last week and now considers himself the No. 1 contender, especially after Longson unmasked the Red Mask. Naturally a win for Morgan in Belleville Wednesday night would move him into a position where he could challenge Longson, so you see the importance of this bout to the popular "Toar" Morgan," explained Mr. Tunney.

The remainder of the card has a bigtown atmosphere as it brings together "Texas Dick" Bishop versus Freddie Steele of Glendale, and the popular Joe Maich in against George Tofalos, the little golden Greek.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

For Safety.

An enemy 'plane passed over a certain district one night, and the following morning a man told his neighbor that an unexploded incendiary bomb had fallen into his bedroom.

"Throw it into the garden?" inquired the neighbor.

"Can't do that", was the reply, "It's six feet long".

"Good gracious", gasped the neighbor, "that's not an incendiary —that's a high explosive! Have you been sleeping in the bedroom with that thing all night?"

"Not bloomin' likely. . . I slept on the couch in the drawing room!"

Nice Color Scheme.

So the hockey rule-makers have added another marking to confuse the players and officials alike. The boys who lay awake nights concocting innovations to the puck playing rules will introduce a new "centre line" to the game next winter, a red line drawn across the centre of the rink to indicate a new zone behind which the defending team can play off-side to their hearts' content. All other markings remain the same as last year.

The new "centre line" will help to relieve pressure when an attacking team stages one of those "ganging acts". The defending team can fire the puck right up to the centre line where it can be taken by a defending player. This new rule will naturally cause the attacking team to be more cautious about advancing the entire team into the defending team's defence zone in a body, as any breakaway from the centre line would naturally prove disastrous to the attackers.

Ease Icing Plays.

In the event an attempted pass from a defending player to another player on the same side at the "centre line" goes beyond the red penalty shot line, it will not be considered icing the puck and play will continue.

Other minor changes were made in clarifying playing rules and they will be released when adopted by both associations. The C.A.H.A. has approved them and they will be presented to the N.H.L. Board of Governors at the next meeting.

Text of the new rule follows:

In marking a hockey rink a new red line two inches wide to be known as the "centre line" will be drawn across the rink at centre ice and that the defending team be permitted to make forward passes to this new line without incurring an offside penalty.

On to Oshawa.

Two Belleville teams are entered in the General Motors Gold Cup rinks tournament sponsored by the Oshawa Lawn Bowling Club tomorrow. The local rinks are skipped by Clarence Clapp and Ab Wonnacott and incidentally the latter quartette won the coveted General Motors Gold Cup two years ago. The players composing the local rinks are—George Pauley, Ernie Vanner, L. E. "Mac" McLean and C. R. Clapp, skip; Doug Row, Cliff Argue, "Davie" Davison and Ab Wonnacott skip. Incidentally in the eleven o'clock draw Clarence Clapp's team tees off against Eddie Goodman's Oshawa bowlers, the 1942 winners of the General Motors Gold Cup. On the same draw and on green No. 9 Ab Wonnacott's rink meets T. Simpson's Balmy Beach rink of Toronto. Although the tournament only accommodates 64 rinks, a total of 64 men's rinks made application for competition, forty more than the Belleville Corbin Cup tourney. However, the bulk of the rinks entered are from the Toronto and Oshawa area. None are in from Montreal, while Belleville had five. A. M. Crawford of Wingham, and winner of the Corbin Gold Cup, has also entered his Wingham quartette in the Oshawa tournament tomorrow, which means more tough opposition for the local bowlers to battle.

Did You Know.

After serving 13 months with Canadian troops in Labrador, Ken Murphy is home visiting relatives in Napanee. . . .Ken, who played defence for Eddie Thomas' 1937 Intermediate O.H.A. Belleville Redmen champions, called in at the Hume Arena to see Manager Walt Gerow yesterday. . .Maurice Kinkley, who played second for Napanee Gibbards in the old C.O.B.L., also called on his old manager. . . "Knik" is still playing baseball in the Mining League up north. . . In team rasslin' at Ottawa recently "Toar" Morgan and Billie Watson teamed up to give Al Dunlop and John Katan a sound thrashing. . . Katan contends Dunlop "took a powder" on him leaving the Palermo assassin alone in the ring to battle Watson and Morgan. . . . "I'll only have Morgan to oppose me Wednesday night at the Hume Arena and brother whatta beating he's in for", threatened "Killer John" . . . .On the other hand Morgan says he flattened Katan without Watson's help. . ."Yes, and I'll do it again in Belleville", promised Morgan.

Darkness Intervenes.

A lot of angles entered into last night's girls' softball play-off before hostilities were finally concluded by the umpires on account of impending darkness. The teams were late in starting and several rallies by both squads took up over 90 minutes before six frames were concluded. As a relief hurler Pee Wee Colden developed a wild streak —walking several Bell Sargent batters, which naturally took up considerable time. However, the sixth inning score of 13 to 8 for the Sargents just about indicates the play, as Bill Davis' league leading Bristols were off color from the start, while Jack Symons' Sargents had their batting togs on. Now that play-off time has arrived President Charlie Barnett should see that all games commence no later than 6.45 p.m. and precisely at that time. The league has a regulation, the same as the O.A.S.A., that seven innings must be played, except in the event of rain when five will do the trick, to constitute a game. Naturally the Bell-Sargents were anything but pleased when it was announced "no contest" last night.

This and That.

The Reliance A. C. played hosts to two softball teams from the Mountain View R. C. A. F. base last evening. . .The Mountain View girls beat the Reliance lassies 6 to 2 at softball while "Spike" Pryke's Reliance men downed the B. V. "Bombers" 4 to 2. . .The games were played at the Reliance athletic field following which the Reliance A. C. entertained the visiting airwomen and airmen in their spacious canteen. . . The evening was arranged by Harold Kurtz and Bud Wilkins. . .On Wednesday the officers and members of No. 5 I. T. S. will hold their annual field day prior to which Wing Commander A. J. Snetsinger has asked His Worship, Mayor Rollins to take the salute for the march past of the competing athletes at 1.45 p.m. precisely . . .Today Wing Commander Snetsinger made it known that the public of Belleville and environs would be made welcome at the annual track and field meet sponsored by the No. 5 I. DEFEAT INFLATION IN YOUR HOME

Inflation . . . that's when prices go skyrocketing up so's wages can never catch them . . . is caused by a lot of people wanting to buy more things than we can spare the men, machines or material to make—especially in wartime. We can help defeat inflation and protect the Price Ceiling by making do with what we have. Besides, the money we don't spend now will buy us better things after the war.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 150

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

When rules are ignored by a pair at the board and their hands are not needlessly wrecked, put this on the cuff: A partner had stuff that the other one did not suspect.

You may raise without enough tricks and still come to no bad end. But usually that's because partner had unshown values to plug up the holes for you.

You have this hand:

♠9 5 2
♥K 7 6 3
♦8 5
♣A Q 7 4

You have four suit tricks; three no-trump tricks. Before bidding your basis is two tricks. Each raise shows another trick. So you have enough for two suit raises; one free no-trump bid.

In selecting your bids, always follow the order of choice in T-A-N; takeout, assist, no-trump. But do not raise unless you have enough tricks to make good each raise.

Partner starts with an opening bid of one diamond or one spade. Your first response is a takeout to two clubs. Your raise of one shows and consumese ethree of your four tricks.

Supose partner then bids three clubs. With no more takeout, you assist your assisted suit. Bid four clubs; a raise that shows and consumes your fourth trick.

Instead of one diamond or one spade, suppose partner opens with one heart. Your first response is two clubs. If partner then bids three clubs, what do you do?

You may now assist your partner's suit in hearts or assist your own assisted suit. With a choice, prefer to first assist partner's suit. Otherwise, he may never know you have such an assist.

If you assist here with a bid of three hearts, it would not be a raise over three clubs bid by partner. To show your fourth trick, your bid in this spot is four hearts.

Don't make partner think. You lose more darn games that way.

Maybe your hand contains three high cards. You've got two bids if you do it right. You'll do it right if you've got two-bits to send to Sam Gordon, in care of this newspaper, for his Horse Sense Bridge rule book.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Yankee Doodle Dandy"

"Yankee Doodle Dandy," which is now at the Capitol Theatre, brings to the screen another Warner Bros. life story in film. It is the outstanding story of the career of George M. Cohan and one of the most thrilling films ever made. It is thrilling for many reasons but timely patriotism is the most important one of all.

James Cagney portrays the role of George M. Cohan and it is by far his finest work. His impersonation of Cohan is wonderful because he doesn't allow himself to become a stickler for detail. He looks like Cagney, but talks, sings and acts like George M. Cohan himself.

"Yankee Doodle Dandy" is a great film from all angles. The production numbers are done to perfection. The singing and dancing are typical of a Broadway revue and the backstage sequences are the most authentic ever seen in a motion picture.

The film hits the high spots of Cohan's theatrical career for it would be impossible to present all the shows he wrote or appeared in. Through the presentation of his most memorable musical plays and a very effective montage treatment to cover the intervening years we get not only the story of George M. Cohan, but a cavalcade of show business.

Gradually the Four Cohans diminish to one. Jerry and Nellie retire to a farm. Josie gets married. George and his wife themselves start a little farm but later he returns to show business at a request to play the part of President Roosevelt in "I'd Rather Be Right."

He is called to Washington by the President and learns to his surprise that he has been awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor for having written "You're a Grand Old Flag' 'and "Over There."

The excellent supporting cast is made up of George Tobias, Frances Langford, S. Z. Sakall, Eddie Foy, Jr., Walter Catlett and many more. "Yankee Doodle Dandy" is a miracle of entertainment, dedicated to America's Number One Entertainer—George M. Cohan.

AT THE BELLE

"My Friend Flicka"

Another novel has been made into an outstanding picture, "My Friend Flicka", Mary O'Hara's best selling book of last year, now in its final day at the Belle Theatre. The technicolor film boasts a featured cast topped by Roddy McDowall, Preston Foster and Rita Johnson.

The Canadian Paramount Newsreel, a comedy color "Doing Their Bit", and an outstanding C.C.O. feature "Train Busters" you've read about them now see them smashing Hitler's lifeline, precede the feature attraction.

"The Moon is Down" Outstanding

One of the most eagerly awaited pictures to come out of Hollywood since—well, since the same author's "The Grapes of Wrath"— opens next at the Belle Theatre. It is, of course, the widely heralded picturization of John Steinbeck's "The Moon is Down".

As a novel, John Steinbeck's "The Moon is Down" was acclaimed as one of the greatest. From the minute it was published it was selected by the Book-of-the-Month Club and in a nation-wide poll was voted "The book of the year". Brought to the screen by 20th Century-Fox, the film is, according to advance reports, "one of the greatest of all time".

Throbbing with the fury of emotions beyond words, "The Moon is Down" tells the gripping story of a freedom-loving people whose hopes, strength and spirit—even under the heel of the conqueror— will never be crushed. Theirs is the will to live and they prove anew that those who won't be beaten can't be beaten.

To Producer Nunnally Johnson, who also wrote the screen play of the picture, goes much of the credit for bringing "The Moon is Down" faithfully to the screen. His cast was chosen carefully, with extreme care for the needs of the individual roles.

Sir Cedric Hardwicke was picked as Colonel Lanser, the cold-blooded Nazi leader who commands the occupying force, Henry Travers has the most important role of his long and distinguished career as the fumbling, yet courageous Mayor, and his home-spun, philosophical advisors is portrayed by Lee J. Cobb. Dorris Bowdon, who enacted the important role of "Rosasharn' in "The Grapes of Wrath", returns to the screen as Molly Morden, while the Mayor's wife is Margaret Wycherly, renowned Broadway actress.

Irving Pichel handled the directorial reins on "The Moon is Down".

"Dood It Again" a clever color-fun cartoon and "Mr. and Mrs. American", a thoroughly entertaining March of Time film precede the feature attraction.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By CHARLIE EDWARDS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Aug. 17—(CP) — The army appears to be moving the Allan Cup into Alberta next spring. Neil and Mac Colville have been posted to an army service corps training centre in that province. Neil, it will be remembered, won the national senior title last winter for Ottawa Commandos, with some assistance of course from brother Mac, Ken Reardon, Alex Shinicky and a few others. Two of these, Eddy Slowinski and Jim Henry, will accompany the Colvilles to the Alberta centre.

The Sport Chute:

Jean Marc Demers, of Montreal, three times Canadian backstroke swimming champion, has decided to turn his aquatic ability into shekels. He's not planning to enter professional swim races but has contracted for a series of broadcasts dealing with swimming. He'd like to coach, too, and he has written his sports memories into a book to be published soon. . . Red Dutton, managing director of the N.H.L. tells of naming his new racehorse, a colt out of Love Sick. Red told Dave Dryburgh of The Regina Leader-Post he got the answer when a fellow asked him what he'd do if he were love sick. "Told him I'd write home, so that's the colt's name—Write Home out of Love Sick."

Boston Goalie:

Bill Gaynon of the Niagara Falls Review says Nick Damore may move into the Boston Bruins' nets to replace Frankie Brimsek, now in the U.S. Coast Guard. Damore, a Niagara Falls product, was with Hershey, the Boston farm, last year.

Incidentally:

Apparently that long-time Lew Hayman-Reg Threlfall feud will be missing from the east-west football final, if any, this year. How those two fine coaches loved to match wits in the annual classic. There's talk that Hayman will not coach a team this year because of other R.C.A.F. duties. Whether he does or not, it's unlikely he'll meet Threlfall again. The big Winnipeg coach says he will be unable to handle any football duties this fall because of pressure of his insurance business. . . Bucko McDonald, Toronto hockey defenceman, is trying his hand at lacrosse again with Lakeshores in the Ontario circuit. . . The seven-day race meet at Calgary which concluded the Prairie racing season showed a 14 per cent. drop in attendance from last year but an 11 per cent. increase in pari-mutuel betting.

BROOKLYN LIFTS 2 MORE PLAYERS

Pair of Young Hurlers to Get Chance in the Big Leagues

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, highly pleased by the ability of Luis Olmo, has dipped again into the ranks of the Montreal Royals of the International League for playing talent to revive its sputtering Dodgers machine.

This time Branch Rickey, President of the Dodgers, has called up a pair of young hurlers, 21-year-old Harold Gregg and 18-year-old Rex Barney. In exchange, Rickey said last night, pitcher Max Macon and shortstop John (Red) Barkley would join the International League club.

Olmo, who battered down International League fences early in the season, was recalled by the Dodgers recently when Joe Medwick was shunted to New York Giants.

The Montreal-Brooklyn deal yesterday kept the International League in the headlines although the weather made it impossible for six of the eight clubs to take the field. Only Buffalo Bisons and Baltimore Orioles were able to play, the Orioles winning, 3-1, behind the clutch pitching of Clyde Smoll.

Girl Improving Since New Drug Was Administered

Hamilton, Ont., Aug. 17—(CP)— Although the condition of 10-year-old Sheila Rockwell, of Aldershot, Ont., suffering from general septicemia, is still grave, hospital authorities today said she is improving following the administration of the new drug penicillin.

When other drugs failed to halt the septicemia, caused by a foot infection, a supply of penicillin was obtained through Dr. Chester Keefer, of the Evans Memorial Hospital, Boston and rushed to Hamilton from New York by airplane and automobile.

The child's condition was considered hopeless last week when her temperature remained at 103 for several days. The injections of penicillin are to continue for from 10 to 12 days and the usual reaction is a gradual improvement.

All but five per cent. of the new drug is reserved for use by the United States armed forces and the remainder is distributed sparingly through Dr. Keefer's authority.

CRUCIAL PHASE

of this rumor, with only the barest scraps of information filtering out to the press through official channels, it was recalled the only British cabinet minister to accompany Mr. Churchill to Quebec was Lord Leathers, Minister of Transport.

The amount of shipping available for the transport of troops and supplies is a vital factor in any sea-borne invasion attempt.

With Lord Leathers here were Lewis Douglas, head of the United States War Shipping Administration, and Lt.-Cmdr. C. P. Edwards, Canada's Deputy Transport Minister. Hon. J. E. Michaud, Transport Minister, was in Quebec last week for a joint meeting of the British War Cabinet and the Canadian Cabinet War Committee

While the combined Chiefs of Staff of Britain and the United States were meeting to prepare for their deliberations with Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt, the civilian authorities charged with direction of merchant shipping were presumably conferring in the Chateau Frontenac, conference headquarters.

Put on Finishing Touches

Prime Minister Churchill and his military advisers have been hard at work here and presumably now are putting the finishing touches on material for the anti-Axis meetings of the British and American leaders and their combined Chiefs of Staff.

Already the government of two of the major democracies is being directed from Quebec. When Mr. Roosevelt arrives this will be virtually the hub of the democratic war effort for a few days.

Mr. Churchill spent several hours in each 24 conducting business in his capacity of Prime Minister, for his 10 Downing Street office has been literally transplanted to Quebec. This work is in addition to his conferences with his military advisers and his preparation for his coming meeting here with the President.

Moves Office to Quebec

Prime Minister Mackenzie King also has moved his office to Quebec, and conducts from his temporary office in the Citadel all the business which normally would be done in Ottawa.

Since Mr. Churchill returned from Hyde Park Sunday morning he and his host have been together often, continuing more-or-less informal Anglo-Canadian discussions which, it is believed, have centered largely on the future role of the Dominion's Armed Forces, and particularly the army.

It was anticipated Rt. Hon. Anthony Eden, British Foreign Secretary, would arrive about the same time as the United States President. There have been rumors he will carry to Moscow, and perhaps Chungking, a report on the conference decisions. Neither Russia nor China is represented here.

No Ground For Misunderstanding Says Australian Paper

By J. E. HOLDSWORTH
Canadian Press Correspondent

Sydney, Australia, Aug. 17 —(CP Cable) — The Sunday telegraph yesterday displayed under a streamer headline, "Mayor of Quebec says he would not welcome Stalin," a dispatch from its special correspondent in Quebec, Godfrey Blunden.

The writer said: "here in Quebec they are calling the Chateau Frontenac where the Allied Chiefs of Staff are working 'the second Frontenac.' "

Blunden quoted French-Canadian Mayor Lucien Borne as declaring, "Stalin would not be welcome here as French-Canadians have no connection with atheistic Russia."

The Sydney Morning Herald Editorial, however, says there should not be any real misunderstanding of Russia's absence from the Churchill-Roosevelt conference. For Stalin or a representative to attend Allied conferences assembled to plan prosecution of the war in the Pacific as well as in Europe would surely be regarded in Tokyo as a breach of the Russo-Japanese treaty of neutrality, it said.

So obvious must this have seemed to the British and United States governments that their omission to send an invitation to Stalin to attend the conferences is as natural as Stalin's disinclination to seek it, the paper said.

Mayor Denies Reference

Quebec, Aug. 17 —(CP)— Mayor Lucien Borne of Quebec City, commenting on a dispatch in the Sydney, Australia, Sunday Telegraph, said today he had made "absolutely no reference" to the attitude of French Canadians to Stalin and the U. S. S. R.

The Sunday Telegraph, in a dispatch from Godfrey Blunden, its special correspondent in Quebec, quoted Mayor Borne as saying "Stalin would not be welcome here as French Canadians have no connection with atheistic Russia."

"To attribute that statement to me is completely false and untrue," the Mayor said today.

Asked if he would care to express his correct views on the question, Mayor Borne said that "international questions are out of my field; I do not wish to say anything."

Berlin Says All Troops Now Out of Sicily

London, Aug. 17 (CP)—The Berlin radio in a broadcast recorded by The Associated Press admitted today that all German and Italian troops have been withdrawn from Sicily.

The broadcast claimed the retreat from the island was carried out in the early hours today and that they reached the mainland of Italy with "their entire material and all supplies."

Maj.-Gen. Hube, whom the German broadcast described as the German commander in chief in Sicily, was one of the last to leave the island, the Berlin radio said.

The German announcement claimed the Axis withdrawal had been so successfully conducted that "now on the Italian mainland an army is ready to strike."

The Italian Tuesday communique broadcast by Rome and recorded by The Associated Press made no mention of the retreat across the Strait of Messina but it limited its announcement to "bitter" rear-guard actions fought yesterday.

Sinus and Migraine Headaches

Some years ago a write. in a popular magazine described his visit to ten physicians He told them he had a headache and he received ten different prescriptions. For some reason he thought this was a great joke on the physicians whereas the physicians likely felt that he had got into the wrong office he should have consulted a veterinary surgeon.

There are over a hundred causes of headache and unless the patient describes how and when the headace comes on, its exact location, the type of pain present, how long it lasts, it may take a thorough examination of eyes, ears, nose, throat, liver, gall bladder, and other organs, to find the cause. Dr. Harold Hays, New York City, in "Eye, Nose and Throat Monthly" answered the above magazine article in a humorous vein. In "Medical Times, Dr. Hays states that a severe headache may be a symptom caused by —1. Disturbances of stomach and intestine. 2.—Eyestrain. 3.—Inflammation of nose and adjoining sinuses. 4.—Migraine—one-sided headache. Headaches also are present in most acute and infectious diseases and may be a forerunner of infections and growths of the brain. It is a common symptom in anxiety states and emotional upsets.

One form of headache of which I speak frequently is migraine, one-sided headache, often accompanied by nausea and vomiting. The cause is still unknown but mental and physical fatigue apparently are partly to blame. The treatment for migraine as stated by Dr. Mary O'Sullivan some years ago is ergotamine tartrate—injections or as tablets under the tongue. I have also spoken of the work on migraine at the Mayo Clinic where Dr. Walter Alvarez reported relief by breathing in pure oxygen. Dr. Alvarez has found ergotamine tartrate Gynergen—effective in about 8 of every ten cases.

When the patient or physician is in doubt as to whether the severe headache is migraine or a severely infected sinus, Dr. Hayes makes the following suggestions.

1.—A sinus headache is usually on forehead or face 2.—Sinus headaches are steady and often can be relieved by giving a quieting drug. 3.—Migraine comes on suddenly. The patient may wake from a sound sleep in the morning with a severe migraine headache. Sinus headaches do not act that way. 4.—Migraine affects the whole head and the scalp is tender to the touch. 5.—Nausea and vomiting are often present with migraine. 6.—There is a definite throbbing of the head in migraine.

GIRL IN THE GREEN COAT

by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

CHAPTER 5

In the few minutes between the time I telephoned the office and the police arrived, we all began to realize that something more than the death of a very handsome young man had taken place while we slept. Somebody had killed him Perhaps, even one of us . . .

Strom, the furrier, who had been crouching, fascinated, at the dead man's side, suddenly seemed to realize what his wife was saying—"Him, dead here, and us asleep right upstairs!"

He grabbed her arm so hard that she cried out and then, terrified at the sound she made, she stuffed her little shawl into her mouth.

"Yes, we were asleep upstairs," he said, "but so were you, and you, and you!" His crooked forefinger pointed at us, one after the other. "We are all together, all of us guilty, all of us!"

Miss Martin, the stocky middle-aged spinster who kept a corset and lingerie shop on the same floor with the Stroms, giggled convulsively and somebody, I think it was Mr. McMurray, the voice teacher, said "Shut up!"

"You may be guilty, my hands are clean." Sam Utz said.

For a minute I thought Strom was going to hit him and I almost wished he had. Utz being one of my pet abominations, partly because I hate that smarty, forward type and partly because of the way he bullies his poor, pretty, young bride. But Strom, who is shrewd and sensible, even if he isn't the other tenants' idea of class, pulled himself together and ignoring Utz, began all over again.

"All right. I hope we are all innocent. I think so. Only in a few minutes now the police will come, and don't forget that we were all sleeping here, against the law. Now do we admit it or do we all try to lie and say we only come here in

"Come," Strom said, "It isn't a crime to sleep in a building at night. May be a misdemeanor, I don't know. But it does not matter when there is murder done. That matters alone. All I say is, let us agree and not some lie, and not all. I say let us all tell the truth. Yes, we were here. We were here but we heard nothing."

"Didn't you hear anything?' I asked.

"What did you hear?" Utz asked me quickly.

"I didn't hear anything!" I said sharply. "What did you hear?'

"Come now,' Mr. Strom said. soothingly. "Come now—"

Poor Madame Hurd, haggard without her make-up got in her last word. "I only meant that sometimes I stay at my sister's. I have twice. But last night I slept—here."

"How many?" Strom said. He looked around the group of us, pointing and moving his lips as he counted. Himself first, then his wife, then me, then the Utzes and Mrs. Hurd and Miss Martin and Mr. McMurry. "Eight of us.'

"And Peggy. Peggy Hudson, she is upstairs dressing now," I said.

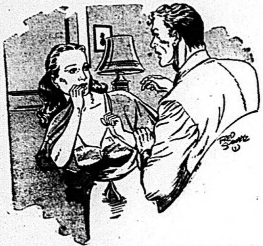
"Nine." Strom counted, and don't tell me not Fissel, too. He acts high-toned, but no, he sleeps and cooks too."

"Don't forget the pretty brunette, the one that paints waste baskets and tea-canisters and stuff," Utz grinned.

"You mean Miss Raymond," Miss Martin said, "not that I would describe her as particularly pretty."

"Naturally not," Utz said, enjoying himself, "you wouldn't. You certainly would not."

"But you would," I said, irritated into making a fool of myself and that pleased him even more. "You're telling me?" He rubbed his hands. ing Proust here."



He grabbed her arm so hard that she cried out the mornings?"

Utz' wife said, "You see, dear? He means we all look bad because we—we stay here!"

"You're telling me?' Mr. Utz inquired. He looked at her angrily. "Go and dress yourself! I am ashamed of you!' he bellowed.

We all looked at poor Mrs. Utz. She had a thin, flowered Japanese kimona, over a sleazy pink nightdress and her pretty, fair hair hung halfway down her back. I had not realized until then that only Mr. Strom and I were fully dressed. Everyone else was in some stage of dishabille. Utz himself had pulled an old pair of khaki trousers over his faded blue pajamas and looked far less presentable than his wife, to my notion at least.

Mrs. Hurd—Madame Hurd as she calls herself, said in a voice that began bravely and faltered as we all looked at her pityingly, "I never stay here at night—almost never. I nearly always stay with my sister out on Eighth Avenue. I did last night."

When he said "Proust, here," we all looked down at poor dead Gil again, and I began to come out of my daze and to realize that this—this dead man we were all looking at and speculating about — was really he. "That's GIL," I wanted to scream at them. "That's my friend —that's GIL."

There was the sound of a siren outside. The police sneaking up on the murderer, quietly. The little circle around the dead man widened and Mrs. Utz and one or two of the others drew away. I dashed upstairs to warn Peg and Emilie Raymond and get a pencil and paper, to be ready for anything the police might have to say.

I rapped on Emilie's door first, as her little workroom (she slept on a couch behind a screen) was on the fourth floor, right near the stairs. A sleepy voice mumbled something and I rapped again and shouted, "Emilie it's Mary Driscoll, upstairs! Let me in!"

She unlatched the door and stood staring stupidly, her large dark eyes puffy and heavy with sleep.

"Somebody killed a man in Jan Proust's studio last night. Mr. Strom found him, just a few minutes ago. The police are coming upstairs now!" I cried.

I started to run on upstairs to Peggy, but Emilie followed me, in her silk pajamas and bare feet. "What did you say?" she kept repeating. "What did you say?"

As long as she was coming too, I thought I might as well tell them both at the same time.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop wanted to walk off his Sunday dinner and I went with him to help him, and I said, G, pop, it's a beautiful day to be walking along, isn't it?

Spoken like poet and an athleet, pop said, and I said, The only way I could imagine it any better would be if I was walking along and eating an ice cream cone at the same time.

Yee gods, after all the chicken and trimmings you put away, how can you even think of ice cream cones the same 24 hours? pop said. Boyhood is surely a time of marvels and magic. Before meals, at meals, after meals and between meals, it doesn't seem to matter when, you can eat with a clear conscience, a dizzy abandon and an unimpaired digestion. I wont go so fas as to say I envy you, but I'm certainly struck with wonder, he said, and I said, Well jimminy, pop, do you think there's any limit to how much I can eat at my age, even on a full stummick?

I doubt it, pop said, and I said, Well G roozalem, pop, I mean gosh, it would be an interesting experiment to try it, I mean right now, wouldn't it pop?

I bet it would at that, it might result in scientific discoveries that would go down in the books, pop said, and I said, Oh boy, Man Mountain nut bars and Colossals and Peennut Paragons and pretzels and Extenso lickorish bars and every flavor of cream cones. Let's start the first store we come to, I said.

Hay, not so fast, pop said, I'd try it cheerfully if I could try it objectively, he said, and I said, Well how do you mean, pop?

A true scientist never works where his emotions are involved, pop said. That's why a surgeon never operates on the members of his own family. In other words I'd have to try it on somebody else's son, he said, and I said, Aw heck, good night, G.

Meaning he was making me miss a swell chance for a swell afternoon.

RUBBER CONTROL MUST BE STRICT

Control Official Says Conservation Must be Maintained.

Ottawa, Aug. 17—(CP)—The race between crude rubber supplies holding out and synthetic rubber coming into full production continues and every measure of rubber conservation must be maintained to the utmost, a Rubber Control Official said today.

"While it is expected that synthetic rubber production soon will be underway at the Polymer Corp., plant at Sarnia, Ont., the race cannot be won unless the existing restrictions are kept in force and further conservation, if possible, is secured," said the official.

He said the synthetic rubber production already was earmarked for war purposes and other essential needs. No relief for the ordinary civilian user in respect to rubber supplies is in sight.

Rubber Substitutes

The use of rubber is being reduced steadily as rubber control technical experts devise new formulae for substitutions. Such substitutions have resulted in the dwindling pile of crude rubber being preserved to a far greater extent than would have been possible when the control was instituted.

The transfer from the crude to synthetic rubber in the supply of war and other essential requirements is expected to be made without affecting the war effort, due to the quality of the synthetic product. The estimated production of the synthetic rubber plant is 41,000 tons a year.

(George W. Sawin, Kitchener, Ont., Rubber Executive, said in Winnipeg yesterday that Canada is facing the worst rubber crisis of the war, with stock piles of finished goods down to "a serious level" and with war requirements undiminished.)

Sicily Is Entering Wedge Driven Into Fortress of Europe

By RELMAN MORIN

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 17—(AP) — The wedge-shaped island of Sicily is the entering wedge driven into the fortress of Europe.

Tactically, the Mediterranean doors are wide open.

With the complete occupation of Sicily, which won't take many more hours, the Allies possess a big advance base from which they can hop over into the Italian mainland, nip off Sardinia and Corsica or immobilize Southern Italy while Greece is retaken.

The possibilities for the next move are virtually unlimited.

The Sicilian harbors of Palermo, Catania, Augusta and Syracuse are fully capable of accommodating the huge fleet necessary for another operation.

But that's one advantage in having Sicily—an accumulation of Allied shipping there wouldn't mean the main thrust was coming from there.

It might disguise an expedition moving out from Tunisia toward Corsica, Sardinia or even Southern France. Or it might mask one assembling in the Middle East and aimed at the Balkans. Allied possession of Sicily automatically redoubles the Axis problem of knowing where to commit their main forces on the shores of the Mediterranean.

Londoners Cheer Bomb Squadrons

London, Aug. 17, (CP cable)—Maybe one of the hundreds of pilots heading for northern Italy in the R.A.F. bomber armada last night has a girl friend in London—or maybe not.

But whatever the case, he was in fine fettle as he trundled his bombload over the city en route to the targets because watchers on the capital's roof tops and streets saw his plane flashing V-for-Victory dots and dashes as it crossed the city, bringing cheers from the onlookers.

UNCONFIRMED ROME STORY SAYS ALLIED INVASION FLEET SIGHTED OFF CATANIA

Ottawa, Aug. 17 —(CP)— Rome radio, in a broadcast picked up by the CBC listening post, today reported that a large Allied invasion fleet has been sighted off the port of Catania on the east coast of Sicily.

The invasion barges were said to be laden with troops and tanks.

The report was without Allied confirmation.

R.C.A.F. CALLS FOR MORE MEN

Recruiting Advertisement at Ottawa Appeals to Men Subject to Call Up

Ottawa, Aug. 17. (CP) — The R.C.A.F. needs men in larger numbers than have been forthcoming in order to keep the schools of the Commonwealth Air Training plan going at capacity, it was stated today at headquarters here.

The air force, however, has been given no priority in recruiting over the army or the navy, a spokesman said when asked for an interpretation of an R.C.A.F. recruiting advertisement in today's newspapers.

(The advertisement appealed to men aged 18 years and six months and married men between 27 and 30 who have just been made subject to compulsory military training to enlist in the R.C.A.F. before receiving their call and not to wait "until it is too late.")

"We have to get men and we are making the strongest possible appeal in order to get them", the official said.

Kiwanis Club Hears Reports From Chairmen

Tuesday's meeting of the Kiwanis Club of Belleville at the Hotel Quinte was wholly composed of reports from the various chairmen of committees and carnival games. Kiwanian Jack White called upon each games chairman to report and explain his game to the others. Kiwanian Ted Schwab, chairman of the "Miss War Worker" contest outlined the plans for the conducting of the contest, the preview of the contestants on Tuesday night and the final judging on Wednesday. The judges are "Dit" Clapper, Boston Bruins, Section Officer Bristol, R.C.A.F., (W.D.), Mountain View and Sqdn. Ldr. W. G. Cooke, No. 5 I.T.S.

The report from Kiwanian Aubrey Coe, chairman of the refreshment booth, cautioned members working in this booth against expecting their refreshments "on the house." He pointed out that the whole object of the carnival was to raise money for underprivileged children and the Kiwanis Clinic. Reports on the sale of hope chest tickets showed a favorable trend and a considerable sum will be realized for the worth-while charity it is intended for.

Front Street will be closed at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday and will be turned into a colorful carnival midway before 8 o'clock. A precision squad from R.C.A.F. Station, No. 5 I.T.S. will perform in the early part of the evening on Tuesday, the opening night. Wednesday will be the final of the "Miss War Worker" contest and Thursday will be the night for the drawing for the hope chest and sailing sloop. Each night of the carnival a Gruen wrist watch will be given away free.

The Kiwanis Club ask for the most generous display by attendance and participation in the games than any year before. They point to their objective as reason sufficient for full public support. Entertainment and pleasure are promised to all attending.

British Subs Sink 9 More Vessels In Italian Waters

London, Aug. 17—(CP)—The Admiralty announced tonight that British submarines operating in waters around Italy have sunk nine additional vessels, including a large transport.

The transport, a large three-funnelled ship, was intercepted east of Italy in the Adriatic, while bound for the Italian port of Brindisi, and sank three minutes after a torpedo hit her, the communique said.

A large supply ship was intercepted in the same area and also sunk by torpedo.

The seven other ships sunk were:

A minelayer driven ashore off Corsica and destroyed by torpedo.

Two large German transport barges and an escorting naval auxiliary vessel, sunk by gunfire from submarines, also off Corsica;

An armed Italian anti-submarine yacht, torpedoed in the Ligurian sea, north of Corsica;

An Italian naval trawler and a minesweeper, sunk by gunfire also in the Ligurian sea.

In addition, a medium-sized supply ship intercepted while outward bound from Durazzo, Albania, was damaged.

Four submarines participated in the actions.

'No News is Good News' Says Secretary Knox

Washington, Aug. 17. (AP)—Navy Secretary Frank Knox said today of the United States Navy's prolonged silence on operations against Kiska Island: "No news is good news".

There has been no announced action against Kiska since July 30. Knox was asked at his Press Conference why there should be such an absence of information about an island on which announcements previously had been almost daily. He first suggested bad weather as a cause.

Dressedweight: Barrie, $16.75 delivered; Hamilton, $16.75 delivered; London, $16.60 delivered; Stratford, $16.60 delivered; Brantford, $16.30 plus transportation; Hull, $16.30 plus transportation.

May Harvest Nearly 20 Million Pounds Sunflower, Rape Seed

Ottawa, Aug. 17—(CP)—Nearly 20,000,000 pounds of sunflower and rape seed—rich sources of vital vegetable oils—may be harvested in Canada this year, it was indicated today.

Two years ago these crops were practically unknown. Their development results from the shortage of vegetable oils in North America following the loss of normal sources of supply due to war in the Pacific area.

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics said that about 1,000 growers planted sunflower seed in Western Canada, while some 366 in the Prairie Provinces, Ontario and Quebec planted rape seed.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 17—(CP)—The Toronto Stock Market weakened for index losses of .11 to .45 in the early session, the industrials taking the widest setback. The trading action was a bit sluggish and turnover for the first three hours was 269,000 shares.

Dominion Foundries, Hamilton Bridge and Canadian Car were among the weak steel issues. Utilities and foods held fairly firm. Aluminum slipped off 1-2 to 108.

The gold stocks, including Buffalo-Ankerite, Kerr-Addison, Chesterville, Pioneer and Lake Shore, boarded losses and in the base metals Ventures, Sherritt, Steep Rock and Ontario Nickel eased slightly.

British-Dominion and Vermilata posted minor losses in the Western oil list.

WALL STREET

New York, Aug. 17 (AP)—Rails and assorted industrials provided stimulus for another modest recovery jog in today's stock market. While declines were plentiful, gains of fractions to a point or more predominated near the fourth hour.

The conquest of Sicily again buoyed victory psychology to some extent but there was a notable reluctance to extend commitments unduly in peace stocks because of expectations big international events were in the offing.

Lower in the Canadian section were Lake Shore and Dome. Canadian Pacific and McIntyre were firm.

Prominent on the upside besides railroads, were Chrysler, Standard Oil (NJ), General Motors, U. S. Rubber, Dow Chemical, United Gas and Du Pont.

"Miss War Worker" Contestants

AILEEN WRIGHT

Reliance

NORMA WOOD

Belleville Sargent

DORIS REID

Reliance

AILEEN WRIGHT, 25 Victoria Ave., is one of the Reliance Aircraft's most versatile war workers. Some of her many accomplishments in the essential work field are bomb-door assembling and riveting, air gun riveting on aircraft and drill press work. Aileen is both an interested and willing worker and her foreman is kept busy arranging sufficient work ahead for her.

In addition to this war work talent, Aileen is an outstanding baseball player. She is one of the stars of the Reliance team, playing right field.

Aileen has been with the Reliance for a year now and prior to that she worked for the Bata Shoe Company for two-and-a-half years. Her plans for after the war are to keep house for her husband who is a railroad employee. She says that she doesn't keep house for him now because he gets off work before she does . . . "He keeps house for me," she said. Her comments about the girls with whom she works were high praise and she says she prefers to work with a group rather than alone.

NORMA WOOD, 18 Charlotte Street, has been with Belleville Sargent Ltd., for two years. Her work consists of assembling locks. This isn't a very exciting job, but Norma likes it and that is the important thing. The locks she assembles are part of the company's marine hardware contract, locks for doors and chests and other parts of destroyers, corvettes and victory ships.

Before coming to Belleville Sargent Norma worked in Niagara Falls, Ontario. There are no end to the things which could be said in Norma's favor; she is pleasant, co-operative, efficient, dependable, and above all, insofar as the "Miss War Worker" contest is concerned, pretty. When told that things were going to be said about her, Norma said that too many people knew her to believe them. There are several people who do know Norma and who concur in these opinions . . . her employers.

Norma wishes to continue to work when the war is over. This is a commendable attitude, but some young man may alter it sooner than she suspects.

DORIS REID, 25 Grier St., who has just returned from her summer vacation, has returned to her job at the Reliance Aircraft Co., Ltd:, where she works in the plating department. Her work consists of preparing the materials to be plated before they are put into the plating tank. She says she likes her work and also the girls with whom she works.

"Sometimes women don't get along when they have to spend so much time in each other's company," said Doris, "but we all get along just swell; they are a fine bunch of girls, but then, nearly everyone at Reliance is nice to know."

Before entering the employ of Reliance Aircraft, Doris worked for Bristol Aircraft for 10 months and liked it there also. She says she has not made any plans for after the war, but someone may change her mind before the end comes.

Doris played baseball for the Reliance team at the opening of the season, but an operation took her out of the game and she has not gone back since.

45-Pound 'Lunge Hooked by 'Babe' Casey in Trent R.

While fishing in the Trent River near Chisholm's Rapids yesterday, Guy "Babe" Casey, of this city, caught a 45-pound Maskinonge. This is the largest 'lunge reported caught in district waters thus far this season. Mr. and Mrs. Casey and their children are camping at Glen Ross. On Monday Jack Casey, Guy's other brother, joined the outing and the two brothers went fishing. Besides the 45-pound 'lunge the Casey boys also caught five large pickerel, the smallest being in the neighborhood of four pounds while a splendid catch of black bass were also made.

Intoxicated Woman Beats Up Her Husband To Crowd's Enjoyment

Belleville's early-evening downtown crowd was treated to a little extra excitement opposite the City Hall building last night when a man and his wife brought their family troubles into being right on the main street. The pair actually engaged in fisticuffs as they continued their family quarrels right in the heart of the community before police had to "break it up" and place the squabbling couple in the confines of the local bastile to "cool off."

A goodly crowd gathered to watch the proceedings during which verbal wise-cracks were naturally featured. "Sign 'em up for a bout at the arena," cracked one youth. "Let him up, he's all cut," piped up a modern young girl. "Ain't married life grand?" cracked another cynical, as the woman finally gained the upper hand in a free-swinging scrap that ultimately saw the fair sex no longer the weaker as "The Missus" gained a popular decision over her spouse before police finally arrived to "break it up."

However, the most hilarity came when the lads in blue attempted to place the pair of inebriates in custody. "Oh, no you don't, screamed the woman as she was literally carried across the market square battling at every step attempting to resist arrest. Finally the man and woman were lodged in the cell blocks on charges of intoxication and disturbing the peace. Today in police court the pair were assessed ten dollars and costs each after readily pleading guilty to a charge of intoxication.

LIKES WALKING BACKWARDS

San Francisco, Aug. 17 —(AP)— Police Inspector George Page stopped a pedestrian and asked him why he was walking backward. "Because I like to read the expression on the faces of the people who are following me," replied an obviously sober man. The officer shook his head and walked off. So did the man—backwards.

Will Serve 10 Days Then Be Turned Over to the U.S.

Remaining aloof as to his identity James E. Alewaine, who contended he was an escaped German prisoner of war, was today sentenced to serve ten days in the jail after pleading guilty to a charge of common vagrancy.

"Will I be released at the expiration of my sentence?" was the only comment the mysterious youth made.

"You will be released to the custody of the United States Immigration authdrities", replied Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C.

Alewaine was arrested in Belleville on August 6th following, which he contended he was an escaped Nazi war prisoner who had been shot down over England during the 1941 German blitz. However, Belleville police soon discredited these stories, but failed to ascertain exactly who the youth really is and where he comes from, despite the fact he now insists he was born in Georgia.

Deputy Chief Arthur Harman today told Magistrate J. L. Lloyd there were no fingerprint records of Alewaine in the R.C.M.P. files at Ottawa. No reply from fingerprints sent to the F.B.I. at Washington, has been received.

"However, we feel this man is an American citizen allright and we have been in communication with the Immigration officials at Ottawa. Our instructions are to notify the U.S.A. immigration authorities exactly, when Alewaine will be released from custody and they will escort him to the American border and turn him over to the immigration officials at the nearest point of entry to the United States", explained Deputy Chief Harman. The ten day sentence followed.

Kiwanis Carnival Ready to Open

All is in readiness for the Kiwanis Carnival, which will open tonight and continue until late Thursday night and during that time something will be doing every minute. Jack White, general chairman of the carnival committee and the members have been working for weeks to arrange a varied program, that would appeal to all classes of citizens. The money raised by the carnival will be used exclusively to carry out the welfare work of the Kiwanis Club. Although the Club has concerted its effort on winning the war yet the welfare of the boys and girls has not been overlooked in the broad policy of the organization.

There will be games galore for all those so minded, bingo, being the most prominent and there will be special draws each night and a two grand drawings on the final evening. The club is donating a Gruen wrist watch as the special draw for each evening of the carnival, while on the final night draws will be made for the Hope Chest, sponsored by the Kiwanis Queens and the Model sailboat, that has been so kindly donated by residents interested in the work of the club.

The main attraction will be the Miss War Worker contest, that will

All events of the carnival will take place on Front Street between Bridge St. and Campbell Street and the public is invited to enjoy the fun and merriment for the coming three days

The judges will be picked from the officers of the various Air Stations in the district and "Dit" Clapper, captain and assistant coach of the Boston Bruins. The carnival will be opened with a program by the Belleville Municipal Band and a precision squad from No. 5 I. T. S. by kind permission of Wing Commander A. J. Snetsinger, will give a demonstration before the carnival is officially opened.

POLICE COURT

As a sequel to a brawl in a local restaurant last week, Thomas Rigby, of Toronto, paid a fine of $25 and costs after pleading guilty to assaulting George Lampros, cafe employee, and striking him in the face with his fist. Rigby did not appear in city police court today, having paid the assault fine, and also a drunk fine of $13 prior to the opening of the proceedings before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd today. Following the original assault attack last week it was alleged by Mr. Lampros that Rigby had slashed him in the face with a drawn knife during the scuffle.

Today Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., informed His Worship that Mr. Lampros, who had been the complainant in the case, was quite satisfied with the above charge and disposition out of court.

Many Minor Cases

Nine inebriates, including one woman, paid drunk fines of $13 each, while Norman Sabins and Nick Tomaso, both of this city, were fined $2 each upon being convicted of failing to observe city stop street signs. Failure to procure their 1943 city dog licence tags cost Arthur Soalt and Irene Hubbs, both this city, $2 each.

7 Days for Drunken Driving

Solomon Brant, Tyendinaga, pleaded guilty to a charge of drunken driving and the mandatory seven-day sentence followed. "He drove his truck right up to the police station where we arrested him Saturday afternoon," commented Deputy Chief Harman when asked about the seriousness of the crime by Mr. Donnan.

Held for Indecent Assault

He has a younger brother, Ronald, who went overseas at the same time and who is serving with the Cameron Highlanders, of Ottawa. His mother and father are living in this city and he has four sisters, Mrs. E. Crowder and Mrs. R. Gannon, also of this city, Mrs. Crowder's husband being overseas and Mrs. Gannon's husband serving on the West Coast. Two other sisters, Betty and Joan are at home. One brother Peter, is also at home.

AXIS CASUALTIES 167,000, ALLIED 25,000

Eisenhower Says Well Over 30,000 Germans Lost

502 Enemy Guns, 1,491 Planes and 260 Tanks Taken Or Destroyed

LIGHT ALLIED LOSSES

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 18—(CP)—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Allied Commander-in-Chief, today estimated Allied casualties for the entire Sicilian campaign at 25,000 men.

At the same time the commander in chief announced that Axis losses in the campaign, up to Aug. 10, totalled 167,000 killed, wounded and prisoners.

Gen. Eisenhower did not break down the Allied casualties among the British, Canadian and American forces engaged. At least 10 divisions, four British, one Canadian and five Americans, have been disclosed as fighting in Sicily during the 38-day campaign.

Many Enemy Drowned

The commander-in-chief said German losses while crossing the Strait of Messina would probably never be known.

He estimated that the Nazi commanders had between 70,000 and 75,000 troops on the island, of which at least 30,000 were lost, not counting the number drowned in the evacuation.

The enemy's losses in tanks destroyed or captured up to Aug. 10 was given as 260.

The general's report said at least 502 enemy guns were destroyed or captured up to Aug. 10.

Axis plane losses were more than six times the Allied losses, being 1,491 for the Axis to 247 for the Allies from July 1 to Aug. 17.

The general said in a prepared statement marking the end of the battle of Sicily:

"The enemy's proud boast he would drive the Allied forces into the sea wherever he met them in Europe seems to be as empty as the promise to the German people that not one bomb would fall on their cities.

"The Allied armies have twice within the last few months inflicted severe defeats on the so-called "invincible" German army, in each case at very small cost to themselves.

"The Sicilian campaign is standing testimony to the supremacy of the Allied navies in this area of the Mediterranean, to the Allied air supremacy and to the determination of the Allied land forces to engage and defeat the enemy wherever they may encounter him.

Proud of Troops

"Our troops have done everything the best troops in the world could have done.

"As an American I take just as much pride in the British 8th Army as any Briton.

"Now we've brought up an American army that is a worthy partner of the 8th Army."

Gen. Sir Harold Alexander, he pointed out, now has a powerful one-two punch — the ability to swing two real armies as he sees fit.

"Both armies are ready to go at any minute," he added. "We can count on them with complete confidence."

Hints at New Blows

He hinted at new blows by stating that the British 8th and American 7th armies are "ready to go at any minute."

The Allied commander-in-chief said that of Axis casualties, not less than 32,000 were killed or wounded and the rest made prisoners.

Tea and Coffee Rations Increased One-Third Sept. 2

Ottawa, Aug. 18. (CP)—Canada's tea and coffee rations will be increased by one-third effective Sept. 2, the Price Board announced today with the added promise that a further increase will be made before the year-end if shipping conditions continue to enlarge the Dominion's supplies of those commodities.

Ottawa, Aug. 18. (CP) — The Prices Board announced today that Canada's tea and coffee rations will be increased by one third Sept. 2.

The announcement said the rations would be further increased "at any time when the supply position permits and it is felt that if ocean shipping conditions continue to enlarge the supply, another increase in this ration will be made before the end of the year".

Present rations are one ounce of tea and four ounces of coffee weekly per person. An increase by one-third would mean 1 1-3 ounces of tea and 5 1-3 ounces of coffee weekly per person after Sept. 2.

2 Coupons Valid Every Week

The increase becomes effective with the use of tea and coffee coupons from the new ration book being distributed next week.

There will be no change in the present value of these coupons, each being worth two ounces of tea or eight ounces of coffee, but the increase will be accomplished by having two coupons become valid every three weeks instead of every four weeks, as at present.

Tea and coffee coupons in ration book No. 3 will not show the valid dates, but these dates will be announced from time to time by the Board. The first coupons of the new book become due on Sept. 2.

Commenting on the announcement, R. T. Mohan, administrator of tea, coffee and spices for the Board, said, "this increase in the tea and coffee ration has been made possible by an assured improvement of our stock position as regards tea and coffee".

The Prices Board action followed by a few weeks the disappearance of coffee rationing in the United States because of an improved supply position in that country.

Tea and coffee rationing was made effective Aug. 3, 1942, with the objectives of "equitable distribution and prudent conservation of existing supplies", in the Board's words.

3-YOLK EGGS

Galt, Ont., Aug. 18—(CP)—Three yolks in one egg was said to be a rare feat, in fact a Toronto eggs dealer said such an egg was one in 100,000,000 when Mrs. S. Kerrmerman of Toronto discovered a three-yolk egg last week. But the hens on Radford Brown's farm near here don't seem to believe in figures. Mrs. Ira Hammond has received two eggs from the Brown farm, each containing three yolks.

OLDEST VOLUNTEER

Brantford, Ont., Aug. 18—(CP)—John W. Patte, 91, is believed to be the oldest volunteer to offer his services in the distribution of the new food rations books. "I can't march, but I'm sure I can write all day," he told City Clerk E. J. Campbell, Ration Board Secretary. So. Mr. Patte will be on hand to fill out the new books for Brantford citizens. In 1940, Mr. Patte was a volunteer worker in connection with National Registration.

Say Raids on French Airfields Seen by Nazis As Invasion Prelude

Stockholm, Aug. 18. (CP)—Germans view the heavy assaults on French air fields by great fleets of Allied aircraft as a prelude to the invasion of France, Berlin dispatches reported today.

While the R.A.F. continued its mighty aerial offensive against Germany, the Nazis were reported watching with mounting concern not only the raids on air fields but the tightening circle of heavy attacks in daylight against the heart of Germany herself.

The Berlin correspondent of Sevenska Dagbladet said that the Germans know the blows against air fields in the vicinity of Marseille yesterday and on the north coast of France the previous day "must be connected with higher military strategy dealing with the start of another European front".

American daylight bombings were reported prompting Axis satellite Hungary to prepare to declare Budapest an Open City.

Many Germans Shocked

Dispatches from the German capital also reported that the announcement that Nazi troops had ceased fighting and had been withdrawn from Sicily came as a shock to many Germans.

Berlin military commentators, however, described the withdrawal across the Strait of Messina as a "strategic masterpiece".

From Swedish correspondents in Italy, meanwhile, came word of clashes between German and Italian troops and cryptic messages that important political moves are impending.

"There are a couple of things happening which I can not mention", the Dagens Nyheter Rome correspondent said, "Keep your eyes open".

Allied Air Offensive Against Germany Hits New Peak

DREW'S CABINET GOES TO WORK AS SOON AS SWORN

Will Soon Appoint A Committee to Consider Matters in Mines Department

TO ADJUST TAXES

Toronto, Aug. 18 —(CP)— Ten new faces appeared around the cabinet council table at Queen's Park today as Premier George Drew's Progressive Conservative ministry held its first meeting—three months to the day after Harry Nixon, whose Liberal government was defeated in the Aug. 4th election, took office.

No announcements were expected after today's meeting, described by Col. Drew as merely a get together so the new ministers, sworn in before Lieutenant-Governor Albert Matthews yesterday, could meet their deputies. First business session will be held next week.

An early announcement is expected, however, of appointment of a committee to consider administration of the mines department. Col. Drew made this clear yesterday after the swearing-in when he disclosed that placing the mines department under Provincial Treasurer Leslie Frost was only temporary pending an adjustment of the present system of mines taxation.

The ministers assembled in a cabinet room that has not seen Conservative occupants since July, 1934, when the Liberals under Mitchell Hepburn toook over from the defeated Conservative government of George S. Henry. Mr. Hepburn's government was re-elected in 1937 but the Premier resigned last Oct. 21 in favor of his attorney-general, Gordon Conant. A Liberal convention April 30 chose Mr. Nixon party leader after Mr. Conant withdrew from the race on his doctor's orders.

Present Ministry

The present ministry is as follows (with constituencies bracketed):

Prime Minister, President of the Council and Minister of Education — Col. Drew. (Toronto High Park.)

Minister of Agriculture — T. L. Kennedy. (Peel.)

Provincial Treasurer and Minister of Mines — Leslie M. Frost. (Victoria.)

Attorney-General—Leslie Blackwell. (Toronto Eglinton.)

PRES. ROOSEVELT TO VISIT OTTAWA

Members of Both Houses May be Invited to Assemble to Hear Address

Quebec, Aug. 18. —(CP)—President Roosevelt today announced that he has accepted Prime Minister Mackenize King's long-standing invitation to visit Ottawa, probably early next week.

The announcement was made at a press conference by Stephen Early, the President's Press Secretary.

There were no details but it is understood the President intends to remain only one day in the Canadian Capital.

M. R. K. Burge, spokesman at the conference for the British Ministry of Information, said there was no intimation that Prime Minister Winston Churchill, here conferring with President Roosevelt, would also visit Ottawa.

It will be the President's first visit to Ottawa.

Parliament is not now in session at Ottawa, having adjourned last July 24, until late in January, but it is expected members of both Houses may be invited to assemble so members of both Houses may hear an address from the President.

When Prime Minister Churchill visited Ottawa in December, 1941, Parliament stood adjourned but its members were invited to return—and many of them did—to hear a speech delivered in the House of Commons by the British Prime Minister.

An Ottawa visit by the President has been anticipated for some time. On several occasions after he was in Washington Mr. King has said Mr. Roosevelt intended to go to the Canadian capital.

Churchill and Roosevelt Open Sixth War Council After Preliminary Talks

By C. R. BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Quebec, Aug. 18 —(CP)— The sixth war conference between Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt was in full swing today, but it actually began—the Quebec part of it—late Tuesday evening.

A spokesman for the President revealed at this morning's press conference that the two leaders sat up long past midnight in close conversation.

It was not known the spokesman said, whether or not Prime Minister Mackenzie King, their host in the citadel vice-regal residence, had been with them.

Steve Early, press secretary to the President, said his chief had started conferences at the citadel with some of his advisers about nine a.m. but he would not say which advisers had been called in.

At noon the President, Mr. Churchill and Mr. King were invited to lunch with the Governor General who, it was stated, had postponed his intended departure for Ottawa late last night.

His Excellency and party remained in residence on their private train but the luncheon was served in the citadel.

Mr. Early said all the President's conferences would take place in the citadel residence.

He was asked if it was to be expected that there would be a joint press conference with the President and British Prime Minister.

May Be Press Conference

"I do not know that precedent will be changed," Mr. Early replied. "I have never known the President to meet the Prime Minister and not have a press conference.

"I rather think there will be one."

Most interesting for the Canadians at the press conference was the announcement of Mr. Early that President Roosevelt had accepted Mr. King's long standing invitation to visit Ottawa, and likely would go there early next week. The announcement was taken as an indication that the conference here would conclude during the weekend.

Tonight Mr. King will be host to about 50 of the high conference officials at a dinner in the citadel.

Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill at their conference here were aided by the greatest assembly of military and political experts ever gathered in one place as they went into conference to plan for what may prove to be decisive attacks upon Axis strongholds.

The President arrived in Quebec late Tuesday afternoon by special train from Washington. He was given a warm reception by thousands who witnessed his passage through the city, and a formal salute in the citadel by a composite guard of honor from the Royal Canadian Navy, British Royal Marines, the Canadian Army and R.C.A.F.

His arrival was all that was needed to make the conference complete and events are expected to follow in swift order, with a possible conclusion of the conference within a week.

Nothing Much Divulged

Which of their decisions will be made known to the public is not known; but it is believed plans which have no immediate strategic purpose may be divulged— like terms to capitulating belligerents,

MOST HUMILIATING DEFEAT HANDED JAP AIRFORCE

225 Planes Caught on the Ground and 120 Craft Destroyed

SURPRISE COMPLETE

By C. YATES McDANIEL
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters the Southwest Pacific, Aug. 18. (AP)—The Japanese airforce was dealt its most humiliating defeat of the war Tuesday at Wewak, New Guinea, where 225 of its planes were caught on the ground by Allied bombers, 120 destroyed, 50 severely damaged and an estimated 1,500 air personnel killed.

Out of some 200 planes in the raiding party, three were lost.

This staggering blow, virtually stripping the enemy of his air strength in Central New Guinea, was dealt by 10,000 bombs dropped from heavy and medium bombers.

The surprise was complete and devastating.

Allied reconnaissance planes had detected the Japanese massing the greatest force of planes they ever had assembled in the Wewak area. Obviously, the enemy intended to make some surprise move in support of Japanese jungle troops now falling back slowly before Australians and Americans near Salamaua, Japanese air base 350 miles down the New Guinea coast from Wewak.

The surprise worked the other way.

C.C.F. Elected In By-Election

The Pas, Man., Aug. 18. (CP) — Electors of the far-flung northern constituency of The Pas yesterday elected 29-year-old Beresford F. Richards, C.C.F., to the Manitoba Legislature, succeeding John Bracken, former Liberal-Progressive Premier, who represented the riding for more than 20 years.

The Pas, which gave Mr. Bracken, now national leader of the Progressive Conservative Party, an acclamation in 1941 after he formed the provincial coalition administration, swung to the C.C.F. opposition in the by-election at almost every poll.

Mr. Bracken resigned the seat shortly after accepting the Progressive Conservative leadership last December.

RED STAR REPEATS RUSSIAN CALL FOR SECOND FRONT

Says It Alone Can Cut Down Length of War to Considerable Extent

BATTLE OF SICILY

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Aug. 18 —(AP)— The Russian army newspaper Red Star, commenting on the Churchill-Roosevelt conference at Quebec, said today that the Allies had failed to take advantage of the opportunity afforded by the Soviet summer offensive to strike Germany from the west, and repeated the call for a second front.

"Only such an operation can cut down the length of the war to any considerable extent," the newspaper said.

The Germans revised their strategic plans since their defeat in the battle for Kursk, it continued, and decided in a special assembly of military and political leaders at Hitler's hearquarters to resort to a stubborn defence effort to prolong the war and "delay the imminent catastrophe."

Red Star said the battles at Kursk and Orel "proved the superiority of Russian troops over Germans both on the offensive and defensive."

No Diversion by Sicily

The newspaper said, "The Allied Command carried out a well-prepared landing operation in Sicily," but added:

"The struggle for Sicily, however, failed to divert a single German division from the Soviet-German front. The German military observer, Capt. Ludwig Sertorius, said a few days ago that not a single plane had been shifted to Sicily from the Soviet-German front. Consesuently all the possibilities opened by the victorious offensive of the Red army have not been used so far for strong blows on Germany from the west."

950-Pound Safe Carried 3 Miles for 39 Cents

Unionville, Ont., Aug. 18.—(CP)—Ontario Provincial Police said today thieves broke into the Canadian National Railways Station here yesterday and carried a 950-pound safe three miles to find it contained only 39 cents.

The Stivers Grain Elevator Office also was entered, police said, nothing was reported stolen.

RUSSIAN LINES HOLD FIRM ON KHARKOV FRONT

Fourth Battle For City Becomes Tug-Of-War for the Initiative

15 MILES FROM BRYANSK

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, Aug. 18 —(AP)— The German command has mounted powerful counter-attacks with troops, tanks and planes at two points on the Kharkov front, but Russian lines held firm, battlefront despatches reported today.

Seeking an opening for a counter-offensive, the Germans struck at a settlement west of Kharkov held by the Red Army, and along the water line where the Russians maintained a bridgehead on the west bank, the dispatches said.

The fourth battle for Kharkov—which has been taken once by the Red Army and twice by the Germans—became a tug-of-war for the initiative.

Two other Russian drives in the Bryansk and Spas Demensk sectors to the north also met tougher going.

Soviets Attack in Many Sectors

(German broadcasts declared the Soviets were attacking all along the winding battlefront, staging new attacks in the Izyum area in the Donets Basin southwest of Kharkov, and local assaults near Staraya Russ and the Neva sector near Leningrad on the northern front. Russian attacks near Izyum were broken after heavy fighting, Berlin claimed.)

Battle reports from the Kharkov sector said the Red Army—which had forged a ring around the Ukrainian City from three sides—had repulsed the Nazi counter-attacks and improved its own positions at some points.

The Germans were reported to have adopted new tactics, shifting the direction of the counter-blows frequently, probing for soft spots in the Russian lines. This indicated they were preparing to go over from the defensive to a full-fledged counter-offensive if they could find an opening.

Within 15 miles of Bryansk

Pushed back within 15 miles of the Central front bastion of Bryansk, the Germans likewise were using reserves of tanks and planes in stubborn defence there.

(A BBC broadcast heard by CBS said the Red Army was within 12 miles of Bryansk.)

Red Star said Russian units attacking Bryansk west of Karachev and southwest of Zhizdra encountered almost impassable forests and swamps where the enemy employed every natural obstacle.

The Russians nevertheless crossed rivers, the dispatch said, and the Germans retreated, destroying forests and paths behind them.

The Germans used both natural and perpared defence lines in the Spas Demensk sector.

Red Star said that a violent battle raged in the forest where Germans counter-attacked heavily, but that the Russians improved their positions considerably. There was no indication of any important advance.

Front reports said more than 10,000 Germans had been killed in the Bryansk and Kharkov offensives.

HALIFAX HOUSES SCARCE

Halifax, Aug. 18 (CP)—Houses are certainly hard to get in Halifax. Sgt. Peter Ryan of the city police force brought eviction proceedings against William Davis yesterday. He said he had evicted Davis from a house owned by himself several months ago after receiving authority from the courts, but Davis broke into the building and took up residence again. Magistrate R. E. Inglis gave Davis two weeks to vacate the property.

HUGE COAL PRODUCTION

New York, Aug. 18 (AP)—West Virginia operators said today the bituminous coal industry in the United States was "fully geared" to meet the 1943 Great Lakes area requirement of 50,000,000 tons of soft coal before freezing weather halts inland waterway shipping.

Peenemuende And Berlin Attacked By Strong Forces

American Raiders Inaugurate Daylight Britain-to-Africa Shuttle Bombing

41 BOMBERS LOST

By ALAN RANDAL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 18 —(CP Cable)—R. A. F. and R. C. A. F. heavy bombers made a strong attack on the German research and development establishment of Peenemuende, 60 miles north of Stettin, last night, while Mosquito raiders attacked objectives in Berlin

Announcements by the air ministry and headquarters of the R. C. A. F. said the attack was heavy and well concentrated. The R. C. A. F. statement disclosed for the first time that there is at least one Canadian squadron now using the Lancaster bomber, Britain's slugging heavyweight.

In all, six squadrons of R. C. A. F. planes were in the raid, and 13 Canadian bombers are missing. These were included in the total night's losses of 41 bombers and one fighter.

The attack on the largest and most important establishment of its kind in Germany was carried out in moonlight almost as bright as day.

Intruder Attacks

In addition to the attacks on Peenemuende and Berlin, there were intruder attacks on northwest Germany, France and the low countries by fighter squadrons.

The R. C. A. F. announcement of Lancasters in the Canadian bomber group gave no details, but as more and more of these huge four-engined bombers become available they are being turned over to squadrons which are prepared to fly the heaviest bomber in Britain's arsenal. Some squadrons of the Canadian group have been flying Halifaxes for some time, and others have been using Wellingtons.

The night raids followed widespread daylight assaults by American heavy bombers which battered two important aircraft factories deep in Germany yesterday, inaugurating daylight Britain-to-Africa shuttle bombing.

It was the first attack on Peenemuende, which is on Germany's Baltic coast opposite Ruegen Island and about 25 miles northwest of Swinemuende.

The Peenemuende plant is the centre of the highest type work in developing aircraft, radio-location and armament.

The attack was in the closely coordinated pattern of the Allied air offensive which took American four-engined bombers to other vital factories at Schweinfurst and Regensburg yesterday.

For almost a week the R.A.F. front line bomber fleet from British bases had been concentrating on northern Italian cities. The last big attack on Germany was the raid on Nuremberg the night of August 10.

The stab at Berlin by swift Mosquito bombers was the third in four nights. They also struck Berlin Saturday and Sunday nights, keeping the German capital's nerves on edge.

The Communique

"Last night, the aircraft bomber command made a heavy attack in bright moonlight on the research and development establishment at Peenemuende, 60 miles northwest of Stettin.

"The establishment is the largest and most important of its kind in Germany.

"First reports indicate the attack was well concentrated.

"A great number of enemy aircraft was encountered along the route. Several of these were destroyed.

"Mosquitos bombed objectives in Berlin.

"Fighter command intruders carried out many attacks on airfield and railway targets in France, the low countries and northwest Germany.

"Four enemy aircraft were destroyed. Forty-one of our bombers and one fighter are missing".

Air Offensive Continued

Many squadrons of R.A.F. fighters crossed the Strait of Dover in daylight today to continue the furious Allied air assault on the continent.

An estimated 50 German raiders made widely-scattered attacks on Britain during the night, causing casualties and damage in East Anglia and other parts of eastern and southeastern England.

Ten of the raiders were shot down—seven of them over Britain and three near their European bases. More than half of the attacking planes were long-range bombers and the remainder fighter-bombers.

No attempt was made to concentrate any appreciable number of bombers on any one target. Instead they scattered widely in an apparent effort to suggest greater strength. The targets were not identified here but the German radio said the invading fliers focused on Lincoln.

The daylight assaults by the American bombers yeterday, carried out on the first anniversary of the 8th Air Force's advent in this combat theatre, represented a spectacular aerial thrust.

Borrowing the shuttle technique originated by R.A.F. night raiders, the American heavy bombers flew to Regensburg in the southeastern corner of Germany near Munich, dropped their bomb loads on the Nazi's second largest Messerschmitt factory and continued on to bases in North Africa to complete a 1,500-mile flight.

Others fought through the stiffest fighter opposition in weeks to blast at the 72-acre ball bearing plant at Schweinfurt, near Frankfurt.

Simultaneously R.A.F. fighter-bombers and United States aircraft attacked German air bases in Northern France, Belgium and Holland.

Messina, Once Beautiful City, Now Just Heap of Rubbish and Masonry

By DON WHITEHEAD
(Associated Press War Correspondent)

Messina, Sicily, Aug. 18—(AP)—A soldier leaned his rifle against a wall, unhooked his pack from tired shoulders, and stepped into the street to take a look at Messina's bomb-wrecked buildings.

"Well," he said with finality, "that's all there is, there ain't no more."

When the first patrols came down from the mountains to occupy the enemy's last stronghold on the island, only a few stray shots from snipers opposed them, in contrast to the bitter fighting a few days earlier. There was no elation or hilarity apparent over the historic entry into Messina. The troops just walked in, looked around and sat in the shade to catch up on sleep or eat their tinned rations.

They found the port city, with a normal peacetime population of 125,000, virtually deserted and smashed to piles of debris under the pounding of the Allied Air Force hitting at the important Messina-to-Italy ferry lines.

In all Sicily there was no city wrecked as thoroughly and efficiently as Messina. Once it must have been a beautiful place. Its wide streets, tree-shaded boulevards and modern buildings—now torn and tattered by the heavy aerial bombardments—reflected prosperity and civil well-being.

The worst battered parts of the city were the railroad and dock areas, reduced to scrambled heaps of rubbish, twisted steel and pulverized masonry.

"It's funny," one officer said, "after we get Messina, we don't know what in hell to do with it."

MONEY BEING STOLEN FROM MILK BOTTLES

Residents on George Street complained to police today that money was being stolen from milk bottles left for payment of milk to be delivered. It is some considerable time since such complaints have been received by police and it is difficult to cope with such pilferings as it is believed the work of juveniles operating in the early morning hours.

Kiwanis Karnival Opens With Good Crowd Attending

Despite threatening skies and cooling breeze, urban and rural dwellers turned out in force at the opening night of the Kiwanis Carnival sponsored by Belleville Kiwanians to raise sufficient funds to carry on the many war and welfare projects undertaken by this organization. The many games including bingo, darts and special drawings were given a "good play" by the gathering and members of the general committee were loud in their praise of the fine co-operation of the citizens.

The Karnival, which is being held on Front St., was opened by a presecision squad from No. 5 I. T. S., who went through the drill manual without an order being given and they were almost perfect in their movements. The Belleville Municipal band under Lt. Fred Jobson gave a brief open air concert, while the crowd was arriving and also played the squad on and off the drill ground. On the stage erected at the corner of Campbell and Front Streets, a preview of the Miss War Worker contest was held when the contestants passed in review before a most critical and enthusiastic audience for each industry, that had representatives in the contest gave vocal and verbal encouragement. The judging of this contest will be the feature of Wednesday's night's show.

Bingo Games Popular

As usual the bingo games were given the greatest play and Jack McIntosh, who has had charge of these games for some years was one of the busiest men on the grounds and the result of his and his committee's effort the club realized a fine sum for their community work. The special draw for the Gruen wrist watch, this company making a special price to the club for the time pieces was won by Mrs. Dick Philips of this city. The Hope Chest booth, conducted by the Kiwanis Queens and in charge of Mrs. Bruce Lattimer, wife of the president did a rushing business and the draw for this Chest and contents will be made on the closing night. The Karnival will continue tonight and Thursday with special features for each evening.

PO. Gainsforth Wins Radio By Skill at Darts

Crowds of Belleville citizens turned out for the first night of the Kiwanis Street Karnival seeking fun and fortune and many were the happy ones who returned to their homes with their arms laden with prizes won on one or more of the great variety of wheels of chance and bingo tables. Today dozens of homes are graced with newly added cushions, attractive foot-stools and articles of kitchenware, but the happiest and most profitable winners of the night was PO. R. F. Gainforth and his wife, 51 Spring Street, Trenton.

PO. Gainforth and Mrs. Gainforth wandered through the throng, pausing to watch the turning of the different wheels venturing here and taking a chance there without success until he stopped before the two gaily decorated wheels of the "Spello" game. Being a discerning man by nature and training he concluded, before attempting to pit himself against Dame Fortune, that there was a slim chance of his winning. He watched one or two less dubious persons take their chance before deciding that it was worth trying himself. A few questions asked of the operator explained the working of the wheel; the necessity of pinning the three first initials of his name, which were in PO. Gainforth's case "R.F.".

First Efforts Failed

He poised his first dart and threw it...and missed; the second dart lodged itself in the letter "R", but the third and last chance went astray and landed on another letter not in those he was trying for. It still looked impossible, the odds appeared to be too great to ever win, but it was fun so he bought three more darts and prepared himself to make each one count. All three completely missed any of his initials. After trying seven unsuccessful attempts, PO. Gainforth was ready to declare himself daunted. He turned half away from the front of the game booth to leave but he did not leave...he put down his money for another attempt and hurled the first dart at random. It pinned the letter "F"; but this was nothing to be excited over, he still had two two initials...and only two darts. The second dart sped from his hand and landed right in the centre of the third initial of his name, the letter "G". He was already entitled to a small prize, the first he would have won at the Karnival and the night was not a complete failure. The third dart was still held in his hand and seemed useless...It was still imposible to win. With an expression of resignation PO. Gainforth threw the third and counting dart and speared the third and wining initial "R."

Could Hardly Believe Luck

Altogether PO. Gainforth had spent two dollars, hade seven unsuccessful attempts to win. It had looked as though he had just thrown away two dollars until that final dart went straight to the target and won for him one of the two beautiful Stromberg-Carlson radios the Kiwanis Club was offering as the prize for such expert markmanship.

For several minutes neither PO. Gainforth or Mrs. Gainforth could realize that they had won. The impossible chance had not been impossible. They had become the owners of a $250.00 radio for the price of two dollars and fifteen minutes concentration and fun. PO. Gainforth produced his identification card to prove his initials were those upon the board and was assured that he had won. It was a great event.

He said that he had given up when the second dart had given at least something for his money and his hand was shaking as he held out his identification card, and it was not until after he had been given a card authorizing the delivery of his radio that he believed he had won.

Tonight and tomorrow night the Kiwanians are again putting up the same types of radios to be won and are prepared to deliver them on the spot if you want to take yours home with you. There is no reason why someone else cannot be as fortunate as PO. Gainforth both tonight and tomorrow night; the radios are there to be won... and the price of the game has been reduced to make it more popular. It seems to be a good way to win a radio for very little money, and it can be done! Your chances are as good as the first winner's were.

Child Is Killed; Struck by Truck Near Deseronto

Running out in front of a load of hay to recover her ball seven-year-old Jean Brant was struck by a truck near her home on Highway No. 2 one mile west of Deseronto late Tuesday afternoon. The little girl was rushed to the Belleville General Hospital where she died early yesterday evening as the result of a fractured skull and internal injuries.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Brant of Deseronto, little Jean was playing at ball, adjacent to the highway near her home, along with other playmates when the fatal accident occurred. Ivan Barrager, 7 West Ave., in Toronto, was driving a truck westerly and met a wagon load of hay, driven by Thomas Claus, a neighbor of the Brants.

"As I approached the horse-drawn wagon I saw a boy running out from in front of the horses. I sounded my horn and retarded the speed of my truck. Just as the front of my truck was about even with the horses a form suddenly ran out from in front of the team and into the path of my truck. Although I swerved sharply to the right it was impossible to evade striking the child," stated Barrager. Mr. Claus, driver of the team, told investigating Provincial Police he had seen several children playing alongside of the road, but had not observed them run across the highway.

The preliminary inquest was held at the hospital last evening before Coroner Dr. J. J. Robertson and following identification the body of the child was released for burial. The adjourned inquest will be held August 19th.

Close to 500 people including the highest army, navy and air officers of Britain, the United States and Canada, technical and political advisers, secretaries, clerks and stenographers, are housed in the huge Chateau Frontenac Hotel, closely-guarded conference headquarters.

They have been working for days preparing the groundwork for the two leaders who, considering they have had a three-day pre-conference meeting in Hyde Park, doubtless have their agenda well in hand.

Among those in the Chateau are seasoned officers who have had actual fighting experience on every far flung battle arena in which the Anglo-American forces have been engaged.

AIR OFFENSIVE

were credited with shooting down 33 enemy fighters, while 36 Allied heavy bombers, one fighter-bomber and five fighters were reported missing.

Two Enemy Planes Downed

Two of the enemy planes fell before the guns of pilots flying with the Wolf and Red Indian squadrons of the Canadian fighter wing, with six R.C.A.F. members doing the shooting that sent them spinning down.

Flt. Lt. W. G. Conrad of Bedford, Que., ganged up with Flt. Sgt. G. M. Shouldice of Chesley, Ont., over Northeastern France to smack down a FW90. Then, over Northern Belgium, Wing Cmdr. J. E. Johnson, British leader of the Canadian wing, shared a ME110 with Flt. Lt. Dean H. Dover, of Toronto, FO. J. Creston of St. Catharines, Ont., and I. Foster, of Grimsby, Ont.

Deliver Surprise Blow

Heavy bombers from Mediterranean bases, meanwhile, flew in from the south to deliver a surprise blow at German fields at Istres Le Tube and Salon in France, northwest of the seaport at Marseille.

Le Bourget airdrome in Paris was attacked for the second successive day by R. A. F. bombers yesterday. British airmen also struck at air fields in Bryas Sud and Poix during the day and American Marauders followed to deliver a second wallop to the latter field in darkness.

R. A. F. bombers bombed the marshalling yards at the railroad terminal at Calais, and others blasted airfields at Woensdrecht in Holland and Lille-Vendoville in France.

Brig.-Gen. Frederick L. Anderson, commander of the 8th Bomber Command, said, "Germany is wide open" explaining that the shuttle service was still in the "strategic" stage inasmuch as the bombers were aiming at Axis industries rather than at the enemy itself. He said intense attacks on enemy airfields in Germany and occupied Europe were attempts to eliminate any opposition to Allied operations by Axis fighter planes.

Move to Other Stage Quickly

Once this is achieved, he explained, "we can move from the 'strategic' aerial stage to the 'tactical—ground-gaining—stage overnight." He saw this possible before many months because inroads upon enemy aircraft have been so great.

Meanwhile the Germans were making a feeble effort at retaliation, dropping bombs last night at scattered points in eastern and southern England. A few planes dropped bombs in East Anglia early this morning. Damage was reported slight.

The raids cost the Nazis nine more of their dwindling airfleet.

A Middle East Air Communique issued today in Cairo reported that R. A. F. Wellington bombers had raided the harbor of Preveza, Greece, on Monday night and attacked enemy shipping in the Aegean, damaging a small escort ship.

R. A. F. Beaufighters also damaged two merchant vessels off the Greek West Coast, the bulletin said.

Provincial Secretary, Registrar and Minister of Municipal Affairs— George H. Dunbar, (Ottawa South.)

Minister of Health and Public Welfare — Dr. Reginald Percy Vivian, (Durham.)

Minister of Lands and Forests— Wesley G. Thomson, (Kent East.)

Minister of Labor — Charles Daly, (Lincoln.)

Minister Without Portfolio— George H. Challies, (Grenville-Dundas).

Survey All Departments

An early task confronting these ministers will be survey of all departments and appointment of committees—open to members of the opposition, which consists of 34 C. C. F., 15 Liberals and three others—on labor and agriculture.

But Col. Drew laid greatest stress yesterday on the mines department committee. The committee will be appointed "with the idea of making adjustments in keeping with the great changes in the industry in the past two years," he said. Later, the Premier declared: "we recognize that unless something effective is done many communities in Northern Ontario may become ghost towns."

"The first step obviously is to seek an adjustment of the present system of taxation and for that reason this department has been placed temporarily under the provincial treasurer," the Premier added. "By the time he has had a chance to adjust the method of taxation it is expected plans will be ready for organization of the department."

One of Re-adjusting

The question, he said, was one of re-adjusting the basis of taxation between the Dominion government, the Provincial Government and the Municipalities.

"At the present time the heaviest taxes are collected without regard to the fact that the provincial government and the municipalities perform the greatest service for the mines.

"We are going to examine the methods of directing mining production in other countries and adjust our own system.

"The mining industry is in an extremely serious situation and since the beginning of the war more than half our producing mines in Ontario have closed down."

No Thought of Dismissals

This committee would be appointed to recommend the best methods of assisting and controlling mining production.

During the interview, the Premier had this to say when asked about the civil service: "There is no thought of wholesale dismissals and I hope that every member of the civil service will continue his work with the confidence that those who are performing their duties well and are competent for their tasks will be retained."

The new government is the first minority administration elected in Ontario since the United farmers of Ontario Party, headed by E. C. Drury, came to power in 1919.

Initiative Must Be Followed With "Great Forces"

Washington, Aug. 17 (AP) — The United States and the world had from one of President Roosevelt's closest confidants today a pronouncement that the initiative in the global war, now held by the Allies, "is of no value unless followed vigorously with great forces."

Broadly implying the imminence of further grand scale operations against Nazi-held Europe, James F. Byrnes stressed the success of aerial bombardment to date, but said the President had authorized him to say that "the major battles lie ahead of us, not behind us."

Some observers drew an inference from his talk that attack by air, rather than by sea and land forces against numerically superior odds, might continue to keynote offensive strategy, for the time being at least. There were indications the decision in this connection may be reached in the Churchill-Roosevelt parleys at Quebec.

Calls for Greater Effort

Byrnes, director of the United States Office of War Mobilization, called for greater effort and sacrifice on the home front in order to press home the initiative already gained. In return, he promised a "substantial eduction" in the cost of living necessities and gave assurance of ultimate victory.

Byrnes, warning that there is "nothing to justify the hope of unconditional surrender by the Axis powers in the near future," said he had been authorized by the President to say "that in his judgment as of today the major battles lie ahead of us, not behind us."

Salting his talk with references to the "devastating" and "magnificent" bombing operations of the Allied air forces, Byrnes declared that in the land fighting in Africa and Sicily "we have met and defeated less than 7 per cent of the combat divisions which the enemy has in the European area."

Canadians Offer Thanksgiving For Victory

(By WILLIAM STEWART)
(C.P. War Correspondent)

With the Canadian Forces in Sicily, Aug. 16 (Delayed) (C.P. Cable) —Canadian fighting men offered prayers of thanksgiving for the victory in Sicily and remembered comrades who fell in battle.

Sunday services were held yesterday by every battalion of the Canadian 1st. Division which fought steadily for more than a month.

They were the first such services attended by Canadian troops in a battle zone in this war.

Some Roman Catholic services were held in stone churches of the towns near the Canadian camps.

A Sicilian choir accompanied the celebration of Mass in one church.

Protestant services, which were uniform in every camp, were specially prepared by Major Gordon Jones of Toronto, senior Protestant chaplain of the division.

The services included prayers of thanksgiving for victory and remembrance for the soldiers killed, prayers for the Empire and its leaders, prayers for the troops and their people at home.

Officers and men sang "O Canada" and "God Save the King".

43 Axis Fighters Downed in Italy

Cairo, Aug. 17—(AP)—Large formations of United States heavy bombers bombed Axis airfields at Foggia in southern Italy yesterday and shot down 43 enemy fighters which attempted to intercept them, a Middle East communique announced today.

Eight planes are missing from the day's operations which included attacks on the landing ground at Tortorella and San Nicola in southern Italy, the communique said.

The landing ground at Tortorella was heavily spread with bombs, several large fires were started, and railway lines alongside were hit, the announcement said.

Similar results were obtained at San Nicola where workshops, administration buildings and living quarters were damaged.

Nearly 100 enemy fighters battled the raiders, the communique said.

ATTACKS POSTS SINGLE-HANDED

Corporal Cleans Out One M. G. Crew Later Falls to Sniper's Bullet

By LOUIS V. HUNTER
Canadian Press War Correspondent

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 5. (Delayed) —(CP Cable) — Corporal Fred Terry of Vancouver, is dead—victim of a sniper's bullet —but before he fell he assaulted single-handed enemy machine-gun posts, wiped out one machine-gun crew and made it possible for his company to advance and silence others.

Terry was buried in the field July 30 after a service conducted by the regimental padre. Three of his closest friends, Sgt. Bob Peebles and Ptes. Al Noxon and John Hyra scoured the dry countryside to find flowers for the grave.

Terry's company commander, Maj. H. P. Bell-Irving, said the corporal's leadership and bravvery contributed greatly to the capture of a hill. When the top of the hill was reached, Terry began assisting in the task of reorganization. As he advanced around an exposed flank to see if it was safe for others a sniper's bullet killed him.

Japs Withhold Lists Of Prisoners of War

London, Aug. 17 —(CP Cable) Despite promises, the Japanese have not supplied full lists of the prisoners of war and civilians they hold and thousands of soldiers and civilians from Malay, Singapore, Hong Kong and elsewhere have not yet been accounted for, government officials said yesterday.

Representatives of the Foreign, Colonial and War Offices and the post office held a press conference to clear up questions concerning Japanese prisoners of war.

They said every effort is being made to learn the fate of the prisoners, but the Japanese have not given lists of those held at all camps and did not open a postal service until Jan. 1, 1943, although they had promised it for a year earlier.

A plane carrying mail from prisoners of war held by the Japanese crashed recently in Eire and almost all the correspondence was destroyed.

Huge Number Held

It is estimated the Japanese hold 40,000 civilians and 30,000 servicemen from the United Kingdom, 20,000 Australians, 2,000 Canadians, 30,000 to 40,000 Americans, 100,000 Dutch soldiers and civilians, and 70,000 to 80,000 Indians, officials said.

They added that mail takes six months to reach Tokyo via Russia, but urged those awaiting news of the fate of relatives to continue writing even if they had not received word so far.

Sicilian Campaign Ends

Sicily has passed into the hands of the Allied Nations with the fall of Messina after thirty-eight days of modern war. So swiftly has the ten-thousand-square-mile island been conquered by the amphibious operations which began on July 10th.

In that brief period Mussolini fell from his pinnacle on which he had placed himself as Il Duce of Italy and of Fascism and Germany demonstrated her inability to hold or defend the island from the force of the Allied attack.

It is the first piece of the Italian political structure in Europe which has been broken from association with Italy as the outcome of the war.

It is the result of the great campaign across North Africa which captured Italians and Germans by many thousands.

It is the first territory under Axis power in Europe to come under Allied occupation and under military law.

The fall of Sicily is the proof of the ability of the Allies to deliver overpowering blows at Hitler.

In this campaign Canadians of the First Division served with great distinction. Generals Eisenhower and Montgomery have given them high praise. Canadians from Britain had secured just a glimpse of the war in Europe in 1940 and returned to Britain as France fell. Quite a number of Canadians fought in the brief operation at Dieppe, but this Sicilian operation was the first sustained undertaking in which a Canadian force participated. It was the first attack on the European "fortress" so called of Hitler and his ally except of course by air, and gives promise of the steady development of the war against the Germans.

The campaign has been the demonstration of Allied air power, sea power and land power, of the unity of command and of the finest co-operation of Allied arms. The campaign has been a model of thoroughness.

It has demonstrated that amphibious operations can be carried on despite the power of any enemy and so it gives the finest hopes for a series of further heavy blows at Italy and Germany.

The world will watch the course of the war from this point.

Sicily's fall saw the elimination of Italian Fascism in Italy as well as the beginning of the benign influence of Allied military government which will preserve order and give the people of the island something of an idea of what a model rule can be. The Sicilians have hated the Germans and have been living under the tyranny of Mussolini. They will appreciate the benign change.

At This Time

The sixth great conference between Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt is ready. They have had talks at Hyde Park during the weekend and they will continue their talks at Quebec.

The meeting coincides with the fall of the first defence post of continental Italy in the loss of Sicily, and with retreat of the Germans and the overthrow of Mussolini.

Everywhere it is realized that the conference about to open will be one of the greatest importance.

Other conferences have shown how effective such meetings are getting to be. The invasion of Sicily was decided at Casablanca. It succeeded.

The world looks to the conferees to take another step toward the eradication of aggression. In the words of Mr. Roosevelt, spoken some weeks ago, it is "the beginning of the end."

Raid Germany at Will

The United States 8th Air Force has proven that it can reach the heart of Germany at will and deliver heavy blows by day precision bombings and that the Germans have no power to prevent it.

The U. S. air force is increasing its striking power and will make the most effective use of its strength.

The history of day bombing by the Americans is showing a like superiority for the Americans as the night raids over Germany proved the value of British bombing.

The Americans show that they have achieved great results in their share of beating down the Nazi air force. The U. S. air force is not going to rest complacently but will expand its targets simultaneously and so will make the enemy's position very precarious and difficult.

The report of the success of the Americans shows that just as Japan has suffered many times the losses inflicted on the Americans, so for a loss of 419 bombers the Americans have destroyed 1,728 Axis aircraft, possibly destroyed 671, and damaged 870 machines. These figures showing many times the loss of German planes for Americans lost.

Human Bees

(Christian Science Monitor)

Refuting Mark Twain's theory that nobody does anything about the weather—large apple orchardists do, and by employing "human bees."

In the fruit-growing valleys of Washington State they can be seen at work—girls and women on ladders dipping into one apple blossom with a fine brush, then using the brush on another flower.

Like the bees, they were mixing the pollen.

Proponents of this aid to nature call hand pollination of apple trees crop insurance, wherein a good fruit set is assured despite weather conditions during blossom time. The practice costs less than thinning and the human bees can properly space the apples.

A Conscience for the World

(Victoria Colonist)

A conscience, no doubt, will be very good for the world. It has not had one before, in quite the same sense. It has been so difficult to see over the hills, across the seas, and beyond the deserts. Now that excuse is disappearing. It is a world with which men have to deal, a world of flesh and blood humanity. From human pain, distress and suffering, from fathomless pits of self-willed darkness, there is arising the image of a fairer dawn, a brighter human day. A corporate conscience points out man's duty to his fellow-man, and, infinitely beyond that, his answerability eternally to God.

The Bomber

White moon setting and red sun rising,
White as a searchlight, red as a flame,
Through the dawn wind her hard way making,
Rhythmless, riddled, the bomber came.

Men who had thought their last flight over,
All hoping gone, came limping back,
Marvelling, looked on bomb-scarred Dover
Buttercup fields and white Down track.

Cottage and ploughland, green lanes weaving,
Working-folk stopping to stare overhead—
Lovely, most lovely, past all believing
To eyes of men new-raised from the dead.

—B. R. Gibbs, in the London Sunday Times.

It's True, "All Flesh Is Grass"

(Edmund W. Sinnott, in the Yale Review)

Every mouthful of food we eat, everything that nourishes the world of life comes ultimately from plants. In such a sense, it is literally true that "all flesh is grass." And plants in their turn derive everything from the sun and the soil. Around this central idea turns the whole problem of nutrition. Plants are the typically synthetic organisms. In their bodies are carried out those first and simplest chemical unions which lead to all the rest. Plants hold, as it were, the basic patents for the manufacture of foods and similar organic materials.

SUMMER DAY

The wind from the south blows warm today
And the dust is flying.
The white clouds over me seem to say:
It's no use trying.
Find you some shady and cool retreat
And hide away from the city's heat.

In winter and spring I merely ask
Strength for the day,
And wisdom and time for the useful task,
And I work away;
But triumph and fortune and fame are not
Strong lures for a man when the weather's hot.

I stand in the shade and I wipe my brow,
And dull am I.
If fortune or glory should beckon now,
I should pass on by,
And if either should ask why at ease I stay,
I should truthfully answer: Too warm today.

Appeared in Dark

The first of more than 10 waves of Australian and American-manned planes appeared over the four airdromes of the Wewak sector during the dark first hour of Tuesday.

After the bombers were through, attack planes and fighters roared low to pour out cannon and machine-gun fire. They scored heavily against enemy personnel. Appearance of Allied fighters indicated strongly that a fighter airstrip has been established considerably closer to the northeast New Guinea coast than Port Moresby which is across the Owen Stanley Mountains and more than 40 miles southeast of Wewaa.

The last fliers to leave the target areas looked back on fires which still could be seen blazing when the planes were 150 miles on the homeward trip.

Five hundred miles above Darwin, Australia, Hudsons and Beaufighters manned by Australians set an enemy troop transport afire in the Aroe Islands and killed at least 50 troops.

Business Men From Atlantic to Pacific Optimistic Over Post-War Outlook

Survey by Canadian Chamber of Commerce Results in Interesting Cross-Section of Views on Employment and Trade Developments — Recreation of World Market in Co-Operation With Allies

A spirit of optimism about post-war Canada prevails among the business men of this country from Atlantic to Pacific. Such is the answer to a survey by The Canadian Chamber of Commerce, which has been submitted to the Special Committee on Economic Re-Establishment and Social Security of the Senate, and the Special Committee on Reconstruction and Re-Establishment of the House of Commons. News of this was released today through P. A. McFarlane, Chairman of the Exxecutive, The Canadian Chamber of Commerce.

This ocean to ocean report was carefully prepared by the Canadian Chamber. It undertook to take a poll of Canadian business men, to see what they really felt about post-war business conditions. Boards of Trade, Chambers of Commerce, reconstruction committees, trade associations and private firms all co-operated in the survey. What the Head Office of The Canadian Chamber of Commerce got in Montreal was a valuable cross-section of Canadian business men's opinions about the years ahead, and what is going to happen to both employer and employee—as far as they could see—in those years.

Findings

Four interesting findings are revealed:

(a) There is a desire to plan definitely for the appropriate reinstatement of ex-service men and women.

(b) The probable engagement of new employees one year after war is considered by most companies as difficult to forecast without knowledge of the government policy, particularly in regard to the availability of essential materials, taxation and controls.

(c) All companies surveyed express the determination to give consideration to the engagement of the physically handicapped.

(d) In factories other than those established for the sole purpose of making munitions, no long-term serious problem is anticipated in the change-over from war to peacetime plant. In some cases, peacetime machinery is in storage and can be rapidly assembled in the production line always provided raw materials are available.

Questions Asked

Then the Chamber asked responsible bodies about the future. What did the Dominion of Canada seem to promise them in the years after the war? Repsesentative bodies, representative businesses, representative people were approached, all across Canada. Explaining, the Chamber says that—

"The individual businesses approached were chosen from the various phases of our economy — and while the survey is by no means all-inclusive, it may be considered representative of manufacturing, trade and commerce, and finance."

The response revealed "a keen interest in the post-war situation, and an appreciation of the needs of immediate planning," the Canadian Chamber stated.

Then added:—"But there is a reluctance to forecast the post-war situation by reason of an inability to foresee a national prospective of the Canadian market because of the lack of knowledge of what government policy will be during that period."

Manufacturing and Employment

What will happen in manufacturing is interesting. A survey indicated that in the year immediately preceding the war, the manufacturing industry employed about 650,000, or about one-sixth of those gainfully occupied in Canada. The number employed in manufacturing in 1943 is, say the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, at least 1,250,000, which appears to be almost one quarter of all Canadians gainfully employed, including those in the armed forces.

The Association further indicate that it is not probable that the manufacturing industry will be able to maintain the present high level of employment unless the tremendous wartime expansion of Canada's foreign trade can be maintained. Within certain qualifications, it is further claimed that on balance, it is probable that employment in manufacturing will be much greater than it was in pre-war years.

Few Changes Seen in Change-Over

In general, the companies included in the survey anticipate few problems in the change-over from wartime to peacetime condidtions and it is not believed that the cessation of hostilities will materially affect the labour situation, i.e., excluding those plants which have been built especially for war production and mainly operated as crown companies.

Wartime expansion of plant may, in fact, create new employment." The same report mentions that some of the bigger companies are forming post-war committees, while others have special departments devoted to post-war planning.

In its submission to the parliamentary committees, the Chamber refers to the fact that at the annual meetings in 1940, 1941 and 1942, "the Chamber's membership recognized the problem of reconstruction that will arise at the conclusion of the war and resolved to play its part in planning in advance for that period."

A special commitee of the Chamber was appointed to study post-war problems, and this committee has been functioning since 1941.

As to the building industry, optimism prevails there. Not only do they foresee housing schemes here in Canada, but buildings abroad will be needed in thousands, and it is hoped that European countries will want to use Canadian building materials.

Agricultural implement makers see good domestic markets, but want also favourable trade agreements for the export markets. Steel industries do not profess to anticipate the future. The mining companies say they can get right back to work. Coal producers want markets ensured them. Automobile men can quickly go back to work after the armistice.

The transportation industry picture, is not clear, but the future of hydro electric development calls for "a modification of the Excess Profits Tax so that adequate reserves can be accumulated for a post-war construction program".

The brief then contains the observations of various Board and Reconstruction Committees, province by province.

The Chamber sets forth its conclusions, after surveying all the reports, as follows:

Conclusions of Chamber

1.—Our prime purpose in planning for the post-war period must be together with our Allies, to recreate a world market. Only by the exchange of Canadian goods for the goods of other countries can our export industries, and, in turn, our importing trades, make their maximum contribution to post-war employment.

2.—Practical considerations must determine the respective spheres of government and business in the Canadian economy. A co-operative approach on the part of both, toward a large restoration of freedom for business is necessary, if business is to play its indispensible part in promoting post-war prosperity, with its consequent maximum of employment.

3.—In the face of present uncertainties, business alone may not be able to provide maximum employment in the immediate post-war period. Government in consultation with business, therefore, should prepare plans for the short term stabilization of employment used in the first phase of peace, expenditures on public works, conservation and town planning schemes and in measures to stimulate the re-housing of the people. Government should also lay plans for the long term stabilization of employment through the maintenance, at a constant rate, of private investment in capital equipment and through the operation of public finance and monetary policies conceived to this end.

4.—Measures should be planned for the betterment of Canadian agriculture involving outlets for agricultural products in export markets and through their new and wider use in industry, in addition to the more effective use of the land and a rise in the standard of living of the farmer himself. The prosperity of the farmer with his resultant demand for manufactured goods will contribute largely to maximum employment.

5.—An overall examination of the Canadian tariff and of Canada's taxation structure should be undertaken to permit the finding and removing of anomalies which would otherwise hinder Canadian business in reaching its objective of maximum post-war employment.

6.—Long term government plans should be designed to raise the human standards of Canadian citizens including the provision of security against the still unavoidable mischances of life. The development of better relations between management and workers and the adoption of a national labour code to govern the relations between management and organized labour will make for a happy and contented body of employees in this Dominion.

SARDINES FROM SARDINIA

Sardinia is second in size only to Sicily among the islands in the Mediterranean.

It lies 150 miles off the Italian mainland and seven miles south of Corsica, its geological cousin.

About 168 miles long and 89 miles wide, Sardinia has an area, including the small islands along the coast, of 9,299 square miles.

Compared to Sicily, the island is sparsely populated, the total number of inhabitants being estimated at less than a million.

Sardinia has a bad reputation for malaria, a fact that has hindered its development.

The people, as well as livestock such as horses, donkeys and cattle, are of lower stature on Sardinia than they are on the Italian mainland.

"Sardinia" is from a Greek word meaning footprint and was applied to the island by the ancients because it was fancied to resemble the sole of a foot.

The small fish known as sardines are believed to have been so named because they were abundant off the coast of Sardinia.

Another word supposed to be derived from the name of the island is "sardonic." "What the Latins call Sardonic Laughter, a distortion of the face without gladness of heart," explained Dr. Samuel Johnson. That is a pretty good description of Mussolini's mug since the Allies began to work on him. Homer was the first to use "sardonic smile" in the sense of bitter, mocking, contemptuous laughter. The ancients thought there was an herb in Sardinia resembling parsley which, when eaten, caused the victim to die laughing.

Sardinia has been governed successfully by its own people, Carthaginians, Romans, Vandals, Goths, Saracens, Pisans, Genoese, Spaniards, French, Austrians, British and Italians.

The native language contains numerous Latin words that have undergone little change since ancient Roman times.

Much of the island of Sardinia is covered with mountains, traversed by scenic valleys, and is wild and sparsely populated. The inhabitants have been notorious for brigandage for many centuries.

In the time of the Caesars it was one of the granaries of the empire.

From 1720 until 1861, when it became an integral part of the new kingdom of Italy, Sardinia was part of the Kingdom of Sardinia, which included Piedmont and other adjacent mainland territories and which was governed by the House of Savoy which became the ruling family of Italy.

Christmas Trees 'Out' This Year

Ottawa, Aug. 18. (CP)— Come next December, the cheery Christmas tree that usually brightens the front parlor probably will be right where it is today—standing unadorned in the woods, the government indicated last night in a statement which warned of an impending shortage.

The statement, issued jointly by the Prices Board and the Department of Transport, Labor and Munitions, warned cutters, dealers, shippers, and retailers they will be handicapped by shortage of railway equipment, by the need of employing all available manpower in essential industries, by the restrictions on the use of trucks, and by the acute shortage of the type of twine used for binding trees in bunches for shipment.

Transport Controller T. C. Lockwood said instructions will be issued to the railways prohibiting the transportation of Christmas trees in flat and open top cars or in box cars suitable for transporting grain, feed and other essential commodities requiring such equipment.

Arthur MacNamara, Selective Service director, announced that his officers will be instructed to refuse work permits for cutting Christmas trees, making it impossible for contractors to hire labor.

M. M. McCutcheon, administrator of services for the Prices Board, said: "No special permits exempting applications from the existing regulations, will be granted to motor truck operators for the transportation of Christmas trees".

G. P. Kaye, deputy controller of supplies, emphasized that the type of twine used for binding Christmas trees is in short supply. "It is doubtful whether any will be available for that purpose this autumn", he said.

The statement said no restrictions were being issued at present as regards cutting of Christmas trees by individual farmers.

"But with the shortage of fuel so grave a national problem, I would urge farmers to produce fuel wood wherever practicable", said Wood Controller J. S. Whalley.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

How She is Making Her Introductions Graceful

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I'm trying my best to become a good introducer, to make my introductions so smooth that correct forms of introductions will automatically come to my lips. It hasn't been easy for I had never been trained in this "art" and I agree with you when you so often refer to it as an art. But I've "eaten up" everything you write on the subject of introductions and I save every article and answer of yours in my manners scrap-book.

I'm uncertain, always, as to whether I should introduce the companion, girl or man, with whom I am walking when I stop to speak to a friend. I have the feeling that if I do make the introduction it seems "forced," and if I don't I'm afraid that either one of my friends, or both, may feel "hurt," feel that there may be some "hidden motive" for not making the introduction. Will you please guide me about this, Mrs. Beeckman?

Ilona

Preparing for every possible introduction occasion is the right way to make your introductions automatically correct. To make a proper introduction is an easy and simple procedure, if we just know the few fundamental rules.

The question you send now is very often a problem and there is no definite rule about it. In most circumstances an introduction isn't necessary. You stop briefly (and it should be briefly), your companion walks ahead and after a few words with the friend you've met, you join your companion.

But sometimes your companion who doesn't realize he or she is "supposed" to walk on, lingers at your side. You should quickly make the expected introduction.

In any case, if you think the introduction would be of interest to both your friends, it's friendly to make it. For example: "Miss Allen (your companion), this is Sergt. Hall. He's home on furlough and we'll all meet tomorrow evening at Betty Foster's party to welcome him home."

Courtesy Tip

When the National Anthem is played on any occasion, give it your immediate and complete attention and respect. Stand quiet, motionless, until the anthem is finished. You'll show that you have the lowest and most unworthy manners if, as the National Anthem begins or before it is completely finished, you begin to get organized for your exit-rush, putting on your wraps, "making up," lighting a cigarette, or making any other disrespectful gesture. Show the color of your patriotic spirit, the right color.

Ottawa Fuel-Saving Experts Frown On Open Bedroom Windows in Winter

Ottawa, August 18 —(CP)—Canadians who wear thin underwear and open their bedroom windows at night will be right out of the fashion parade of the moderns this winter.

Coal conservation authorities, indicating how Canadians may reduce their coal consumption by 4,000,000 tons this year—a 20 per cent saving made essential by the fuel shortage—today blasted a few hoodoos.

Canadian homes, they said, are too hot in winter. A check indicated many were kept at a temperature to fill a thimble. Inside, at 75 argued, was too high for good health. The air filling a room, if outside would have enough moisture to fill a thimble. Inside, at 75 degrees, that same air is capable of holding two gallons. It draws moisture from rugs, from the walls, from the furniture — and from humans. The rugs wear more quickly, the dry woodwork cracks and the people of the house get the sniffles.

For such discomforts, Canadians pay heavily. If it were assumed that fuel were being used at utmost efficiency when a temperature of 68 degrees were maintained in the house, the officials said that when the temperature was raised to 70 degrees the coal waste was six per cent., at 72 degrees 12 per cent., and at 74, 18 per cent. At 76 degrees, the coal wastage was 24 per cent.

"Suddenly, people think it's too hot and they open a window," said an official. "Then, it gets cold in the room, and they stoke up the furnace again. Waste!"

Thousands felt that health demanded their bedroom window be open, even in the depth of winter. All wrong, said the conservationists. If closed windows meant ill-health half the country residents of Canada would be invalids all winter. But in city homes, up go the windows, the wind and frost come in, and the furnace has to be kept red-hot to maintain the desired temperature.

"Count several shovelfuls of coal for every window left open at night," said an authority.

"If the furnace is in good shape, there is not the slightest danger in having all the windows shut, and at a reasonable temperature the house won't feel stuffy. Having the furnace working efficiently is a first essential of coal conservation."

The officials spoke feelingly of the home where the man sits without his coat, rather too warm, and the lady of the house shivers and tells him to get down and fix the furnace.

"A man's clothing is estimated to weigh about 10 pounds and a woman's about a pound and a half," said one. "Just think of the difference! With warm clothing, both would be comfortable at 65 degrees. But no, up goes the temperature to 75 degrees as the furnace is stoked, and thousands of tons of coal are used unnecessarily."

In the United Kingdom, one fireplace will serve a house. In chilly Canada, one stove will serve country homes. But in the city not one but every room in the house is kept at 75 degrees before the lady of the house feels comfortable.

"At the very minimum, from $30,000,000 to $40,000,000 worth of coal is wasted in Canada annually," said an official. "That doesn't mean the householder only is to blame, as industries, office buildings and the like have their own ways of wasting coal."

Another vexation in coal conservation is the room that's hard to heat. There's one in almost every house at some time or another. Officials said that too often the remedy was to push the furnace until the other rooms were blistering but the outlaw had reached 75 degrees. usually the recalcitrant room could be brought into line quickly if a heating firm were called.

Domestic users could save 2,400,000 tons of coal this year by "attending to a lot of little things that cause heat loss," said an authority.

They could, for instance, see that soot was removed from their furnaces frequently. One-sixteenth of an inch of soot on furnace plates could result in a 34 per cent, fuel wastage.

"And," said an official, sadly, "we're sure most of them have deeper deposits than that most of the time.

Finally, they suggested storm windows. 'Less that 10 per cent. of the homes in Toronto have storm windows," he said. "In homes where there are no storm windows, some 20 per cent. of the heat is

Ileum Inflammation Requires Surgical Attention

Our intestines are some thirty feet long and it is not strange to see how inflammation of the various parts of this long tube may occur. Most often it is the large intestine that becomes inflamed but it is not unusual for the ileum, which is the last part of the small intestine, to become inflamed. This disorder is known as regional ileitis.

If the last part of the ileum is affected, according to Drs. Leon Ginzburg and John H. Garlock, of New York City, surgical treatment is necessary. If the upper part of the ileum is affected the condition as a rule, may be treated without operation. For this reason, when ileitis develops, the patient must be carefully examined with the X-ray to determine the location of the inflammation before treatment is started.

The symptoms may vary in two ways. In one type of case, ulcers form in the bowel, causing pain and, later on, blocking of the opening through the bowel. In the second type case, the inflammation of the bowel extends to other tissues. The symptoms are much like those of appendicitis with pain in the right lower part of the abdomen, sometimes fever and sickness to the stomach.

If operation is necessary the type of operation used is to fasten the upper part of the ileum to the large bowel, thus short-circuiting the lower or diseased part. Then later on, this diseased part of the bowel may be removed. If operation is not needed, the medical treatment consists of rests, the giving of plenty of fluid and the use of non-irritating diet. This is a diet which contains no highly-seasoned foods, no raw fruits or raw vegetables and no bulky foods. The condition is a difficult one to clear up and may persist for a long period of time.

Just why this disorder occurs is not definitely known. It may be the result of infection. On the other hand, it may come from some vitamin deficiency or perhaps from the use of improper diets. Sometimes, as a result of the inflammation, the bowel may break open, this allowing an abscess to form in the region of the appendix. In such cases, the patient should be kept at rest until the infection is walled off. Then, operation to drain the infection and remove the damaged bowel may be carried out.

TYENDINAGA EAST W.I.

Bawden and Reliance Squad Evens Series With Fliers By Winning Fourth Game by 10-4

Score Five Runs in Third Inning to Put Game in Bag

PLAY SEVEN FRAMES

With Johnnie Bawden returning to pitching form and his teammates garnering in five runs in the third inning, the Reliance A.C. bounced back into prominence in the City Softball League finals by trouncing the No. 5 ITS. "Flyers" 10 to 4 to even the series at two games each, in an abbreviated seven-inning contest played before a goodly crowd at the Exhibition Park Tuesday night. As the result of victory for Reliance the best-in-seven series between these two evenly-matched nines continues Thursday evening when a win will give the victor a decided edge in the current series.

Trailing two games to one the Reliance nine pushed five runs across the fourth base in the third inning and were never headed. Most everything happened in the game imaginable, except a home run. Seven extra base hits were counted, of which five were triples with "Spike" Pryke's Reliance nine getting the odd three-base smash in five. The "Fliers" came up with two early-game twin-killings to add spice to the pastime and halt the uprising of the Reliance, but Pryke's nine wasn't to be denied. They made three hits count into five runs in the third, when everything went, including Jimmie Barriage's stealing of home and Gene LaBonne's two-run producing triple.

Left Hitters Stranded

Twice during the game FO. Warren's Fliers rapped out triples, when Bancroft turned the trick in the second and Muldoon in the fourth. However, Johnnie Bawden rose to the occasion and on both occasions left the extra base hitters stranded on the runways with some timely clutch hurling. Bawden struck out six in seven frames and walked four. On the other side of the score sheet neither of Skipper Warren's pitchers whiffed a single Reliance batter, while Bancroft walked five. Bill Kurlyuk was rushed into the breach by the slipping Fliers in the sixth after the game was well in hand by Bawden and company.

Fliers Scored First

The Fliers scored first when Kerr opened the second with a single and scored on Bancroft's three-base smash. However, Reliance rallied in the third to cinch matters with five runs as they batted around the official batting order. Two walks, a fielder's choice, singles by Ethier and Bawden and LaBonne's lusty triple to deep right were good enough for the Reliance quintette of runs. The Fliers hove in sight of the score by scoring three in their half of the third as the result of two walks and singles by McKay, Kerr and Bancroft. That ended any resemblance of scoring on the part of the Fliers as Bawden let the Airmen down with but two hits from there in.

Score Two in Fifth

Cy Barriage's single and LaBonne's triple were good enough for two more runs for Reliance in the fifth as Pryke's gang added a brace more in the sixth on Loft's triple, Bawden's walk and Jim Barriage's one base smash. Incidentally Jim Barriage stole home in the hilarious third, when the winners scored their five runs.

Every member of Reliance collected at least a single, except St. Louis, as Ethier led the pack with a triple and a single. Jim Barriage had two singles and Phil Loft a perfect one-for-one, his hit being a three-base clout. LaBonne and Loft also hit triples for the winners. Losing pitcher Bill Bancroft led the Fliers on the attack with a triple and single to bat in two runs, while Kerr got two hits, as did Muldoon, who collected a non-productive triple and a first inning double, that saw him tossed out at the plate from here to yonder.

BLIX DONNELLY HURLS NO-HIT, NO-RUN GAME

Only One Player Reaches First and Then by Wild Throw

TORONTO WINS

By the Associated Press

Sylvester (Blix) Donnelly, fireball right-hander for Rochester Red Wings, pitched the third no-hit, no-run game of his career last night—and had to do that to win the headlines away from Luke Hamlin of Toronto Maple Leafs and Al Dubiel of Newark Bears.

Donnelly hypnotized the Jersey City batters and went into the ninth with a perfect game in his grasp. However, Red Schoendienst made a wild throw from his shortstop position in this frame to allow a giant runner to reach the initial bag. Later in the inning Donnelly issued his only walk.

The 4-0 triumph behind the right-hander's hurling followed a 2-1 decision for the Red Wings in the first game with Bill Trotter throwing a four-hitter.

Hamlin got his name in the headlines by shutting out Syracuse for the fifth time this season, first man to blank an International League rival that often in one season. Toronto took the game, 2-0.

Dubiel, who granted four walks, saw the Royals waste their lone hit but score once in the fifth and once in the eighth without a blow for a 2-1 triumph. In the first game, Bob Hiller of the Bears stopped the Royals on three hits, 6-3.

The only team not to get top-flight pitching last night was Buffalo, which lost to Baltimore 15-9.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Charley Wensloff, Yankees—Held White Sox to five hits for his 10th triumph.

Al Brazle, Cardinals—Held Dodgers —to eight hits and himself batted in three runs with triple and single.

Woody Williams, Reds—Hit pinch triple with bases loaded to decide game against Giants.

Hank Gornicki and Pete Coscarart, Pirates—Gornicki shutout Braves in first game and also returned in relief to get credit for winning nightcap, which Coscarart decided with single in 11th inning.

Dick Wakefield, Tigers — Hit seventh-inning home run for winning margin over Athletics.

Third-String Horses Figure In Big Money on U.S. Tracks

By the Canadian Press

The present turf season in the United States has been marked by an unusually large number of casualties among name steeds, according to a compilation of accidents, break-downs and retirements at New York, the result being that third-string horses are figuring in the big money.

Tops among the eight classy veterans to pass from the scene was Whirlaway which has gone to the farm to put in his reclining days. A champion of the early season was Count Fleet and it is considered improbable he will start in any big handicap within two months after having been retired through injury early in June. Other "names" to disappear include Ocean Wave, Devil's Thumb, Riverland, which had to be destroyed a few weeks ago, Don Bingo, Attention, Market Wise, Rounders, Pictor and Vagrancy—to mention a few. An effort has been made to bring Alsab back to form but his two recent starts have been very disappointing, such as his fourth in the Narragansett Handicap last Saturday.

Bargain colts, bought for a few hundred dollars, have come to the fore literally. An instance is Georgie Drum which copped the $10,000 stake at Chicago Aug. 14. Last year he was running as a $700 plater at Longacres. Turf trainers and owners have been at a loss to explain a near-epidemic of track failures this year.

Pte. Johnny Greco, lightweight fighter, has been absent without leave for 23 days and is to be fined 54-day's pay and confined to barracks for the usual period of punishment. This was revealed last night by an army officer of Military District No. 4, Montreal. Recently Greco was at a training camp in New Jersey preparing for a New York fight which did not develop.

Police Chief J. P. Downey of Ottawa has put his official down on any move by members of his department to play with the Ottawa Combines in the Senior O. R. F. U. this fall because of a shortage of constables. As a result, Tommy Daley, Leo Seguin, Fred Syms and Bert Haigh are out.

In an interview at Washington, Gunder Haegg, Swedish runner, declared he had set world's records for one to five miles last year but he was glad his best friend, Arne Anderson, 27-year-old Swedish school teacher was breaking them this season. The second to fall to Anderson was the 1,500-metre run which Arne covered in 3:45 yesterday at Gothenburg, Sweden.

One hundred owners are expected to place entries for the 14-day fall meeting at Stamford Park, Niagara Falls, which opens Saturday. Already tents have been erected to accommodate some of the horses.

Irish Miskimmons, who has seen 30 years of baseball, has recovered from his recent hand injury to the extent that he expects to play with his Stratford Nationals in the inter-county semi-final game this evening against Galt Terriers at Stratford. He may play the outfield, however, instead of behind the plate.

One of Toronto's largest track meets will be held at Varsity Stadium Saturday when more than 500 athletes will compete in the R.C.A.F. championships, the representation including men from many parts of the Empire, Norway, Poland, United States and every province of Canada.

A member of the University of Western Ontario Mustangs when they copped the last college grid title in 1939, Sqdn. Ldr. A. E. (Sox) Kress of the R.C.A.F. has been posted as chief instructor of the officers' training school at Domaine d'Estrelle, Que. In recent months he has been instructing at the ground school, Alymer, Ont.

Three Grand Circuit victories were scored yesterday at Empire City track by Clint Hodgins, 32-year-old Canadian driver. He guided Bonnie Volo to the purse in the Comet Stakes and added a pair of 2:10 wins with Jason, an aged gelding, to take the mile classified trot. Hodgins also had two seconds and a fourth in various heats.

Jackie Callura of Hamilton, Ont., who lost his N.B.A. featherweight title to Phil Terranova at New Orleans Monday night has obtained a return title bout Oct. 11 in the same city, it was announced last night by the Louisiana Boxing Commission.

Toronto, Aug. 18—(CP)—Call-up of married men between the ages of 27 and 30 and reduction of the minimum call-up age limit to 18 kicked professional hockey squarely in the posterior. Cyclone Taylor, Dick Irvin and a few of their contemporary greats may have to get their skates out of the mothballs yet. The new call-ups will leave the National and American leagues with very little to hold up their uniforms.

Andy Lytle of the Toronto Star quotes coach Hap Day as saying Toronto Maple Leafs will lose all but four of last year's players—Bob Davidson, Bucko McDonald, Sweeney Schriner and Lorne Carr. Schriner has already said he's retiring (an announcement with less news value each year) and the manpower shortage itself was the only reason McDonald remained in the N. H. L. last season.

Day thinks other teams may be hit even harder. All of which prompts Lytle to suggest a revision of professional hockey's admission charges would be in order. Says Andy:

"It was hard last season in Toronto, though it was done, to sell an inferior brand of hockey at three dollars a copy when better stuff was being peddled each week by the O. H. A. because of the service teams it was able to employ. If to what they had, is added players like Sylvanus Apps, Turk Broda and Billy Taylor, the N. H. L. may still insist it is in a position to compete. On the other hand, it may be compelled to revise its tariffs or fold completely." Taylor, of course, is already in the army.

The N. H. L. got by last year with a number of unripe or overripe players because sufficient high-class material remained to carry them. If the new call-up hits as deeply as Day anticipates, the Major League can just about call the whole thing off for the duration.

Incidentally:

C. M. (Charlie) Small, head of the Edmonton Maple Leaf Athletic Association and former president of the Alberta Football Association, has been appointed Edmonton City treasurer. George (Edmonton Journal) MacKintosh says Small's appointment is a "source of satisfaction" in sporting circles. And how!. . .Fred Jackson, former Sports Editor of the Toronto Star, has joined the R. YANKS' CHARIOT KEEPS ROLLING IN HIGH GEAR

New York Club May Not Have Polish but Have Power

CARDS ARE 'IN'

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sport Writer

The Polish may not be so pretty as in some former years, but New York Yankees' chariot keeps rolling more smoothly than it did in the days when it was baseball's shiniest streamlined model.

They have won 10 consecutive series in the American League and since July 5 they have won 32 of 43 games.

Yesterday they victimized Chicago White Sox again 4-2 with Chunky Charley Wensloff, the rookie righthanded ace, pitching his fifth five-hitter of the season and 14th complete game in 19 starts.

When they began their current western tour the Yankees were shelled for 19 runs in two games by St. Louis Browns, but the New York hurlers have allowed only 11 runs in seven games since then.

A's Lose 11th Straight

At the other end of the American League ladder the pitiful Philadelphia Athletics lost their 11th straight game, dropping a 4-3 decision to Detroit as the Tigers moved into a tie with the idle Cleveland Indians for third place. The A's batted Paul Trout off the mound in the ninth when they scored all their runs, but Johnny Gorsica stopped them in time to get Trout his 14th pitching triumph.

In the other American League game John Niggeling pitched five-hit ball as the Browns belted Boston Red Sox 4-1.

In the National League St. Louis Cardinals looked like World Series champions again in subduing Brooklyn Dodgers 7-3 with Alpha Brazle, a rookie recently called up from Sacramento, giving only eight hits and driving in three runs himself on a triple and a single. It was his third success without a setback.

Reds Lengthen Streak

Cincinnati Reds lengthened their winning streak to six games with a 10-4 decision over New York Giants, achieved mainly through a five-run eighth-inning rally in which Woody Williams delivered a pinch triple with the bases loaded.

Pittsburgh swept a doubleheader from Boston Braves 8-0 and 4-3 in affair that was remarkable because Hank Gornicki of the Pirates was the winning pitcher in both games and Nate Andrews lost both. Gornicki went the distance in the opener, allowing six hits, and returned in relief in the nightcap to get the credit when a double by Bill Baker and a single by Pete Coscarart pushed across the winning run in the 11th inning.

Chicago Cubs scored four runs in the eighth inning to take a see-saw struggle from the Phillies 7-5.

Dodgers Purchase Leading Slugger Of Southern Assoc.

Brooklyn, Aug. 17 —(AP)— Still building for the future, Branch Rickey announced today Brooklyn Dodgers had purchased the leading sluger of the Southern Association for delivery some time next month.

The newest acquisition is third baseman William Hart of New Orleans, a husky 28-year-old who has been leading his league in both home runs and runs batted in and whose batting average is about .320. At last accounts he had hit 16 homers and driven in 96 runs.

Since New Orleans now is in second place in the Southern Association, Rickey said the date for Hart reporting to the Dodgers will depend on how the Pelicans finish the season and whether he will be needed in the play-offs.

Rickey said he contemplates no additional "subtractions" from the Dodger squad, which has been undergoing a house-cleaning. The Brooklyn President also revealed that he had signed a working agreement with St. Paul of the American Association for next season and would continue its present arrangement with New Orleans in the Southern Association in addition to operating the Montreal club in the International League.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

Now for another old one we recall that used to bring a laugh. If you have wondered where all the "Smiths" come from this may help clear up your thoughts.

It is told on an old lady, visiting in the city for the first time who saw several "Smith" signs: "Smith & Co."; "Smith Bros." and finally she observed a huge sign that read: "Smith Manufacturing Company," whereupon the old lady exclaimed: "Laws of mercy, I've heard of Smiths all of my life, but I never knew where they made 'em."

All Even Now

"Spike" Pryke's gang bounced back and today the City softball finals is all even between No. 5 I.T.S. "Flyers" and Reliance at two games each. Last night the Reliance took a 9 to 4 decision as Johnnie Bawden returned to form and blanked the Flyers after the third frame in an abbreviated seven inning tussle called on account of darkness. The remaining games will be called at 6.45 p.m.

Most everything happened in last night's games, except a home run. Five triples were hit and a brace of doubles with Reliance getting the odd three-base smash. Reliance knocked Bill Bancroft off the Flyers' hilltop in the sixth, but it was that five-run splurge in the third that cinched matters for Pryke's charges. The two Flyer moundsmen, Bancroft and Kurylak, failed to strike out a single Reliance batter, while Bawden whiffed six in the seven frames. However, the Flyers made things tough for Reliance early in the pastime with two rapid-fire double plays. Twice the Flyers collected three base hits off Bawden, Bancroft in the second and Muldoon in the fourth. Neither scored as Johnnie retired the next two, in each case, with ease. Three singles and a couple of walks in the third for three runs were the best the Flyers could do for a trio of runs in the third, the only time FO. Warren's crowd threatened.

LaBonne, Ethier and Loft hit run-producing triples for Reliance, each coming in the three frames the winners made their hits count into runs. Bawden, after losing his first two starts to the Flyers, came back strongly last night to strike out six, but his main fort was making the Airmen hit into the fielders' hands when hits might have proven disastrous. With the teams all even at two games each, Thursday night's fifth encounter should really be the tip-bit of the series.

Baseball at Trenton

Flt. Lt. Buff Horton's Trenton R.C.A.F. baseball team has entered in the senior series of the O. B. A. and according to information received from Bill Snyder, secretary of the Provincial Baseball Association, the Trenton "Flyers" will meet the winner of the T. A. B. A. out of Toronto around Labor Day.

The O.B.A. contacted Bob Elliott of Kingston in an effort to induce the Ponies to return to the O.B.A. wars and engage in an Eastern Ontario series with the Trenton "Flyers" with the winner advancing to the Toronto series. However, the Kingston ball heads failed to reply to the message so Belleville baseball lovers will have to wait for the Trenton-Toronto series to see their first senior baseball in over six years.

Oldtimers' Delight

No doubt Dad will appreciate the life of James J. "Gentleman Jim" Corbett being enacted on the silver screen. The latter part of this week the picture "Gentleman Jim" is being shown at the Capitol Theatre. Jim Corbett won the heavyweight championship of the world from the immortal John L. Sullivan in 21 rounds at New Orleans, La., in Sept., 1892 and lost it to Bob Fitzsimmons in Carson City, Nev., in 14 rounds in one of the greatest fights in history. "Ruby Robert" used his famed "solar plexus" punch to finally K.O. the glamorous "Gentleman Jim." Corbett was only knocked out three times in his entire professional ring career. His last bout was an attempt to win the heavyweight crown for a second time, but he was beaten by James J. Jeffries on Aug. 14th, 1903. The Capitol Theatre flicker brings back old memories of the life of Jim Corbett.

Saliva Test?

Steve Owen, coach of the New York football Giants, tells the story of the young pitcher in a Class C league, whose cup of troubles was filled to overflowing.

In the league where he worked was an old-timer who had particular contempt for young pitchers and this youngster was his particular object. The kid went to Steve Owen one day and mournfully announced that he thought he'd give up baseball. Steve asked why.

"Well," replied the youngster, "I thought I had a pretty good fast ball. So one day this guy comes up and I figured I'd show him what's what. I put everything I had on the pitch. And what do you think he did?"

He paused, quivering with emotion. Then he went on: "Do you know what he did? He spit tobacco juice on the ball as it crossed the plate!"

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 151

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

The bidding methods in our land are not the same on every hand. But if our bids are really good, we reach the contract that we should.

The Horse Sense method knits together the simplest correct rules. They revolve around the hub rule, T-A-N. That means the order of choice of bids; takeout, first; assist, next; no-trump, last.

Until a responder bids, partner assumes he has two tricks. Each raise in suit shows another suit trick. Each free no-trump bid shows another no-trump trick. A free bid means a bid that was not forced.

A takeout to a new suit is forcing for one round. Any other non-jump bid is not forcing. Thus, a non-jump assist or a non-jump no-trump bid do not force partner to bid again.

You have this responding hand:

♠9 5 2
♥K 7 6 3
♦8 5
♣A Q 7 4

Your hand contains four suit tricks; three no-trump tricks. That permits you to make two suit raises; one free no-trump bid.

Partner starts with an opening bid of one diamond or one spade. Your first response is a takeout to two clubs. Suppose partner then bids two no-trump.

That's not a takeout to a new suit. Nor is it a one-jump. So it does not force you to bid again. If you bid again, it will show values not yet disclosed by you.

Following T-A-N, you have no more takeouts. Nor a suit assist. If you bid at all, it must be in no-trump. You have an unused no-trump trick. Bid three no-trump, a free no-trump bid.

Instead of one diamond or one spade, suppose partner opens with one heart. Your first response is a takeout to two clubs. Suppose partner then bids two no-trump.

Following T-A-N, you have no more takeouts. But you have an assist for hearts. So your second round bid is three hearts.

The player who knows doesn't stub his toes.

AT THE BELLE

"The Moon is Down"

John Steinbeck, the unknown man of literature, whose stirring novel "The Moon is Down" has just been made into one of the outstanding pictures of the year by 20th Century-Fox, actually worked to acquire his reputation as a recluse.

Despite the fact that the author spent several weeks in Hollywood during the filming of the picture which opens today at the Belle Theatre, Hollywood is still in the dark about what he looks like, what kind of a fellow he is or anything else about him.

Steinbeck made only two "public" appearances. These were when he edged quietly onto the set where his current best seller was being unfolded before the cameras. It wasn't until after Steinbeck had left that the actors in the picture knew the author had watched the shooting.

Steinbeck has valid reasons for shying from the spotlight. As he explained to Nunnally Johnson, who wrote the screen adaptation and produced "The Moon is Down" he gets most of the material for his dramatic novels from the ordinary, average people. Obviously, if these people knew the man in their midst was a writer, they could not talk as freely nor give Steinbeck the opportunity to study their ways of living.

In "The Moon Is Down" Steinbeck has created a powerful and gripping drama of the valiant Norwegians and their unconquerable spirit in the face of the cruel Nazi invasion.

With a hand-picked cast, 20th Century-Fox has brought to the screen a human and touching picture that will live like a flame in the hearts of all freedom-loving Americans. Sir Cedric Hardwicke, plays the part of the ruthless Nazi commander of the invasion troops. Henry Travers, the kindly, aged Mayor of the little Norwegian village; Lee J. Cobb, the philosophical old doctor; Dorris Bowdon, the wistful young widow; and Margaret Wycherly the Mayor's wife. Irving Pichel directed the picture.

"Dood It Again" is the title of a comicolor cartoon, to be presented on the same program with a new and thoroughly entertaining March of Time film "Mr. and Mrs. America."

PLOWING AHEAD

FARMERETTE JEANNE KILMER does a man-sized job on her father's farm. "I eat pretty early in the morning," she says. AT THE CAPITOL

"Gentleman Jim"

The rich, rare, racy San Francisco of the elegant eighties came to life again during the filming of the new Capitol film, "Gentleman Jim," coming next.

Sports, touts, fancy ladies, bowery boys and the muscle brigade—all were there, and in force, to help recreate the most fabulous days in the history of a fabulous city for the Warner Bros' filmization of the life story of James J. Corbett, heavyweight boxing champion of the world.

Fifty Years Ago

Five cameras were grinding away simultaneously to capture the color and rich history of Corbett's fighting career. The sequence being filmed was Corbett's fight with Joe Choynski, first of the three great battles in his fistic career.

It is 50-odd years ago in San Francisco Bay, with the fighters squared off to do battle on an old barge in strict defiance of the prize-fight laws.

Errol Flynn plays James Corbett. Opposite him is fierce Joe Choynski in the person of Sammy Stein, a good, rough-tough boy in his own right and a natural for the role. They glare at each other in the best traditions of the ring of the eighteen eighties.

Alexis is co-starred with Flynn in the picture. Minor Watson is her father, while John Lober is an admirer and Alan Hale is Flynn's dad.

"Ghost Rider"

Johnny Mack Brown was active in class threatricals while attending the University of Alabama, and shortly after graduating played his first important role with Jackie Coogan in "The Bugle Sounds." Brown comes to the Capitol Theatre next in the title role of "The Ghost Rider," the Monogram western drama in which he is starred, with Raymond Hatton in a featured role.

A colored cartoon and Zane Grey's "King of the Mounties" complete another big double program.

AT THE McCARTHY

The next featuring opening at the McCarthy is based on the shrewd and oft-times brilliant designs of the adventurous men and women who form the mysterious espionage circles in Europe, and has been made into a film that is, according to advance reports, one of the most arresting spy melodramas to come out of Hollywood in a long time.

George Sanders, British actor, is co-starred with Marguerite Chapman, young Columbia player, who is rapidly climbing to the top of the screen favorite list. Sanders plays the role of an R.A.F. Commander who purposely falls into disgrace in his own country, in order that he may ingratiate himself with a powerful Nazi group. How well he does it is shown by the fact that they permit him to become a feature on a Berlin radio network, where he manages to send coded messages through to British Intelligence, even while he seemingly reviles his own country.

Marguerite Chapman's role is an unusual one, in that she is a beautiful German girl who must win the sympathy of her audience. Her refutation of the Nazi party, her love for the British agent, and the discovery that the latter has outwitted the Germans, lead to a highly dramatic finish. Gale Sondergaard and Onslow Stevens head the supporting cast.

Leslie Howard and Merle Oberon in "Scarlet Pimpernel," also a comedy riot "Pack up Your Troubles" with Laurel and Hardy are now closing at the McCarthy.

LONDON LETTER

By SCOTT YOUNG
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 17. (CP)—The British House of Commons, widely known by such dignified descriptions as the heart of empire and mother of parliaments, is also quite an interesting spot for students of the manly art of self-defence (fisticuffs division).

There is nothing particularly scientific about the punches thrown in the chamber and its lobbies, although recent history does record one member who landed a punch right on the button (aside to people who thought this a political essay: chin) of a burly opponent. But the old college try is there, and the bouts resemble what possibly would result if the Beehive Centre, Sask., Golden Gloves tournament instituted an event for non-athletes over 45.

Most recent example was an exchange of punches between Cmdr. Oliver Locker-Lampson and Capt. A. S. Cunningham-Reid (dubbed by one of my alliteration-minded colleagues as the "hyphenated hot-head", in the Commons lobby.

The rules of the House, which call for a member on his feet to be at least three-sword-lengths away from those members of other political beliefs, haven't been changed to cover the modern practice, which substitutes fists for swords. A fight in Commons now has a distinctly beneficial effect on the participants, who become so penitent and aghast at their behavior that they are liable to refrain from criticizing others for as long as two or three hours.

Still fresh in the memories of parliamentary fight fans is the time shortly before the war when Labor's militant Emmanuel Shinwell dashed across the House and landed a solid blow across the face of Cmdr. Bower. The husky commander did not hit back, explaining later that as a former heavyweight champion of the British navy he could not bring himself to strike his less robust opponent.

However, he may have been deterred even more by realization of unfairness of the words that had excited Shinwell— while Shinwell was speaking Bower heckled him with advice to "return to Poland".

Apologies were exchanged later, as in the case of Cmdr. Locker-Lamson and Capt. Cunningham-Reid, and honor was satisfied.

L.C.M.S. Amery, now secretary for India, is the Commons' Bantam champion, winning his title in 1934 during a debate on evictions from government property at Woolwich. Amery heckled a speaker and George Buchanan, who is built like a large fire hydrant, called him a "dirty little swine and a gutter snipe". Then Buchanan and James Maxton advanced across the House on Amery. Arriving Amery started one right on Commons' historic carpet and landed flush on Buchanan's chin. Subsequently Buchanan ended the bout on a note of unconscious hilarity by apologizing for "hurling epitaphs across the floor of the House".

An interesting departure from precedent (one of those bouts where the referee does most of the fighting) occurred when an English M.P. and an Irish M.P. were beating each around the ears in the lobby one day and the late John Burns intervened so forcibly that both the original belligerents complained to the Speaker. Burns' brother had been a professional boxer, which may have had some bearing on his interventionist vigor.

Mr. Churchill took part in one of the earlier Commons fights, which better could be compared to wrestling than boxing because of the illegal weapons used. It was in 1912, during an Irish debate, and although the House officially had adjourned several members stuck around and shot extra-curricular insults at one another. Mr. Churchill, then First Lord of the Admiralty, said something which aroused Ronald McNeil (later Lord Cushendun) so much he fired a bound volume of Hansard which hit Mr. Churchill and bounced off harmlessly, like so many other more serious blows since.

McNeil later apologized.

The pattern for all Commons bouts seems to be a maximum of talk, a minimum of punching, and nobody hurt.

The X-Ray of Teeth Best Single Method of Examination

While there are other methods of examining the teeth for infection and cavities, the X-ray is considered the best single method. Thus when a physician and dentist are in doubt as to the best course to follow in any case, they endeavor to examine the X-ray films together if possible.

While physicians are naturally most interested in infection of roots of teeth, the dentist goes further and uses the X-rays to discover other conditions than root infections.

At the annual meeting of the Chicago Dental Society in February, Dr. Clarence O. Simpson of St. Louis, stated that while symptoms and history in cases of dental disorders are of great value in making a diagnosis (finding the nature of trouble present), they may often prove deceptive without other evidence such as the examination by X-ray.

The X-rays will provide nearly all the information of the other means of examination and will give much additional information. Even in examination for decay of teeth where the decay can be seen by the eye, X-ray will reveal unseen cavities.

When your dentist examines your teeth he uses a mirror and little instrument called the explorer, but it is difficult to see and test the surfaces of the teeth adjoining one another, that is, the side of the teeth. There may be considerable decay between the teeth but if no discoloration is present, it may not be seen. Only an X-ray examination will properly reveal decay in the surfaces of adjoining teeth.

Not only is the X-ray of value in locating infected roots and areas of decay but Dr. Simpson points out that it reveals other conditions that could not be found otherwise such as bone fractures, pulp conditions and gum and bone disease. The exact position and condition of teeth that have failed to come through the gums to the surface, and also any "extra" teeth are easily seen by the X-ray.

While physicians and dentists are mostly interested in searching for infection in the roots of teeth, Dr. Simpson points out that preventing teeth from becoming infected is really more important. Because the infection comes on slowly and usually painlessly, both patient and dentist may overlook the need of regular X-ray examination of the teeth. The X-ray is the only way of telling whether infection is present.

If, then, your dentist suggests it, have an X-ray examination of your teeth. It is a real investment in health.

GIRL IN THE GREEN COAT

by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

CHAPTER 6

That morning, Peggy Hudson was all dressed, making toast in the kitchen and thoroughly grumpy about it. "Where have YOU been? You've been gone half an hour," she said, irritably. Then she turned around and looked at me and Emilie just behind me.

"My heavens," she said, "what's happened?"

"There's a man murdered downstairs—in Jan's studio. It's Gil Castle, I used to know him. He's been shot. It's just terrible," I said. "I phoned the office and Strom had already phoned the police. They're coming now. Mr. Strom found him."

"And Jan?" Peg asked.

Do you know I'd hardly thought of Jan after that first minute? What with recognizing Gil, and everybody looking queerly at everyone else, I hadn't got around to wondering about him.

"Why Jan isn't there yet. I thought he might be, and I really went down there to try to borrow some oranges, and then I found—"

Peggy, big, husky Peggy who is five feet ten and boasts that she can hang drapes better than any man in the business, had just quietly fainted on the kitchen floor. She crumpled up and went down like a slow-motion picture.

Peggy, doing a thing like that! And right at this minute, when I wanted to dash right back, talk to the police, and phone the office again. I turned to Emilie. I thought she'd have sense enough to look after Peg.

Emilie was sitting on one of the kitchen chairs looking at me, and she turned white as the porcelain table top. She was going to faint, too!

Two of them. And I had been calling myself chicken.

I didn't dare wait another minute. Fainting isn't dangerous if you don't fall and crack your skull. Peg was already safe on the kitchen floor. I manoeuvred the dead weight of Emilie onto the floor, too, and then I ran.

Two police inspectors, both of them strangers to me, were taking charge when I got back downstairs. I got as far as the open door when Frank Heney, our ace camera man, tore down the corridor and yelled, "Where is it?" to me. I pointed, and we both went in.

The younger of the two inspectors said hello to Heney and did not seem too surprised to see him, but the other one, the big, tough type, was all burned up. He had just that minute finished telephoning headquarters and he knew that Heney couldn't have got it that fast.

"A little bird told me," Frank said, grinning and getting ready to screw in another bulb.

"Old Frank knows all the birds," the good looking inspector whose name was Geary, said, but the tough one, whose name turned out to be Hare, would not let it go at that. So Frank introduced me and explained that I had phoned the office and I thought he was going to get the handcuffs right out.

How did I know there was a murder in the Roller building? What was I doing there at 7:45 in the morning?

Of course, I said I lived there and happened to be a reporter on The Times, so I naturally telephoned my office.

Why didn't I telephone police headquarters instead? Didn't I know that any citizen's duty in a case of murder was to notify the police and not try to get a cheap newspaper scoop while the murderer escaped and ignorant busybodies destroyed all the evidence?

He made me mad enough to forget my almost guilty feeling at being quizzed by the law and I said, a shade too pertly, that the police had already been notified by Mr. Strom who found the body when I happened along, and if my office worked faster than his I didn't feel that it was my fault.

Of course, it is a mistake to argue with an officer and I regretted it before the words were out of my mouth. It was the strain, the knowledge that everyone, even I, who didn't have a thing to do with it, was under suspicion.

Everyone felt it, and everyone said something he regretted — or held back something he wished he had told—before the day was out. The thing that I couldn't understand was what brought a man like Gil Castle to a shabby old studio building like ours. Unless it was to see Jan, and if it was to see Jan how did he get murdered? I'd as soon suspect myself as Jan. Jan simply couldn't do a thing like that no matter what the provocation. And what had any of the others to do with a man like Gil Castle?

Jan was the only one on the second floor, all the other studios were vacant. On the third there was Miss Martin, Mr. and Mrs. Strom and Mr. and Mrs. Utz.

Miss Martin was a squat, red-faced spinster of about 45, with untidy mouse-colored hair, fat sloping shoulders, flat chest and big hips. You know the type. She and her little corset and lingerie shop would not interest a Gil Castle.

Neither would the Stroms and their "Furs, Quality Work at Reasonable Rates." If Gil Castle bought furs he didn't buy them from the Stroms.

Sam Utz was just a second rate photographer and the bride had come out from Nebraska to marry him. They wouldn't know Gil Castle.

Neither would Fissel, Madame Hurd or McMurray on the fourth floor front, nor Emilie Raymond, fourth floor rear. And on the fifth there was just Peggy and I.

Fissel was a middle-aged, pompous individual who high-hatted us all but I suspect had a pretty hard time of it, for his violin pupils were few. Madame Hurd and Mr. McMurray both taught vocal and hated each other. But what had that to do with Gil Castle? Emilie Raymond was attractive enough to interest any man and she had half a dozen suitors, but Gil wasn't one of them. We passed her door every time we turned up that last flight of stairs on our way to our own and in a small building like ours everyone's business and everyone's callers are pretty well known to everyone else.

On the whole, we were a pretty harmless lot, and I don't think that the police ever suspected that it was one of us. The questioning was rather perfunctory, but even so everyone was jittery and there were some rather strange accounts. I was worried about Jan because Sam Utz was already telling Miss Martin—the only one who would listen to him—that he thought the police were wasting their time questioning a lot of innocent people who didn't have anything to hide, and not finding out just why ONE person was missing.

"Look," Utz was saying. "They find the guy dead in his studio, see? Now he's skipped. Now I ask you, how does it point?"

Before I had a chance to answer I was called back for more questioning, and there was a little buzz of comment and I felt them all looking at me, even drawing back a little as if they weren't too sure of me, either. After all I was the only one who knew Castle, and if I hadn't had a perfectly good alibi I might have been really worrying.

I told Inspector Hare about the vacant studio door being open and about my feeling that there was someone in the hall and described how I even saw the door close, ever so slowly.

"And that door is ALWAYS locked!" I finished, thinking I was being an intelligent witness.

Inspector Hare shook his head. "The janitor says no," he said.

"Why, it's always kept locked. All the vacant doors are kept locked." I cried.

"Send the janitor in again," Hare said.

Mr. Grant came in, his worn derby in his hand. He seemed to have shrunk over night. He looked smaller and older than he had ever looked.

"Now, Dad," the inspector bellowed, "what did you tell me about your keys. Come, come, speak up. The keys?"

Poor Mr. Grant pointed to the key-ring on the table beside Hare. He gulped. "I gave them to you, sir."

"Sure you did, Dad. Don't get excited. Now, try to remember. Did you lock up when you left at nine last evening?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did you say all the vacant studios were locked?"

"Yes, sir. And the front door. I tried it carefully, same as I always do."

"All the doors?"

"Except 203. That's broken. That is the only one, though."

"And how long since you have been able to lock 203?" Inspector Hare asked, his eye on me.

Mr. Grant scratched his head.

"July or August, '38, when the jazz piano teacher moved out. Emmons, her name was. I could look it up in my book and be sure. If I wasn't under oath I'd say it was July, but it might not be. I could look in the book—"

"Never mind," Hare said. "That's all, Dad."

I said, "Well, I never tried the door, but I always thought it was locked. I never saw it open before. And I saw it move. Definitely. I'm sure I saw it move!"

I felt foolish. I felt my color rising and I felt more foolish.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was watching pop eat dinner, being steak under onions, and he started to make a funny face and ma quick said, Now William, I know beef isn't all it used to be in the tender days when nobody even thought of war, but the butcher declared and repeated to me that this steak is not tuff.

By gollies that's good news, pop said. The butcher knows more about meat sycology than I do and I'm willing to take his word for it. In fact I'm glad to be set right, because this confounded steak has been trying to act tuff, and now that I know I dont need to be afraid of it I'm just going to call its bluff, he said.

And he got up and started to make fists at his piece of steak and talk to it out of the side of his mouth, saying, Get up off that plate and fight, you cowering cow. Put up your dukes, you cringing slab of bovine putty. You think you're tuff, heh? Well I'm tuffer, see? he said.

Now William for land sakes, ma said, and pop said, Dont be worried on my account, my dear, the butcher was right, this steak never saw a tuff day in its life. All that hard stuff is just put on, and if it talks back to me I'll pulverize it with a left jab and a right hook, he said.

And he started to make fists at the platter with the rest of the steak on it, saying All right I'll take the whole gang of you, see? Are you a steer or a mouse? Any slice of beef that tries to get tuff with me has got to have a certificate from the butcher, see? So, you claim you're one of these hard boiled steaks that are good for the jaws and bad for the knife, heh? Well you got to show me? he said, and ma said, Oh all right, William, for land sakes I'll speak to the butcher about it.

Then I'll stop speaking to the steak about it, pop said.

Which he did.

SHIP SHORTAGE HANDICAPS JAPS

Allies Have Destroyed About Two Million Tons of Her Cargo Ships

Washington, Aug. 18—(AP)—An acute shipping shortage resulting largely from Allied torpedoes, shells and bombs is making it difficult for Japan to get at her newly-won East Indian riches.

The Netherlands Information Bureau estimated today, on the basis of Tokyo broadcats and information available in Australia, that the Japanese have suffered a net loss of 500,000 to 750,000 tons of merchant shipping since the war began.

The Japanese have said on several occasions that they needed 20,000,000 tons or more of merchant shipping to exploit the conquered areas. Yet Japan had only 6,000,000 tons of merchant ships at the end of 1941, and since then she has built only an estimated 600,000 to 700,000 tons.

In addition she has captured perhaps 500,000 tons, the bureau added, but nearly 2,000,000 tons of Japanese cargo ships are reported to have been sunk by the Allies.

Short of steel, the Japanese have concentrated on building wooden ships in Kobe and Formosa, the Philippines and the Netherlands East Indies.

U.L. COHEN WANTS GOV'T POLICY MADE CLEAR

Says He Will Not Take Part in Controversial Cases of Labor Board

Ottawa, Aug. 18—(CP)—U. L. Cohen, K.C., of Toronto, a member of the three-man National War Labor Board, said today he did not propose to take any part in controversial cases before the board until government policy has been made clear.

In a letter to Mr. Justice C. P. McTague, Board Chairman, Mr. Cohen said that it was not a secret that the board had been compelled to operate "within severe limitations of unsatisfactory and inadequate legislation and prevailing administrative policy."

This had meant that the board had to subscribe to conclusions which had not been "in harmony with our own ideas of what is sound or just or in the national interest."

"We have even found ourselves driven by the letter of the law to depart from the principles enunciated in our own public statement which we issued on the day of the announcement of our appointment," he continued.

Limitations on Work

Mr. Cohen, who frequently represented labor organizations as counsel before his appointment to the board, said Mr. Justice McTague as well as himself had realized the limitations placed on their work, and had instituted an inquiry for the purpose of obtaining the widest possible consultation before recommending to the government and the public what they thought was wise as to new legislation or new administrative policy in respect to labor matters.

"We have, however, both agreed that Section 25, the pivotal wage section of the Wage Control Order is unsatisfactory in substance and form and should be amended."

In view of this position, Mr. Cohen said it appeared to him to "be quite improper" to continue to sit on cases and decide the rights of people with the possible result of being obliged to render "unjust, and, in the national interest unwise decisions."

Neighbor Says Light Burning In Oakes' Bedroom

Three Times He Saw Light in Early Morning of Day Oakes Was Slain

Nassau, Bahamas, Aug. 18 (CP)—Special Prosecutor Alfred F. Adderley said yesterday the government expected to complete presentation of evidence next week against Alfred de Marigny, accused of slaying his wealthy father-in-law, Sir Harry Oakes.

His statement was made during debate on a motion to adjourn the preliminary hearing for de Marigny until next Tuesday. The delay was granted despite objections by Godfrey Higgs, defence attorney.

Howard Lightbourn, a neighbor, testified that a light was burning in de Marigny's bedroom during the early morning of July 8, when Sir Harry was slain.

Lightbourn said he awoke at 12.30, at 1.45 and again at 4, and each time saw the light blazing.

Newell Kelly, manager of the Oaks' Nassau estate, described relations between Sir Harry and de Marigny. He said de Marigny had threatened to kick Sir Harry, and that Sir Harry had vowed to horsewhip de Marigny.

On cross examination, however, he testified that he accompanied Sir Harry to a party given by de Marigny at Palm Beach last year. A few day later, he said, the two played golf together.

Ubiquitous Army Jeep Has New Fire-Fighter Role

First of fifteen "jeeps" to be converted by the Canadian Army for use as fire-fighting equipment has rolled out of the Canadian Mechanical Transport Shops at Ottawa. This is a side view of the world's first "jeep" fire-engine. — (Canadian Army Photo).

Ottawa, Aug. 18 — Add one coat of flashy red paint, a pump and a housand feet of hose to a "jeep" and you have the Canadian Army's newest fire-fighting weapon.

First two of an estimated fifteen jeeps to be converted into miniature fire engines recently rolled out of the Canadian Mechanical Transport Shop at Ottawa. They will be used in coastal areas.

The converted jeeps will join a fleet of heavier fire reels now in use at Canadian training centres. They are expected to be particularly valuable in mountainous and wooded areas.

Feature of the army's newest fire-fighting equipment is a Barton type pump which is operated by the jeep's motor. Mounted forward of the radiator, the pump can be put into action in seconds.

Multiple uses of the jeep are well-known to the manufacturers but the Canadian experiment has aroused special interest. Observers and engineers were sent to Ottawa some time ago and their technical knowledge put to use in the conversion process.

STAFF CHAT IN A WAR JEEP

Admiral William F. Halsey, U.S.N., commander of the South Pacific force, and Major-General John H. Hester, RIGHT, commanding general of the Russell Islands occupation force, sit in an open jeep under coconut palms on the Russells and discuss plans. The Russells are the most beautiful of the Solomons group and the most forward Allied front to the Japs in this area.

CANADIAN GUNNERS BACKED ATTACK IN SICILY

The success of Canadian troops in Sicily has been due in no small measure to the accuracy and efficiency of Canadian gunners who have covered advancing infantry with formidable fire power. Here, Canadian gunners of a Western Canada field battery, working from a good stock of shells, pound German positions near Nissoria.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 18—(CP) — The mining groups were slightly weaker and the industrials were stronger in the early sessions on the Toronto Stock Exchange while the Western Oils held steady in the average. Volume slumped further to 181,000 shares for the first three hours.

In a continuation of the creeping advance of last week Rubbers supplied the principal momentum. Some fair gains were registered by Industrial Specialties. Steels and Motors and Store Stocks were modestly higher near the fourth hour.

The market's tone of quiet confidence was taken as indicating a better adjustment of lately revised ideas bearing on the duration of the war and the problems of industrial reconversion.

The Canadian section was firm with Canadian Pacific and Lake Shore holding unchanged and Dome Mines and Hiram Walker spurting ahead. On the Bond, market Canada 4s were steady.

Stocks given effective support included Goodyear, Goodrich, Chrysler, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, Caterpillar Tractor, American Telephone and Westinghouse. Most shares in minus territory had only negligible losses.

"Miss War Worker" Contestants

ANN ROGERS

Stewart Warner

ANN RODGERS, 111 N. Front St., has spent the last nine months with the Stewart-Warner-Alemite Co., Ltd., as a drill press operator and says she likes the work very much. It is a different kind of work than that usually done by women before the war, but Ann believes that, although it might sound strange to say it, the war has been fortunate for women inasmuch as it has opened an entirely new field to them and made it possible to prove that they can do a man's job if necessary.

Before coming to the Alemite Co., Ann was employed by the John Inglis Company in Toronto where she worked for about six months. Her home is in Camforth and she returned here to take up this essential work for patriotic reasons.

Ann hasn't given much thought to what she will do after the war but she thinks she would like to go home and rest. The strain of war work is not telling on her, but it would be pleasant to just sit down and rest, was the way Ann put it.

She is interested in sports, but mainly as a spectator, and is a staunch supporter of the company baseball team.

JEAN CORNEAL

Deacon

JEAN CORNEAL, 50 Grier Street, is an employee of the Deacon Shirt Company Ltd., of long standing, having been with them for over three years. It was her first job after leaving school and, with three-and-a half years service in, might be considered one of the original Miss War Workers. At the present time she is working in the Aerial Division of the plant where she is operating a sewing machine and turning out flying suits for the R. C. A. F., and the Fleet Air Arm of the R. C. N.

Her plans for after the war are very definite; she intends to take a business course and train herself to be a stenographer. She likes office work and wants to go into this type of work when the war is over. She is putting in several hours each week on her studies of shorthand, but is unable to give it the attention she would like because of her war work.

Jean was first baseman for the Deacon girls' softball team before that aggregation was dropped from the league. She has a very active interest in all sports, especially bowling and skating, and it is obvious that baseball holds her interest.

Working with a number of girls in the plant she finds time to talk with them and learn things about them she might not learn outside of their place of work, and she finds them a fine group.

GEORGINA BELL

Reliance

GEORGINA BELL, 25 Dunbar St., works as a welder at the Reliance Aircraft Co., on the night shift. She is the only entry in the Kiwanis "Miss War Worker" contest who is on the night shift and she says she likes working at night. She didn't specify any reason for this preference but it is assumed that this shift gives her more time to spend during the day to wander around and inspect the contents of the Front Street windows.

Before coming to Reliance, Georgina worked for Loblaw's Groceteria on Front Street. She claims to like welding work to clerking and thinks that every girl who can be spared from similar positions should get into war work and do everything she can to help win the war.

She wants to keep on with her work when the war ends and hopes to be able, someday, to compete with any man as a welder. This is a serious ambition for a young girl and one that should call for the deepest admiration of all.

She likes all kinds of games and sports, dancing and social activities that the Reliance Company arranges for their employees. She like the girls she works with and has a great admiration for all of them.

ILLA KEENE

Stewart Warner

ILLA KEENE, 22 Donald Street, is the third of the Stewart-Warner-Alemite Co., Ltd., entries to the Kiwanis "Miss War Worker" contest. She has been employed by the company for eight months on turret lathe work, although not all that time was the one type of work, before she went to work on the lathe she was an inspector in the plant. She says she likes being right on the job better than doing inspections.

Prior to going to the Alemite Co., Illa was a clerk in Zellar's Ltd., for six months, and before that she was a student at the Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School.

When asked what were her plans for after the war, Illa echoed the sentiments of most of the other contestants; that she wants to keep on with her work. Running a lathe is the most interesting work she has ever done and, as far as she knows, there is not apt to be any diminishing of this interest.

Illa works with both men and girls in the plant and likes all of them. She attends all the company dances and parties and usually has a very good time. Outdoor sports do not appeal strongly to her, but that is only because her tastes are different. The contest appeals to Illa as a means of making an effort to attract other girls into essential war work at a time when they are most needed.

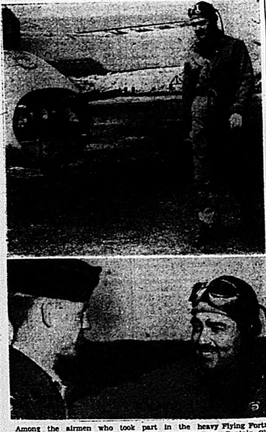
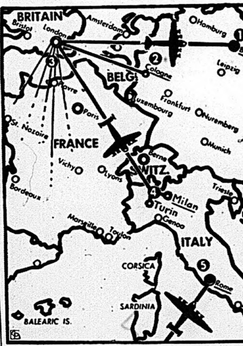
CLARK GABLE ON RHINE RAID



Among the airmen who took part in the heavy Flying Fortress bombing attack on the Ruhr Valley, Germany, was Captain Clark Gable. The former film star is pictured above after a return from a previous flight over enemy lines. He is serious, TOP, as he swings past the tail guns. He smiles, BOTTOM, while talking over the raid with one of his flying companions.

AXIS PARTNERS POUNDED



Allied planes continue to blast Axis key cities with increasing fury. Berlin (1) was revisited by speedy Mosquito bombers, while Flying Fortresses dropped their block-busters on the industrial area (2) around Cologne. At the same time, fighter craft blasted air fields in France (3). The heaviest blow was against Milan and Turin (4), in Italy, where large formations of R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. planes concentrated on armament-producing cities. Southward (5), warnings to Italy were emphasized by Allied bombers from Africa who dropped their bombs on railroad freight yards in Rome. Reports from Switzerland and the Italian frontier say Milan is a dead city filled with utter destruction.

Bombers String Necklaces Of Heavy Bombs Across 150 Nazi Planes Near Marseille

By RELMAN MORIN

Associated Press War Correspondent

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 18 (AP)—Heavy bombers strung necklaces of heavy bombs across a park of 150 German planes on French airfields near Marseille in their first attack on southern France yesterday, it was announced today at Allied headquarters.

Two heavy bombers were lost out of the big African-based force which hit the enemy airdromes at Istres Le Tube and Salon.

The loads of big fragmentation bombs aimed by precision bombardiers exploded among the parked aircraft, sending a storm of steel through the close-packed mass and causing what even cautiously-phrased official reports said was "heavy damage."

Other big bombs broke through the hangars and administration buildings, causing huge fires.

The airfields are about 25 miles northwest of Marseille.

Great fleets of medium bombers, fighter bombers and fighters based in Sicily meanwhile kept the war going full blast in pursuit of Axis infantry which escaped from Sicily, raking troop trains, truck convoys, roads, bridges and other targets in southern Italy with machine-gun and cannon fire and bomb blasts.

During the last hours of the German flight across the Strait of Ossina, it was discovered, Allied aircraft sank nine small craft, probably crowded with troops, and dropped bombs so close to a large number of others that it is doubtful if they escaped serious damage.

306 Axis Ships Destroyed, Damaged

In the 12 days between Aug. 5 and Aug 17 a total of 306 Axis ships and boats was destroyed or damaged while moving the beaten Axis arms over to the mainland, Allied headquarters said.

At least 34 ships are known to have been destroyed, 47 left dead in the water but still afloat after direct hits and the remainder severely damaged by near misses.

Usually conservative British and American air officers said they were surprised by the amount of damage they had been able to inflict in view of the shortness of the evacuation trip and the strength of the anti-aircraft umbrella raised over the operation.

Mass attacks —were directed at the Mattipaglia freight yards, a temporary bridge over the Angitola and a network of highways that converge in the vicinity of Castrovillare.

R.A.F. and American planes teamed to smash nine small craft including some Siebel ferries near the mainland shore. The beaches all the way from Reggio Calabria to Palmi were kept under ceaseless fire. Nine planes were lost during the day.

Hitting at sea-borne traffic along the Italian coast which the Germans were attempting to use for removal of troops because of the battered condition of mainland roads, fighter-bombers destroyed an E-boat, a 130-foot freighter, a smaller motor boat and five barges. They damaged two other E-boats, six Siebel ferries, 10 barges, three small motor boats and two 200 and 300-foot merchantmen.

Nine Aircraft Destroyed

Nine enemy aircraft were destroyed and others damaged, the war bulletin said.

The attacks on the mainland were chiefly directed at the communications centre of Castrovillaire near Salerno and the railroad yards at Battapaglia south of Naples and roads and railway bridges of southern Italy.

"Great damage" was caused in yesterday's heavy bomber attacks on the airdromes of Istres Le Tube and Salon in southern France, and many aircraft on the ground were destroyed and numerous hits scored on hangars, the communique said.

Eight enemy planes were shot down when they attacked Bizerte in Tunisia, the communique added. It said the Allies lost nine planes yesterday.

Fewer American Tourists Visit Belleville Dist.

The Belleville Chamber of Commerce reports a noticeale drop in American tourists visiting Belleville this summer. Mr. Owen Herity states that ordinarily the Chamber of Commerce receives hundreds of requests from these visitors for information about the city and surrounding district but this year there have been less than a dozen such requests.

Rationing of gasoline accounts for the diminished influx of Americans to Belleville and practically every other place in Canada. Americans are permitted by the Dominion Government to purchase twelve gallons of gasoline during their stay in Canada. Many people are forced to remain at home on account of their work, increased demands on their time for essential war work and other reasons directly connected with the war effort as it is being preserved in America. This is felt not only by Americans but by Canadians visiting the United States as well.

Chicago, (AP)—Stan Musial of the St. Louis Cardinals is way out in front in the batting race in the National League, the latest figures giving him an average of .353, with a total of 154 hits including 31 doubles and 15 triples. The outfielder is 28 points ahead of Billy Herman, Brooklyn.

A. Sgt. G. E. Merry Killed in Action

Mrs. Grace Merry, 150 Bay Street, Kingston, received word over the weekend that her husband, A. Sgt. Gerald Ernest Merry had been killed in action while serving with the Canadian Active Army Overseas in Sicily.

The message, which was received from the records' office, Ottawa, said Sgt. Merry had been killed on July 27. He was born in England but had lived in Canada for some years. He enlisted with Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment at Picton and later transferred to the Three Rivers Tank Regiment, with which he was serving when he met his death.

The last message which his wife received was shortly after he sailed for a distant point, which his wife believes was Sicily. He first trained in the infantry and was later a signal instructor at Barriefield.

He is survived by his wife and his mother, who resides in England, also sister and two brothers. The sister is an N.C.O. in the A.T.S. in England, while a brother Harry is a commissioned officer in the British Army. Another brother has been missing since the fall of Singapore and it is not known whether he was killed or wounded in that battle.

Pte. Clair L. Leavitt Reported Missing in Action in Sicily

Picton, Aug. 18 — Notification reaching next of kin yesterday revealed three more casualties among Prince Edward County men with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment in Sicily.

Private Clair L. Leavitt, son of Mrs. Harold G. Leavitt, is officially reported as missing.

Sergeant James P. Jenkins, son of Mrs. Bella Cruickshanks, Picton, and George Kellogg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kellogg, Cherry Valley, are reported wounded.

Mentioned in Dispatches

Sgt. Jenkinson has twice been mentioned in news dispatches from Sicily, one for taking part in the raid on the main Italian airport in Sicily, capturing hundreds of prisoners. He enlisted in 1939 and went overseas with the First Division. Finlay MacArthur, Picton, and Malcolm MacArthur, Gananoque, are half-brothers, and Mrs. Joe Vincent and Mrs. Lionel Hicks, Picton, both of whose husbands are in the services, are sisters.

From a newspaper story it is learned that Sgt. Jenkins suffered burns when he risked his life to extinguish flames on a truck when some bombs exploded. His action resulted in saving valuable materials.

Pte. Kellogg also went overseas in 1939. No details of the nature or extent of his wounds was given.

Reported Missing

"Deeply regret C4719 Private Clair Lewis Leavitt officially reported missing in action, 23rd July 1943. Further information follows when received, Director of Records, Ottawa."

The above telegram was received on Monday by Mrs. Louise Leavitt, Picton.

It is presumed he was in action in Sicily. He joined the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment on September 4, 1939, the day after the war was declared. In so doing he was following in the footsteps of his father, the late Sergeant Harold G. Leavitt, who served with the 155th Battalion in the Great War, and whose death occurred in Picton eight years ago to the day that Mrs. Leavitt received the notice stating her son was missing. Clair went overseas in December, 1939, with the First Canadian Contingent. He has a brother, Sergt. Harold E. Leavitt, who went overseas in 1940 with the South Saskatchewan Regiment, having enlisted while out West.

Clair was 36 years of age on May 25th. For seventeen years he was employed at the M. A. Branscombe and Son factory. He had many friends who sincerely sympathize with the bereaved mother and son.

Like his father, 25 years earlier, he went overseas in a unit commanded by Lt.-Col. Sherman Young and of which Major Gerald Ferguson was a member.

AMERICAN WARSHIPS SHELL ITALIAN MAINLAND

Heavy Explosions Caused at Palmi And Gioia Tauro

Air Fleets Pound Communication Lines Being Used By Axis Troops

GROUND FORCES QUIET

(By RELMAN MORIN)
(A.P. War Correspondent)

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 19 (AP) — American warships shelled the Italian mainland yesterday for the first time, developing violent explosions at Gioia Tauro and Palmi, and Allied air fleets deprived beaten Axis troops of respite by pounding communications throughout southern Italy, it was announced today.

"United States naval forces which had been supporting the advance of the (U.S.) 7th. Army in Sicily have taken up shelling military objectives on the Italian mainland now that the island has fallen," a communique said.

Power Installations Targets

Specific targets of the first thrust were bridges and power installations at Gioia Tauro and Palmi, on the Gulf of Gicia, 20 miles north of captured Messina.

Light bombers and fighter bombers carried out attacks on roads and railways which might be employed by the remnants of German and Italian forces which escaped from Sicily, pitting the tracks and destroying enemy vehicles.

"Medium bombers attacked bridges at Angitola and roads and rail communications at Pontiodi and Staletti," it was announced.

Limited Artillery Duel

Ground activity was limited to occasional exchanges of artillery fire across the Strait of Messina" headquarters announced.

Fighter-bombers left a small Axis naval vessel in a sinking condition off southern Sardinia and medium bombers sank an enemy merchant ship in the Gulf of Eufemia, just north of the Gulf of Gioia.

"The Bizerte area was again attacked by enemy aircraft last night," an aerial communique said. "Six enemy bombers were shot down. Two enemy aircraft were destroyed on the night of August 17 in addition to those already reported.

From all operations, three Allied aircraft are missing, the bulletin said.

Axis Losses Emphasized

The heavy toll inflicted upon the Axis forces during their brief defence of Sicily was emphasized in headquarters announcements.

It was stated the entire Italian 6th. Army was destroyed during the campaign, at least half of the soldiers donning civilian clothes and deserting, filtering back into the villages and hill areas of Sicily.

More than 130,000 Italians were captured, killed or wounded.

Officers said the Germans lost two complete divisions, killed, wounde or captured, and a large amount of heavy equipment including an unstated number of 60-ton Tiger tanks, many of which were seized intact and were capable of being put into immediate operation.

While "wrecking crews" of the Northwest African air forces chased Axis forces across southern Italy, Middle East squadrons maintained their offensive over the Eastern Mediterranean.

President Sends Congratulations To Eisenhower

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 19 (AP) — President Roosevelt in a message of congratulation from Quebec to Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower declared today "all of us are thrilled over the Sicilian campaign now successfully concluded in accordance with the timing and planning of the Allies."

The President's message follows:

"All of us are thrilled over the Sicilian campaign now successfully concluded in accordance with the timing and planning of the Allies.

"This is especially true when we realize that the enemy forces in Sicily amounted to 405,000 men.

"Events of the past 38 days show what can be done by teamwork based on preparation, training, timing and above all on gallantry on land, sea and in the air.

"From the ancient citadel of Quebec I send you my warm congratulations and to the officers and men of your command, British, Canadian, French and American, my thanks and enthusiastic approbation.

"Tell them: 'Well done'!"

Many Nazi Soldiers on Russian, Front Lose Faith in Hitler's Leadership

Stockholm, Aug. 19 —(AP)—Residents of Hamburg want peace, and many Nazi soldiers fighting on the Russian front no longer believe Hitler can lead them to victory, a 20-year-old Swede just returned through Hamburg from the Eastern Front said last night.

Sigfried Forsberg, who got out of the German Army when his mother discovered that by a previous marriage her son was still a Swedish citizen, was caught in the Allied bombings of Hamburg.

He gave the newspaper Dagens Nyheter the following general picture of conditions in Hamburg and on the eastern front:-

"I lived in Hamburg for 10 years, and as I bicycled around the city following the raids I was told that 10 per cent of the town was undamaged, but it looked to me as if everything was destroyed.

"You couldn't recognize the town. Everywhere were damaged buildings.

"Even before the last attacks, the people wanted peace, and after that everyone was saying: 'The only thing one now wants is peace.'

"It is a common sight now to see Hitler's picture thrown into the street.

"Air attacks against Germany have changed the attitude of the soldiers fighting on the Eastern Front. Their morale is still good, but they are worrying about what is happening back home. They still respect Hitler, but they don't believe he can lead them to victory."

Forsberg said that 17 and 18-year old boys were fighting with him southwest of Leningrad, indicating the strain already placed on Hitler's critical manpower supply.

He said that as he was returning from Russia through Poland he found the Poles still fighting the Germans, even hurling hand Grenades at them on the streets of Warsaw.

Patriots in Occupied Countries Warned To Make Final Preparations

NO TIME SET

By LEWIS HAWKINS
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Aug. 19 — (AP) — The Germans are moving troops into Italy in considerable strength, apparently intending to make a real fight for at least the northern end of that country, a competent British military informant said today.

"Several divisions" have been on the move to Italy from France and Germany in the last week or two, but an exact estimate of Nazi strength in Italy is not possible now, said this commentator who cannot be identified further.

From other sources came indications the Germans are not only moving into Italy, but that their troops from western and northern France have taken over the French coastal strength from the Italian borden to Toulon—previously garrisoned by Italian troops.

A radio broadcast in the name of the Allied high command told patriots in Occupied Europe last night to prepare for invasion of the continent which "might be near."

Italy Army Written Off

The best information in London before the fall of Sicily indicated the Germans had two or three divisions south of Naples on the Italian mainland and these plus perhaps 25,000 troops evacuated from the island would give the Germans a force of 50,000 to 75,000 for defence of Southern Italy—if they are still there.

With the Italian army fairly well written off as ineffective without German support, the question of Nazi strength in Southern Italy is regarded as a key factor affecting the next Allied step.

The majority of guesses here seemed to be that the German army is unlikely to risk large forces for long in Southern Italy where they face the danger of being cut off by landings to the north, but is quite likely to employ forces large enough to establish widespread positions to the north.

Unclear Where Line Will Be

It was still unclear just where this northern line was likely to be, but one from just north of Spezia on the west coast through Bologna to Rimini is the basis of much speculation.

The invasion message, read from the United Nations radio at Algiers and from BBC in London, urged patriots "to perfect all preparations in the shortest possible time."

The broadcast, directed primarily to the people of metropolitan France, declared a new phase of the European war, "the liberation of occupied countries," has begun now that the occupation of Sicily is complete.

"We obviously are not going to reveal where the blow will fall," the message said, then added: "People of the occupied country which is to be the first to welcome the armies of liberation will be notified at the last minute."

Until that time arrives, all patriots were asked to aim their actions toward perfecting preparations for giving assistance to the Allied invaders while at the same time exercising "the greatest care" that they do not fall into the hands of the enemy.

Must Be Ready

"All those elements which are to contribute in any way whatsoever to the success of eventual operations on French metropolitan territory must be fully equipped to carry out their task," said the broadcast.

"In the past you have heard similar messages from Allied headquarters," the announcers said in conclusion. "You have just heard one of greatest importance."

The invasion blow could fall from the hands of the victorious Sicilian armies now poised in Messina across from Italy or from the big concentrations of battle-eager troops waiting and training in England. Opinion is growing in Britain there may possibly be more than one diversionary blow accompanying major landings.

German commentators were quoted to the same effect in Stockholm dispatches to London morning newspapers.

Allied Political Strategy Looms Large at Quebec As Eden Joins Parley

By J. F. SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Quebec, Aug. 19—(CP)—A general review of Allied political strategy developed here today when Anthony Eden, British Foreign Secretary, went into conferences with President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill, to be joined later by the veteran United States Secretary of State, Cordell Hull.

Mr. Eden arrived here yesterday by plane after a direct flight from Foynes, Eire, giving the Quebec conference decided emphasis on the political, as distinct from the military, side. The arrival time of Mr. Hull is uncertain.

High on the list of subjects to be discussed by the Allied leaders is a unified stand on recognition of the French committee for national liberation; a policy toward Italy, perhaps involving Rome as an open city; and, finally political relations with Russia, particularly as they affect the German satellite nations in the Balkans.

It is taken for granted here Mr. Eden will fly to Moscow after the conclusion of the Quebec conference to give Premier Stalin a detailed report on the deliberations, perhaps accompanied by some high-ranking American official like Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State.

No Details on Visit

No further details were available today on President Roosevelt's projected visit to Ottawa, scheduled for early next week.

High officials of the conference were entertained at dinner in the Citadel last night by Prime Minister Mackenzie King, who included a number of leading Canadians in the list of 50 guests.

The highlight of the conference yesterday was Mr. Eden's arrival, almsot 24 hours after the President came in from Washington, to complete the list of principals. With Mr. Eden in the big British clipper-type ship which alighted in the St. Lawrence at the base on Wolfe's Cove was Sir Alexander Cadogan, Undersecretary at the British Foreign Office and Brendan Bracken, British Minister of Information.

Given New Twist

Mr. Eden's arrival gave a new twist to the conference, hitherto regarded as primarily a strategic meeting, with the Canadian, British and American chiefs of staff and their advisers plotting military moves in global warfare. However, the military conference continues in the old Citadel, with high-ranking officers called in to discuss strategic problems with the President and Mr. Churchill.

It may develop the outstanding results of the Quebec conference are in the political, not the military field.

RAILWAY ESCAPE LINES FOR NAZIS NEARLY CLOSED

German Garrison Inside Kharkov May be Cut Off

2,000 NAZIS KILLED

Moscow, Aug. 19—(AP) — Red Army troops, slogging ahead through dogged German resistance south of Kharkov today were approaching the two remaining railway escape lines supplying the beleaguered Nazi garrison inside the key Ukraine bastion.

A Soviet communique last night announced capture of Zmyev, 20 miles south of Kharkov, in a "decisive assault" in which 1,200 German shock troopers were killed. Zmyev is less than 10 miles from the Kharkov-Lozovaya railway, main enemy supply line.

A few miles beyond lies the Kharkov-Krasnograd spur, which also must be severed before the Russians can close the Kharkov escape corridor, now less than 30 miles wide. The Kharkov-Poltava railroad had been cut earlier.

Northwest and west of Kharkov the Russians also reported overall gains of seven miles, capturing more than 50 additional towns and villages. Stubbornly contesting every fortified place, the Germans slowly fell back after, suffering another 2,000 casualties.

In the northeastern suburbs of shell-wrecked Kharkov, meanwhile Soviet shock troops kept up the see-saw, street-to-street battle agains reinforced Nazi units.

In the wheeling movement south of Kharkov, which took them across the Donets River to Zmyev, the Soviet battalions were said to have scooped up great quantities of enemy war material.

Fresh German Reserves

Gains in the Kharkov area were made against fresh German reserves. These held momentarily, but superior enveloping tactics enabled the Red Army to continue its advance the Russians said. They reported capture of a factory strongpoint from counter-attacking Nazi troops yesterday.

At the northern end of the 400-mile active front, converging Russian divisions were blasting the approaches to Bryansk from three sides and Soviet dispatches said 1,350 German dead were counted. North of Bryansk, on the Spas Deemnsk sector, an advantageous point was stormed and here another 1,000 Nazis were slain.

The Bryansk operations yesterday resulted in Soviet gains of from four to six miles in which 40 villages were captured, including the rail junctions of Seryezovka, 21 miles to the northeast and Malinka, 20 miles to the east, the communique declared. Earlier reports had placed advancing Red Army troops at one point within 15 miles of Bryansk.

TWO SPECTACULAR RAIDS DESTROY 215 JAP PLANES

Fliers, Ground Crewmen Killed at Wewak Exceed 1,500

SHATTERING BLOWS

Allied Headquarters, Southwest Pacific, Aug. 19. (AP)—The Japanese have been bloodily repulsed by a United States surface force in their first attempt to retake Vella Lavella Island in the Central Solomons, occupied last Sunday by American invasion forces.

A spokesman at headquarters of Admiral William F. Halsey's South Pacific Command said hundreds of barge-borne Japanese troops were killed or captured during a frustrated landing attempt early Tuesday. The trust thus came a bare 48 hours after the first American amphibious units landed unopposed on this northerly island of the New Georgia group.

Of an estimated 1,500 to 2,200 troops in the enemy counter-invasion force, not more than 300 succeeded in reaching the island. And while there has been no ground action as yet, the spokesman said "unquestionably there are small groups" of the enemy roaming Vella Lavella.

The landing attempt was repelled by a light naval force which intercepted between 20 to 30 Japanese barges packed with 75 or more men each and a screening force of four destroyers.

In the engagement that followed, allied headquarters announced that one Japanese destroyer probably was sunk, another severely damaged and a third was hit. American warships routed the enemy destroyers which turned for home bases and then wiped out most of the barge. A few barges escaped to make landings on the northeast coast. The allied communique announcing the victory also disclosed a small United States cargo ship was sunk on the same day by enemy aircraft.

On the left wing of the Allied offensive in the South Pacific, Japan's hour of reckoning in northeastern New Guinea was brough much nearer by airblows too staggering to permit early recovery.

At Wewak, a once potent force of 225 planes was reduced to an impotent ten in two spectacular raids by Allied bombers and fighters Tuesday and Wednesday. Japanese fliers and ground crewmen killed exceeded 1,500.

YOUTH AND MEN, 16 TO 40 SUBJECT TO C.E.T. ORDER

Applies to All Those Married or Single Or Whether or Not Liable to Call-Up

MUCH WORK INVOLVED

Ottawa, Aug. 19 —(CP)— Labor Minister Mitchell announced today that all youths and men aged 16 to 40 have been made subject to existing and further compulsory employment transfer orders under a recent order-in-council.

Previously, the orders—used to shift workers from non-essential to essential industries—applied only to men designated for the compulsory military call-up and to youths aged 16, 17 and 18. Now they apply to all youths and men aged 16 to 40, inclusive, whether married or single and whether or not liable to military call-up.

To Issue 6th Order Soon

Mr. Mitchell said the sixth compulsory employment transfer order will be issued shortly. The order, which will relate only to the occupations and industries included in the first five orders, will bring under the previous orders all youths and men from 16 to 40 who have not already been covered.

Mr. Mitchell said the recent order-in-council amends section 210

Probably Name Briton to Head Invasion Army

London, Aug. 19 — (CP) — The London Daily Mail's correspondent in Quebec, Don Iddon, said in a dispatch today that the Churchill-Roosevelt conference is studying plans for naming a commander-in-chief, probably a Briton, to head a "direct invasion front in which huge armies now massed in Britain will be hurled against the continent at a number of points."

General arrangements for a "receivership" of the Italian state, and selection of a commander-in-chief in Southern Asia, also are being studied, he said.

Iddon said his information was that Lt.-Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell, United States commander in China, Burma, and India, would head the far Eastern Command whose responsibility would be to retake Burma and open a drive against Japan while Gen. Douglas MacArthur's forces push up from the South Pacific.

Once Italy falls, the correspondent said, Britain would have only a modest use for her naval power in European waters and large numbers of British ships would be moved to the Pacific to join the American fleet.

King Sends Praise To Eisenhower On Sicilian Victory

London, Aug. 19 —(CP)— The King today congratulated Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower and the forces under his command upon the successful conclusion of the Sicilian campaign which, he said, caused rejoicing throughout the British Empire.

He asked that the Allied commander-in-chief convey "to my British and Canadian troops special assurance of my pride in their share of this victory."

His message said:—

"On the final accomplishment of the occupation of Sicily I wish to send to you and all members of the forces that you command with such distinction my heartfelt congratulations on a great achievement.

"Throughout the British Empire we have watched with admiration the ordered progress of the campaign by sea, by land and by air. We rejoice at its successful conclusion.

"I should be grateful if you would convey to my British and Canadian troops special assurance of my pride in their share of this victory."

385 Were Killed 1,200 Wounded And 310 Missing

Casualties Reach Exact Total of Those Suffered at Hong Kong

CONSIDERED MODERATE

Ottawa, Aug. 19 (CP) — Casualties to Canadian troops in the Sicilian campaign totalled 1,895 up to August 4, the Defence Department announced today.

Confirming an earlier announcement from Algiers it was disclosed that by an odd coincidence the casualty total for Sicily was exactly the same as the 100 per cent casualty toll suffered by the Canadian arms at Hong Kong, its first heavy loss of this war.

The text of the department's statement said:

"Advices from overseas to the Department of National Defence give the numbers of casualties suffered by the Canadian troops in Sicily between July 10 and 6 a.m., August 4 as follows:

	Officers	Other ranks
Killed	25	360
Wounded	100	1100
Missing	10	300
Totals	135	1760

Considered Moderate

"In view of the fact that the fighting had been particularly heavy during the latter part of the period covered by these figures, and in proportion to the number of troops engaged in the campaign, the casualties among our troops are considered to be quite moderate, averaging about 70 a day for the 25 day period.

"Detailed official casualty lists, giving names and other particulars of the Canadian personnel killed, wounded and missing in the Sicilian operations, are now being issued. To date two lists, totalling 133 names have been made public and others will follow from time to time."

In Sicily, a division was engaged, the 1st., under command of Maj.-Gen. Guy Simonds of Kingston, Ont. Proportionate to the number of troops engaged, the losses were very small compared with the last major Canadian army engagement, the battle of Dieppe when out of two brigades and an army tank battalion, a total of about 5,000 troops, more than 3,000 casualties were reported.

At Hong Kong a combined Canadian-British-Indian force resisted

MIGHTY FLEET OF ALLIED PLANES CROSSES CHANNEL

Daylight Foray Resumes Aerial Offensive Against Axis Fortress

PATROL BOAT SUNK

London, Aug. 19—(CP)—A mighty fleet of Allied planes flew out across the English Channel in daylight today to resume the aerial offensive against the European Fortress of the Axis.

The formations which headed over the Strait of Dover included bombers and fighters and the roar of their engines resounded over the coast almost without interruption for more than two hours.

R. A. F. fighter-bombers carried out sweeps over France and the low countries last night, destroying a German patrol boat off Ostend, bombing the Poix airport and shooting up eight railway locomotives, it was announced.

One of the raiders was listed as missing.

There were no reports of bombings last night by the heavy bombers of the R. A. F. and R. C. A. F which apparently were grounded by bad weather over the continent after 72 hours of unprecedented and almost continuous activity by British, Canadian and American airmen.

Latest target of the mass R. A. F. and R. C. A. F. precision attacks was Peenemuende, Nazi centre for the development of aircraft radio-location devices and armament, which was hit Tuesday night. Feature of this smash was that a squadron of R. C. A. F. Lancasters went along for the first time with the Canadian formations.

Up to that time the R. C. A. F. had been using Wellington, Hallifax and Sterling bombers exclusively, and this was the first announcement that the biggest of the bombers were being supplied to the Dominion command.

After the raid, Flying Officer W. D. Webster of Montreal commented: "We were out to wipe the town off the map and our kites came right down low to make sure of it. We had to run through some of the heaviest flak I have ever seen, but it paid off in results."

First Anniversary of Dieppe Raid To Be Observed by Prayers, Parades

By DOUGLAS AMARON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Somewhere in England, Aug. 19 —(CP Cable)—The first anniversary of the Battle of Dieppe passed almost unobserved in Canadian army camps in England today as soldiers trained eagerly for the greater battles yet to be waged on the European continent. There are, however, plans for the observance of the anniversary this weekend with prayers and church parades.

But today for the most part the anniversary was observed with informal after-breakfast discussions in the mess halls of army camps scattered throughout the country here as officers and men recalled briefly the flaming action that took place on the beaches around Dieppe just a year ago. Then they plunged immediately into the arduous training program laid out for them.

This was especially true of battalions which fought at Dieppe. Few officers or men who fought on French beaches are left with the units, but other soldiers have replaced those who have gone.

Dieppe units already share in another campaign, for they provided hundreds of men attached as reinforcements to 1st Division troops in Sicily.

New men have come to the Dieppe battalions in recent months and this means that much of the territorial distinction which marked these units has been lost.

Men From Every Province

One of the boxes contained ladies' wearing apparel while the other was filled with fruit jars. The vehicle was parked by Henry Johnson, 26 Pickering Street, Toronto, and the goods were stolen during a short period of absence of the owner. Police were notified.

Otherwise in police circles matters were purely routine, although local authorities were called to East Moira Street, Wednesday afternoon where several teen-aged lads were causing a disturbance. The boys were dispersed with a warning.

School Opening Set for Sept. 7

Toronto — Department of Education officials yesterday announced that Ontaria schools will open Sept. 7, the statutory day of opening.

Asked whether some students would be allowed to remain away a few weeks to assist in harvest operations or if opening of some schools would be delayed, officials said "that matter will be taken up with the new Minister of Education (Premier Drew) right away to see if some change is contemplated."

Last year school opening was delayed several weeks to permit students to help in the fields.

Officials said the Lieutenant-Governor in Council has the power to postpone the opening of schools if he desires, but that so far the matter has not been discussed.

Late yesterday Premier Drew was sworn in as Premier and Minister of Education. The education minister in Harry Nixon's Government, defeated in the Aug. 4 election, was Dr. Duncan McArthur, who died suddenly a few weeks ago.

10% POTATO INCREASE EXPECTED IN ONTARIO

Toronto, Aug. 19 —(CP)— The Ontario Department of Agriculture, in a statement today said that although this year's provincial potato crop is considerably below the five-year average, weather conditions to date have been favorable for the growing crop.

"This fact, together with the increased attention being given by way of caring for the crop by specialized potato growers may account for the 10 per cent increase in production over last year."

R. E. Goodin of the crops, seeds and weeds branch of the Agriculture Department said it is early yet to predict final yields and warned growers to guard against disease among potatoes.

Miss Ella Davis Wins Kiwanis Contest for 'Miss War Worker'

Highlight of Carnival Draws Interesting and Enthusiastic Assembly

GIVEN A CHEQUE

A huge and enthusiastic crowd of spectators swarmed about the stage on Front St., on Wednesday evening, to witness the highlight of the Kiwanis Karnival, the beauty competition for the title of "Miss War Worker," and to voice their choice of a winner. For weeks now the contest, sponsored by the Kiwanis Club of Belleville, has proven itself of great interest to not only the factories, but to the people of the city. There was very keen competition on the part of the contestants, and after a long and careful selection by a select set of judges, Miss Ella Davis, of the Bristol Aircraft Company, was given the title of honor and presented with a cheque of $25. Miss Doris Reid, of the Reliance Aircraft, came a very close second and was the winner of the $15. Presented with cheques of $5 each were Mrs. Phyllis Foster, of the Reliance and Miss Aileen Wright, also of the Reliance. The presentation of the winning sash and money was made to Miss Davis by Section Officer Joy Bristol, who also acted as one of the judges. Miss Ruth Latchford, who had won the title of "Miss War Worker" for 1942 also presented the winner of the beauty title with one dozen red roses. The board of judges consisted of "Dit" Clapper, captain and assistant coach of the Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League; Squadron Leader W. H. Cooke, of No. 5 I.T.S. and Section Officer Joy Bristol, of Mountain View. The duties of master-of-ceremonies were very ably carried out by Mr. Harold Carruthers.

The competitors, whose list was included in another issue, paraded across the specially constructed stage before the group of judges to the music of several piano selections played by Mrs. Grant. The judges found it very difficult to choose a winner because of the bristling competition and were not swayed in their opinion by the crowd of spectators.

Many Fine Features at Karnival Attract Another Large Crowd

The second night of the Kiwanis Street Karnival brought out several hundreds more people than did the first night, many of them coming out for the final judging of "Miss War Worker," where they crowded around the platform where the girls paraded before the judges. The bingo tables remained the most popular of the games and a large quantity of prizes were won by the numbered cards enthusiasts.

Following the announcement in yesterday's paper of the winning of a cabinet radio brought this wheel into much greater favor and a second radio was won by Marguerite Kathleen Jackson, Carrying Place. The winning of this second radio brought this wheel to a close due to the inability to purchase further radios. The two radios will be on display on the last night of the Karnival and delivered to their owners, PO. Gainsforth and M . Jackson Friday morning.

The throng of people moved from one end of the Karnival to the other and played the games of chance with obvious interest and considerable profit to many. Tickets were sold on "The Good Ship Pirate" and on the hope chest in aid of underprivileged children with the drawing to be made tonight at eleven o'clock sharp.

J. Lee Wins Watch

The nightly attendance prize of a Gruen wristwatch was won last night by Jack Lee, 12 Everett St. The tickets on this watch are given free to every person playing the games. A record number of tickets to be drawn from is expected tonight and the Kiwanians want everyone participating in the games to be sure to ask the operators for theirs.

Last night was a warmer night than Tuesday and those who attended the Karnival found it more pleasant to remain until the end than they had the night before. Some were so enthusiastic about their winnings that they kept some of the games running right up until midnight. The proceeds from their attempts to best Lady Luck will be greatly appreciated by those underprivileged children and the losers will not feel so badly about losing knowing where their money is going.

Contest Decisions Get Mixed Greetings

The noise, loud acclamations and applause of the judges' decisions rang along Front Street and were clearly audible up on the East Hill. Not all the decisions were greeted with approbation, however, and many people expressed their opinion through the medium of cat-calls and loud boos as they tried to influence the judges. The judges made their choices without the voluntary assistance they were given and the selections were fair and unprejudiced. "Miss War Worker, 1943" was congratulated by "Miss War Worker, 1942" amid cheers and applause.

As the City Hall clock struck out the hour of midnight, Front St., took on an almost deserted appearance in comparison to the crowds of an earlier hour. The games closed and the booths were removed to their storage place until tonight when once more they will be assembled for the pleasure and profit of a new crowd.

Meanwhile as training continues with one exercise after another, Dieppe is viewed as an invasion rehearsal but not a dress rehearsal. It is felt that the landings in North Africa were dress rehearsals and Pantellaria and Sicily were opening performances.

At a high price — 3,350 troops casualties or war prisoners — the Canadians learned a lesson from which tactics have been evolved which are proving very effective in practice.

It was learned at Dieppe for instance that a successful landing depends on "complete" combined operations, and Dieppe was only partially complete.

It was learned also that it is infantry with guns that must secure a bridgehead and that tanks can not do it, and further that the German Air Force can be dealt with before the enemy can bring up distant reinforcements to prevent the Allies establishing a bridgehead.

So it can be said that Dieppe founded a timetable for invasion, that the Dieppe regiments by trial and error paved the way for their comrades in Sicily, and on the basis that the Allies profited from the lessons learned on France's bloodstained beaches, it can be said that Dieppe established soundly the believe that Europe could be invaded, while operations since then have proved it.

New York Times Editorial

New York, Augg. 19 (CP)—The New York Times said in an editorial today, the first anniversary of the Canadian-led raid on Dieppe, that the "mistakes of Dieppe will not be made again."

The editorial said in part:-

". . . Men afoot and men in tanks were exposed to a fire that no valor could withstand. Hundreds of them went as far as they could and died, but these deaths achieved nothing exxcept to urove what was already known—the high quality of the Canadian troops and of the small units of British Commandos, United States Rangers and Fighting French who accompanied them.

With North Africa and Sicily in United Nations hands we can look back on the Dieppe episode with some composure, and leave to the historians the bestowal of praise and blame. Dieppe belongs to a phase of war that has passed, as sure as have the tactics of Napoleon and Grant. The next landing in France will be preceded by operations which did not take place at Dieppe, by —an air bombardment which will leave no able-bodied enemy within range of the beaches; by parachute and glider landings behind the hostile lines; by an overwhelming concentration of force ready to strike at the selected points.

"And some day there will be two spots on the French coast sacred to the British and their Allies. One will be Dunkirk, where Britain was saved because a beaten army would not surrender. The other will be Dieppe, where brave men died without hope for the sake of proving that there is a wrong way to invade. They will have their share of the glory when the right was is tried in France, as it has already been tried in Sicily."

Engineer Claims County Roads Damaged by Tanks

Ottawa, Aug. 19. — CP)—Romeo Boismenu, L'Orginal, Ont., roads engineer for Prescott and Russell counties, Wednesday served notice on the Defence Department through an advertisement in an Ottawa newspaper (Citizen), that the counties can not be held responsible for accidents on their roads caused through the operation of tanks.

The notice was inserted on instructions of Reeve Marshall Rathwell of Cumberland, Ont., who said that churning 20 to 30 ton tanks from the army testing ground at Navan, Ont., on 200-mile non-stop test runs over the Prescott and Russell County road system, have damaged some 50 miles of soft top road "to such an extent that some farmers are isolated and others unable to draw their crops".

Reeve Rathwell and Reeve William Perrault of Gloucester Township complained that tank operators, who in turning must stop one set of treads and keep the other in motion, were "churning up great gouges in the soft top county and township roads, piling gravel as high as four and five feet in some places".

Defence Department officials said they had received no official notification on which to base a check of the complaint, and that they did not regard the newspaper notice as official notification.

a Japanese attack for more than two weeks before surrendering on Christmas Day, 1941, when further resistance became impossible.

The Canadian contingent numbered 1,895 men in two battalions, the Winnipeg Grenadiers and the Royal Regiment of Canada from Quebec, plus a brigade headquarters. The whole force was either killed or made prisoner and subsequent reports from the Japanese on the number of prisoners indicated 296 of the Canadians were dead or missing.

An unofficial total of Dieppe casualties gives 561 dead, 239 missing, 570 wounded and 1,918 prisoners.

The Canadian force engaged at Dieppe was probably less than half the size of the force engaged in Sicily.

YOUTH AND MEN,

of National Selective Service Civilian regulations to read as follows:-

"210 (1) The Minister may, by order, forbid any employer or group or class of employers to retain in employment after a specified date any male person (or group or class of male persons) who has attained or who later attains his 16th birthday and who has not attained his 41st birthday, unless such person has presented to the employer a permit in prescribed form issued by a selective service officer; or may require any employer, or group or class of employers to terminate, at such time and in such manner as he may specify, the employment of any such person or group or class of such persons."

Will Proceed Carefully

Mr. Mitchell added that it was intended to "go carefully into the circumstances" surrounding the employment of all men from 16 to 40 in a large number of occupations and industries.

"The cases of men subject to mobilization regulations and of young men 16, 17, and 18 years old have already been reviewed in quite a lengthy list of occupations," he said.

"Shortly an order will be issued bringing the cases of all other men who are within the age limits provided by the amendment, under examination, and progressively further orders will be issued covering all men in the groups now referred to in the regulations, who may be engaged at certain occupations not covered by the first five orders.

"The process of moving men up to occupations of high priority involves a very great deal of careful and painstaking administration, so that the job must be done progressively. However, the project will be moved along as rapidly as is possible, as a substantial number of men are still required to fill vacancies in high priority jobs."

Certain Special Consideration

Mr. Mitchell said that, "for the time being at least," while ex-service men and men with domestic responsibilities will be required to register under the transfer orders, persuasion will be used in the case of ex-servicemen rather than compulsion, in order to have them transfer to more essential work.

In the case of men with domestic responsibilities, changes of residence will not be required which will involve domestic hardship, although these men will be available for transfer within industry in the areas in which they reside.

He said that once the amendment to the regulations is implemented by specific orders, male employees covered will be required to register at an Employment and Selective Service office, and an employer will be prohibited from continuing to employ the men affected except under special permit.

The five previous orders affect men employed in a wide range of service trades, wholesale activities and luxury manufacturing.

RAILWAY ESCAPE

The Berlin radio, in a broadcast recorded yesterday by the Associated Press, said the Russians were opening a fourth offensive at Izyum, 72 miles southeast to Kharkov. Capt. Ludwig Sertorius, Nazi military commentator, said Red Army troops had gained "initial successes" on that sector and admitted the thrust presented a new threat to the German forces in front of Lozovaya and the Dnieper River bend.

Italian Censorship Suppresses Disclosure Of Major Development

Stockholm, Aug. 18. (Delayed)—(AP)—Swedish correspondents in Rome indicated a major development occurred in Italy today but censorship prevented disclosure of the news in regular dispatches.

There was nothing to indicate what this development might be. In London there was speculation it might involve the fall of Marshal Pietro Badoglio's government but it was only last night that Badoglio addressed the people? of Italy and Sicily. There also were reports of German and Italian friction as German forces were said to move northward.

GEN. ALEXANDER TAKES LESSONS IN FLYING

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 19. (AP)—Master of ground operations, Gen. Sir Harold Alexander is learning to fly in a small communications plane known to his 15th army group as "puddle jumper".

Gen. Alexander, whose victorious campaigns in Africa and Sicily were marked by close co-operation between land and air forces, decided to carry out the same principle personally.

His flying teacher is Air Marshal Sir Arthur Coningham, commander of the Tactical Air Force, who reported:

"My pupil is extremely apt and making excellent progress".

Former West Huntingdon Boy Wins $1,000 for Speeding War Production

Kenneth McGowan Submitted Plan to Eastman Kodak Co. to Prevent Gelatine Loss

WINS 2ND AWARD

West Huntingdon.— The people of West Huntingdon have every reason to be proud of and to admire the young people who have left this community to make their homes in other places. From time to time tidings have reached here of those who have made good in their chosen profession. Among those who have recently accomplished great achievement is Mr. Kenneth McGowan, son of the late James McGowan and Mrs. McGowan, former residents here.

15 Years With Eastman Co.

Kenneth has been in the employment of the Eastman Kodak Company for the past fifteen years and in that time has been promoted several times. The company recognizes him as one of their most valued members and just recently as a result of submitting ten ideas for speeding war production he received $107. Again at about the same time the company suffered a gelatine loss. Kenneth submitted a method by which this could be prevented which netted him $1,000.

Kenneth's many friends here are congratulating him on this most recent success, and wish for him many more years of continued achievements.

One of Family of Eight Children

He is the second son in the McGowan family and has five brothers and two sisters. Harvey is one of the leading employees of the Massey Harris Company of Toronto; Stanley is now overseas with His

Mr. Roosevelt to Visit Ottawa

Canada welcomes a large number of outstanding men in the United States and Great Britain who are attending the sixth Churchill-Roosevelt war conference at Quebec, and especially Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt whose broad shoulders have carried a very great share of the burden of humanity at war.

The English-speaking world has been blest in having leaders of the supreme statesmanlike quality of these men and of the moral greatness they show in respect to their duties to the suffering world. In many respects this should be one of the proudest hours of the democracies that they have come thus far on the path to victory and a secure peace by their unselfishness and readiness to help all who fight against tyranny and Fascist and Nazi injustice.

Canada at the same time is particularly pleased to have these two men among our people. Mr. Churchill showed last week his rich personality as he met Canadians on his trip to meet Mr. Roosevelt at his home in Hyde Park. Mr. Roosevelt who, only a few days ago enjoyed a spell of summer fishing in Ontario, is back again and this time is going to pay a visit to the national capital. There it is expected he will speak to the members of the two Houses of Parliament. Canada will show honors to the great American, whose stature is so great in the eyes of the free world and of the nations writhing in bondage of the Hun taskmasters.

Canada and the United States have been good neighbors for so long that even the history books which tell of the war about one hundred and thirty years ago almost fail to convince the two peoples today that they ever were on opposite sides. Today there is an international boundary but it is not marked by bristling guns. This boundary differs from those of Europe in the sense of security it provides. On this border no armed forces wait to attack one another. Mr. Roosevelt himself seems like one of ourselves. Likewise Prime Minister King's visits to Washington have always been made happy by the courtesy and hospitality of the American President and people.

Increase Tea and Coffee

Canadians will welcome the higher rations in tea and coffee, a third increase, beginning with September 2nd., with the promise of a further increase before the year end if shipping conditions continue to enlarge the supply of these commodities.

Two coupons will become valid every three weeks instead of four weeks, as at present.

As Canada first went on rations in August, 1942, this nation of tea and coffee drinkers has reason to be satisfied that they are securing the advantage of the improvement in the conditions associated with shipping. They can also be pleased that the war situation has so much improved from that of just thirteen months before.

In the United States, which is known as a coffee-drinking nation, coffee has been taken from the rationed list.

The people of Canada have taken rationing with good grace and readiness to help solve the food and transportation problems. They will naturally feel greater freedom in consuming and measuring the beverages and be pleased with the promise of greater rations if conditions warrant before the end of the year. They realize that those burdened with the task of serving the country at war and on the home front have had a great responsibility and have done their work well to conserve and to distribute fairly the supplies of the nation.

Famous in History

The largest, most beautiful and most populous island in the Mediterranean is now in Allied hands. Sicily is also the most historic because of its natural position which has made it the scene of many struggles for its possession. For the same reason Allied Nations landed an amphibious invasion on its coasts on July 10th., less than six weeks ago.

The island has changed hands many times. Its earliest known possessors, the Siculi, came from Italy in prehistoric days. Then followed Greek and Phoenician colonial settlements in the eighth century, B.C., and the Carthaginian settlements. Sicily became a Roman province in 246 B.C. In 440 A.D. the island was overrun by the Vandals who had swept Italy. In 535 it was annexed to the Byzantine empire, Saracens followed and were driven out by the Normans. Sicily was then attached to the republic of Naples, then to the crown of Aragon, and on the union of Castile and Aragon to Spain. It was in the House of Austria and then of the Spanish Bourbons, then under French rule for nine years from 1806 to 1815 and finally was annexed to United Italy in 1860.

Sicily is now for the period of the war an occupied country and will have the benefit of a sane and careful rule to preserve order.

When Mussolini Practised

(Kansas City Star)

In the early years of his dictatorship, before he had been made arrogant through power, Mussolini had a balanced judgment and knew what he was doing. The American ambassador at the time, Richard Washburn Child, used to play golf with him.

One day he was talking with the Duce in the Palazzo Venezia when a delegation from some Italian town was shown in to greet the great man. Replying to the address of welcome, Mussolini threw out his chin, rolled his eyes and thundered at the delegates, who were greatly impressed. When they had gone, Child thought he knew Mussolini well enough to venture a personal question. "Why do you do that?" he inquired. "Why put on such a show?"

The Duce grinned. "They are Italians," he explained. "They would have been disappointed if I had just talked to them in a reasonable way."

Later Mussolini was so carried away with his play acting that he seemed to take it seriously. That was the beginning of his downfall.

How Long?

(Hamilton Spectator)

As the global scene continues to change in favor of the Allies, it is no more than natural that people should ask one another when they think the struggle will end. These conjectures range from the unduly optimistic of six months to more than three years. In between perhaps lies the more realistic and best informed of lay opinion; polls which have been conducted show that the majority in this group look for Germany to be knocked out during 1944, and the same fate to overtake Japan during the latter part of 1945. No one knows when the end will come, and the best-posted laymen can do little more than guess. If the conservative guesses are accepted as being well reasoned, this would mean that at least another year of hard fighting confronts the Allies before Germany is vanquished, and two years before Japan is thoroughly humbled. The road ahead is therefore not an easy one; the formula of blood, toil, sweat and tears still applies. Victory can be won with nothing else, and civilians must continue to do their part in supporting their fighting men to the full.

The happiness of life may be greatly increased by small courtesies in which there is no parade, whose voice is too still to tease, and which manifest themselves by tender and affectionate looks and little kind acts of attention.—Sterne.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

THE CHATTERER

Time was, when I was foolish, young,
I set no guard upon my tongue,
But every thought which roamed my head
Not thinking who might hear, I said.
I gossiped as the streets I walked.
On cars and trains I freely talked.
I mentioned date and place and name,
To my embarrassment and shame,
Since oft my silly, careless word
By friends or relatives was heard.

"Who is that homely woman there?"
I've asked, to have a friend declare,
"She, sir's, my wife!" Pray tell me who
The shame of that can quite undo?
A neighbor sneered: "So you declare
That you can prove I bleach my hair."
And when I stammeringly demurred,
She added: "You were overheard;
'Twas at a show you stated that
When next to you my sister sat."

Well, all that happened years ago.
Since then I've learned we cannot know
Just who it is who may be near
Our careless talk to overhear.
If harm is done in private life
By thoughtless speech, in times of strife,
With men at war on land and sea,
How much more careful should we be,
Lest prattling tongue and foolish lip
Tell Hitler when to sink a ship.

A number of "breachy" cows are roaming about seeking whose fences they may leven and whose garden stuff they may devour. Every cow found trying to force its way through a fence or gate should be impounded. In fact it is a disgrace to a town like Belleville that cows and pigs should be allowed to roam at large, free to render the sidewalks filthy, break down shade trees and do a great deal of damage otherwise.

Two of our largest steam saw mills have closed down for the season owing to the supply of saw logs being exhausted.

The cells at the police station are in a filthy condition and the Board of Health has ordered that they be cleaned and fumigated. The cells are at present, quite unfit for the reception of any class of prisoners.

Mounting Losses Sign of Increasing Allied Air Might

(By WILLIAM FRYE)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Aug. 19. (AP)— The mounting losses of allied heavy bombers over Europe, the United States army air forces said today, are—paradoxically—a sign of increasing allied air might.

They mean, said officers, that Britain, Canada and America are sending even greater aerial armadas to blast Germany and German-occupied Europe. Numerical losses are higher, but the rate of losses is not.

The comment was appropos of reports large numbers of planes failed to return from recent raids. For instance, the R.A.F. reported 41 bombers, 13 of them Canadian, and one fighter lost in Tuesday night's swoop against Berlin and Peenemuende; the United States 8th Air Force reported 36 heavy bombers, one fighter-bomber and five fighters missing in its attacks on Regensburg and Schweinfurt.

Do these figures mean allied losses are approaching the "allowable" rate at which bombing operations cease to be "profitable"? Do they mean German opposition is increasing or becoming more effective? The answer, air force officers said emphatically, was "No!"

Only One Way to Figure

"Look", said one officer, "what is an 'allowable' rate of loss? Some experts have said it's 10 per cent of the planes sent on a mission, others say 5 per cent. In either case, it's just a lot of stuff.

"Statistically, there is only one way to figure allowable loss: You can afford to lose as many planes and crews as you can replace, provided you get through to your target.

"If you need 1,000 planes to accomplish your job, and your production is 1,000 planes a day, then you can lose 1,000 planes to reach the objective.

"Are Britain and America able to replace their losses? The answer to that is obvious—they are replacing them, and also increasing the size of their forces".

And in London, R.A.F. spokesman backed this up, scouting any idea that the cost of the mounting bomb offensive might be outrunning its benefits. He disclosed that in July the British Bomber Command lost half as many planes and men a ton of bombs dropped as it lost in July 1942.

"Belly Still" For Sea Use Passes Test

Minneapolis, Aug. 19—The Nazis chased Dr. Karl Solmer from Germany ten years ago and he found safety in America. Today he said he is ready to answer the Nazis in part for their persecution.

Now professor of physiological chemistry at the University of Minnesota, the refugee disclosed the invention of a "belly still," with Dr. Maurice B. Visscher, head of the physiology department, as co-inventor.

Simple And Effective

And the pair hopes their simple invention will help save the lives of thirsty torpedoed American sailors and ocean-crashed aviators. The apparatus already has been turned over to the armed forces after successful tests.

From briny sea water, which means death to a thirsty man who drinks it, the belly still will produce a minimum of 24 ounces of water daily under poorest conditions.

The apparatus consists of a pint-size flat copper boiler and is strapped against the belly of the operator for the heat it needs to operate, a hand-cranked vacuum pump to reduce pressure in the boiler and a condenser that trails in the sea.

How It Works

Basic principle of the apparatus the inventors say, is that body heat of 98.6 degrees "boils" the water in the small tank where pressure has been reduced by the hand-operated vacuum pump. Condensation of the vapor follows when it reaches the condenser kept cool by sea water,—the temperature of sea water never goes above 78 degrees.

Under poorest condition, the professors found the belly still could produce an ounce of fresh water hourly.

With this invention out of the way, Drs. Soliner and Visscher are working on a jeep-model still which they expect will produce three quarts of fresh water an hour from alkali, swamp or other waters unfit for human use without boiling or distillation. Successful tests of this model already have been made at Fort Snelling, Minn., they said.

Killarney and Blueberries

(Letter from Judge G. E. Deroche)

I wonder how many of your readers have heard of the Australian war song, "I'll Go Waltzing Matilda With You." It has become popular again this year. The title of this article might well be, "I'll Go Skipping O'er the Rocks Picking Blueberries With You."

By the way, I wish you could have heard the young people at Wigwossin Lodge sing the "Matilda" song, among fifty other popular songs, as they sat in the friendship room filling the chairs and the floor and the door-ways for about an hour after lunch each day, singing to a piano played by a young man who could make it ring. If any of your young people, or young married people are looking for a place for a happy holiday, go to Wigwossin Lodge on Lake Rosseau. We are a year older than we were last year, but we are still young in spirit and enjoyed a couple of weeks there immensely early in July.

But I digress. What about the blueberries. This George Island situated at the north end of Georgian Bay has them in great quantities. There is a narrow channel running between the island and the mainland for a distance of two miles. The steamers coming up from Owen Sound pass through this channel. We could throw a stone and hit the steamer as it sails by, and when lighted at night it looks like a floating palace passing our door. William's cottage and our sleeping cabin (which he was kind enough to clear enough to build for us) are situated on the north shore of the island, and behind the cottages are the flat rocks everywhere with berries galore. I get my exercise by skipping out on the rocks and picking a quart each morning and again each afternoon.

* * *

On the mainland, across the channel, about a mile down from us, is the village of Killarney. Contains about two hundred houses occupied mostly by fishermen who have their nets out in the bay. Tons upon tons of white fish are shipped from here to New York each year. The steamboat usually remains at various fish docks two, three and four hours loading fish. Occasionally we go out with one of the fishermen and see them haul in their nets, usually laden with fine white fish. One day we saw them haul in a net containing two tons of fish. They make good money, are very well to do, send their children 'out front' for high school and college education. It is a unique village. One cannot come in by car. No road. Must come by foot. Magnificent yachts from Detroit, chiefly, coming and going every day, passing our doorstep. Splendid bass fishing, too. There are always some men at the little hotel who go out each day into Killarney Bay and get their quota. A fisherman's paradise.

* * *

And then the blueberries. They are very plentiful each year, not only on the island but on the mainland. I pause from time to time when picking, to drink in the scenery. Looking to the south over the expansive Georgian Bay and looking to the north across the channel (which view we get also sitting on our verandah) are the mountains running east and west as far as the eye can see. They are about five miles away but on some days seem as close as a half mile. One feels alone with nature up here. It is very restful and very peaceful.

If you want to know what the berries are like ask Charlie Sullivan or Will Deacon, or Fred. I took a few to each of them one year. But this year those berries seem like pigmies in comparison. I never saw them so plentiful or so large as this year. They are not as large as hickory nuts but well, they are large anyway. Just strip them off in handfuls. It is a great sight to see some patches of them, just thick like a blue carpet. They hang in great clusters, and so I say, "come on up, bring your running shoes so you can skip over the great flat rocks and pick blueberries with me."

Had great excitement here last week . . . President Roosevelt spent part of his time at McGregor Bay, just our next door neighbor.

YOU'D BE SURPRISED!

RUSSIAN RELATIONS

Two Presidents of the United States served as ministers to Russia.

The first American minister to Russia was Francis Dana, of Massachusetts, who was appointed by the Continental Congress and who arrived in St. Petersburg in October, 1781.

Dana took with him to the Russian capital as his secretary 14-year-old John Quincy Adams.

But the government of Catherine the Great refused to receive Dana officially or to recognize his government, even after Yorktown and the preliminary peace between Britain and America. So the American minister and his youthful secretary returned to the United States without accomplishing anything.

In 1809 President Madison appointed John Quincy Adams minister to Russia, the only European country that had refused to comply with Napoleon's commercial decrees and accordingly the only outlet for American trade.

Adams arrived in St. Petersburg in October, 1809, at the psychological moment when Czar Alexander I had decided to break with Napoleon. The American minister enjoyed the personal friendship in the social life of St. Petersburg. He was there throughout the period that Russia was invaded by Napoleon.

Russia showed every disposition to further the interests of American commerce in every way possible, but Adams's situation was made difficult by the fact that Alexander desired to do nothing to offend the British, who were his allies against the French.

After war broke out between the United States and Britain in 1812, Alexander, who desired the friendship of both belligerents, offered to mediate the quarrel. President Madison quickly accepted the offer and sent Albert Gallatin and James Bayard to Europe to act with Adams as commissioners, but the British, although weary of the war and desirous of peace, rejected Russian mediation. In August, 1814, however, Adams, Gallatin and Bayard, joined by Henry Clay and Jonathan Russell, began the negotiations that resulted in the Treaty of Ghent.

Going to Paris, Adams was in the French capital when Napoleon returned from Elba and the greater part of "The Hundred Days" preceding Waterloo.

The other President of the United States who had been minister to Russia was James Buchanan, who was in St. Petersburg in 1832-33 and who negotiated an important commercial treaty with Russia while there.

R.C.A.F. Bus Collides With Car From Quebec

Trenton —(Special)— An R.C.A.F. bus loaded with about thirty service men and women from 6 R.D. bound for Trenton Junction crashed into the rear of a Quebec car at the corner of Campbell and Dundas Streets Tuesday night.

The bus was driven by H. F. Uthe, LAC., who was unable to apply his brakes quickly enough to avoid a rear-end collision with the car which had stopped suddenly behind another bus, owned by the Rathbun Bus Service of Trenton. As the service bus struck the Quebec car, owned by Clare N. Mephan of Montreal, it swerved into the east-bound traffic and struck another car owned by the Hurley Printing Co., Brantford, and driven by Mrs. Margaret L. Hurley, wife of W. H. Hurley, an officer in the Canadian Army.

The front end of the R.C.A.F. bus was damaged to some extent, the rear of the Quebec car was demolished, and the Hurley car had a broken axle, rear left fender and wheel.

According to police and eyewitnesses, the occupants of both cars and the bus had a miraculous escape. Many of them had a severe shaking up but all were able to proceed on their way.

Visitors Contribute to Fund

Visitors to the police station asking for letters of reference, letters of identification, and other favors which do not come directly under police work, have been very generous with their donations to the British War Victims' Fund. Yesterday a cheque for $126 was forwarded as the result of these contributions, along with a cheque for $5 which had been donated by Mrs. A. J. Shelfoon, one of the winners at the recent Rotary Carnival.

All enjoyed the acrobatic exercises given by Miss Arbuckle of Detroit, a guest of her grandmother on Dundas Street E.

After an abundance of eats ,a surprise plate was passed, from which cards were drawn with an individual stunt for each. All then rose to give three cheers for Prime Minister Churchill, his wife and daughter, now in Canada. "God Save the King" brought the afternoon to a close.

Mrs. Wardner, corner Queen and Ann Streets, is entertaining the club for the September meeting.

IVANHOE WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The August meeting of Ivanhoe branch W.I., was at the home of Mrs. Hugh McMillan. The attendance was good, there being 20 members and several visitors and children.

The minutes of the July meeting were read and business of the branch was dealt with, and the convener of War Work was asked to preside for the program which consisted of a debate.

The subject of the debate was "Resolved that War time Promotes more Education than Peace Time." The affirmative was very ably taken by Miss M. Wright and the negative by Miss O. Mills and Rev. Mr. Wager. The second debater of the affirmative side was not able to be present, thus Miss Wright held the side alone. The judges' decision was given by Mrs. T. Fleming which gave the affirmative the most points for delivery and material. The debate was enjoyed by everyone present.

A poem entitled "Can You Help" was read by Mrs. Murney Ray. Mrs. Wm. Shaw also read a poem "Our Empire".

Current events was given by Mrs. Arthur Hagerman.

Mrs. A. Clements thanked Mrs. McMillan for the use of her home for the meeting and for her hospitality.

Sandwiches and tea were served by the hostess and her assistants. Red Cross sewing was given out and the meeting adjourned.

Activities of St. Julien Chapter I.O.D.E. for May, June and July

St. Julien Chapter I.O.D.E. only meeting once a month for the summer instead of four times as in the winter months, has the following to report:

The treasurer reported on the financial status of the War Services account and the Chapter's account and the results gave a warning of more planning to raise funds to swell both these accounts. The ways and means committee assured the Regent they had plans for several ways of raising funds for the approval of the chapter. The auditors reported the books audited and found correct.

Report of War Services Convener

The War Services convener reported 93 pairs sox and 49 miscellaneous pieces consisting of sweaters, seaboot socks, and children's wear, had been turned in by the Chapter's knitters. She expressed a hope that after the holidays the knitters would again make a bigger and better effort along this line, and wished to thank all who have been so faithful in keeping up the good work, 18 knitted articles were given to individual boys of services. Shipments were made to the following: Bombed areas: 8 quilts, 4 Afghans, 35 misc. knitted articles and 25 other garments. Navy and other armed forces: 83 pairs socks and 50 other knitted comforts. In addition funds were provided by the chapter and sent to the I.O.D.E. library to purchase a library and cigarettes to be put on board this ship. Several letters of appreciation have been received from the officer commanding and the personnel of the "Dunvegan", and the chapter members and all who donated towards these comforts should feel amply repaid to think they have by a small effort, given so much pleasure to these boys of our navy. Consumers Must Hold Ration Book No. 2

Consumers are particularly cautioned by the Local Ration Board not to surrender their Ration Books No. 2 (those now in use) at the time of the issue of the No. 3 books, nor to damage or destroy the old books until the validity of all the coupons contained in them has expired.

The reason for this warning is that, even after the new books come into use on September 2, the old books will contain coupons which will be valid for the purchase of meat, and the meat coupons in the new books will not begin to possess validity until the others have expired.

In addition to this, other uncashed coupons in the old books will still be valid for the purchase of rationed goods for some considerable time after the new books have come into use, and this is particularly true of tea-coffee and sugar coupons which remain valid until declared invalid.

Old ration books will, therefore, still have material value for the consumer after No. 3 books have been issued and they should be just as carefully guarded as the new books.

Holmes Family Holds Reunion at Tweed

On August 11, 1943, the nineteenth annual re-union picnic of the Holmes family was held at the Memorial Park, Tweed. The day being ideal, sixty-one members were present.

Dinner was served with Mr. and Mrs. George McCoy of Belleville, acting as host and hostess. All were seated at one long table, which had been decorated for the occasion to enjoy not only the delicious dinner, but the social part as well.

One feature was a lovely birthday cake trimmed with pink candles, which made happy little Thornton Holmes, whose birthday was the same day.

After the dinner a short period of business was conducted by the President, Mr. John W. Holmes, of Stirling, who extended a hearty welcome to each and everyone present. A two-minute silence was observed in memory of those who had passed away during the year. The names of the deceased members were: Mrs. A. Holmes, Queensboro; George Holmes, Stirling; and the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Bill McCoy, of Kingston. One verse of "Shall we gather at the river", was sung.

The minutes of the last meeting were read by Annie Holmes. Also a letter was read which had been received from Mrs. Lola Fordyce of Farwell, Michigan.

The following officers were elected:—President, Mr. John L. Holmes, Tweed; Vice President, Mr. George McCoy, Belleville; Secretary Treasurer—Mrs. Ed. Groves, Madoc; Sports Committee: Roberta Sager, Mrs. Will Lynn, Annie Holmes, Olive Holmes, Leslie Holmes, Mrs. Arthur Holmes and Elmer Holmes.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Fleming of Madoc, were appointed host and hostess for the next re-union, which is to be held at the same place and as near the same date as possible.

Short speeches were given by Edmund Groves, John L. Holmes and George McCoy, which were very interesting and to the point, the National Anthem brought this part of the program to a close.

Prizes were given to the following: Oldest man present: — Edmund Groves, Madoc; Oldest woman present: Mrs. John W. Holmes, Stirling; Youngest baby:— Gail Marie Holmes; Most children present:— Mr. and Mrs. Tom Lynn, Tweed; Most grandchildren:—Mr. and Mrs. John L. Holmes, Tweed; Shortest woman:— Mrs. Arthur Holmes, Queensboro; Man having the largest size shoes:—Mr. Bob Sager, Queensboro.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill McCoy of Kingston, prize for having come the longest distance. The bean guessing contest was won by Mrs. John W. Holmes.

Races and a ball game were enjoyed by the younger groups, and were under the leadership of Miss Fay Fleming and Mrs. Tom Lynn.

At the close of the afternoon, all left for their homes, hoping to meet again next year.

Fashion Flashes

THERE'S PLENTY of news in the fur world. Among novelties recently shown was a coat of the seaman's jacket type, a knee-length model in light blonde shades of natural wild mink. The high, pointed revers and high double-breasted closing add interest to an original design.

BACK AGAIN for another winter run is the furred tuxedo cloth coat. Deep eggplant purple woolen is used for a handsome coat made with collar, peaked lapels and revers of leopard.

ONE WAY to dress up a simple little black woolen suit is with a pretty trifle of a hat and a becoming blouse. A charming new blouse is in striped tissue lame in blue and silver with a soft bow-tied neckline.

YOUTHFUL HEADS nod warm approval of a new hat for junior wear, modeled on the famous cap of sleuth Sherlock Holmes. The one we saw has a visor back and front, is head-fitting and is made up in checked velveteen, brown and white or black and white.

THERE IS AGREEMENT that the favorite millinery line this season is the forward tilt. A charming little suit hat for fall is a tricorne with a modified postilion crown in red felt with navy grosgrain bows and navy chicken mesh veiling. Worn tilted over the eye.

YEARS OF WEAR in the new fur-lined coats cut on easy lines to be worn over suits if need be. A grand model, and reversible, is a coat of bronze-green woolen lined with nutria.

Twelve Rules For Everyday Courtesy

Courtesy is a healer. A kind word, a kind deed, is a balm that soothes and comforts. In courtesy are the vitamins that nourish and restore the spirit. Courtesy cheers and consoles and encourages.

Every moment in every day presents opportunities to us to use the "healing art" of courtesy, to make our contribution, large or small, expected or unexpected, to the Civilization for which we are fighting. For example:

1. Are you understanding and tolerant of, cooperative with, the difficulties brought about by war shortages, labor shortages, food shortages, service shortages? Or do you incessantly complain about anything that inconveniences you-and-yours?

2. Do you try to cooperate with logical and practical requests of organizations that must serve servicemen first? Or do you, with utter selfishness, go on your way uninfluenced by any moral scruple? How about using your car? How about unnecessary travelling? How about making long-distance telephone calls between seven and ten o'clock in the evening?

3. Are your manners at home a "balm that soothes and comforts" your family? Or are they full of prickles that hurt and irritate?

4. Does your "Thank you' come to your lips right from your heart, quickly and naturally, oiling the way of life for somebody every time you say it? Or do you hoard your "Thank you" as if it were the most costly thing in the world? Your warm "Thank you" may be just the spiritual bracer some weary person needs today!

5. When things go wrong, do you stop to think that it may be, just may be, your fault? Or do you always and at once blame someone else? Are you "helping" that sister or co-worker you are blaming?

6. Do you encourage others by telling them the pleasant things you think about them or have heard about them? Or are you so selfish that you won't give them the remedy that will brace them up?

7. In these hurried days do you remember the fair rule "First come, first served"? Or do you push ahead (or try to) of anyone in a line, at a ticket office, post office, information desk, telephone booth, at a counter?

8. Do you jam your way into a bus or train or street car? Are you a seat-hog? Do you help those who need your help, give your seat to a woman with a baby in her arms or with young children, or to a feeble old man or woman, or a crippled person, or to a person obviously "weary and heavy-laden"?

9. Do you write as often as you should to your men in service? Here's indeed kindness that cheers and restores the spirit!

10. Are you particularly thoughtless when "the other person" is unknown to you? Are you, for example, a comfort or a menace to your neighbors? Do you take off your hat in the movies, madame? Are you rude on the telephone when you've dialed a wrong number?

11. Do you write your thank-you notes promptly, answer invitations promptly? If you do, you're comfort to your friends, and to your hostess.

12. Do you guard your tongue most carefully, or loosely and dangerously spread rumors or give information? In other words, are you a "comfort" to your country, or to the enemy?

Holiness, Courage, Courtesy, says Hilaire Belloc in these inspiring lines:

> "Of Courtesy, it is much less
> Than Courage of Heart or Holiness.
> Yet in my walks, it seems to me
> That the Grace of God is in Courtesy."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Girls Who Write the Most Interesting Letters Are Winning the Soldiers

You'd think anyone in love would never be at a loss what to write to one's Beloved. Swept along on the tide of this strongest of human emotions, with every fiber of one's being clamoring for expression, the only question would seem to be what to leave out.

Yet, girls tell me that in their letters to service men, after they've written (a) "I love you," (b) "I miss you terribly," and (c) "I hope this dreadful war will soon be over, and you'll come back to me," inspiration runs dry. And after two lines of kiss crosses, they can't think of much else to say.

Without doubt (a), (b) and (c) is singly and collectively splendid stuff for love-letters, no matter how it's expressed, but you can't fill even a scant sheet of a letter with those three declarations.

There's evidence that the boy, hesitating on the brink of which girl he likes better, commits himself definitely to the one who writes him the best letters. Bearing this in mind, it would be well for girls who find themselves tongue-tied after the first two or three sentences to one's beloved, to go in for something like a refresher course in the art of writing love-letters.

Such a course, full of ideas for expressing the things for which a soldier in North Africa, or the Solomons, or in mosquito-ridden Alaska, is just plain starving—the little homey things he thinks about in his loneliness—may be found in Margaret Buell Wilder's delightful book "Since You Went Away."

Please do not interpret this to mean that you should filch even a phrase from this volume, but you will find the book suggestive of the things soldiers long to hear when that old Deb'll loneliness becomes well-nigh unendurable.

A gift that she has for writing letters, more than material gifts she sends him, may be the explanation of the interest of a soldier in a married woman which is the concern of the correspondent who wrote me the following:

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been going with a soldier, divorced, and who has a little daughter. A relative of the soldier is keeping the child for him. Before I met him, he was going around with a married woman, but he says he has forgotten her. However, I know that he writes to her and that she sends him gifts, which proves he still thinks of her.

Would you advise me to continue going with him, as he has asked me to marry him? He doesn't drink or run around with other girls, and has always kept his dates with me. He says he loves me very much, and wants us to get married after the war. What is your advice?

S. A. L.

Relatives and friends are being urged: "Write to the service men." It may be that the married woman's letters and gifts to this soldier have no ulterior motives. You should suppose that to be the case, since he declares himself in love with you and says he wants to marry you. If you haven't any faith in his statements now, how can you have when he's your husband?

However, it'd be good insurance for you to make certain that your letters are always more regular, and more interesting, than hers. You don't have to confine them to purely personal news. Get in the happenings of your community, city, state and nation that he may be missing. Put in clippings about things you know he has an interest in, and cartoons, and jokes. All these will make him wait for your letters, and if he keeps on waiting for your letters, he'll keep on waiting for you.

The Marry-Go-Round

Ladies-in-love
Her Big Catch

She wanted to make a sensible match.
She wanted to marry the season's catch—
A financial Leviathan!
She was pretty and witty
And—very much "IT-ty";
So she married the LAUNDRY-MAN!
She knew brokers and gayboys
And millionaire playboys;
But she had a more practical plan.
She considered the butcher, the grocer, the baker,
The tailor, the farmer, the cabinet-maker—
Then, she married the laundry-man!
And now she can sit back and sweetly relax,
In her fresh laundered blouses and snowy white slacks,
And her lingerie's all spick-and-span.
She can change pillow-cases
Each day, and be aces
With her very own LAUNDRY-MAN!

Every life is a picture of some sort, and love is the light which you turn on the canvas; without the "lighting", the most brilliant career is flat, dull and commonplace.

To a married man who has glanced at his wife's dressing-table, there are no feminine beauty secrets. He can tell you everything except what shade women's hair will be next season.

A man can call a girl "You silly little boob!" and get away with it; but it is positively fatal to call her "You great big boob!" A wise man always knows the value of the diminutive.

A man's flattery, like a woman's complexion, should be laid on delicately and with enough artistic restraint to make it seem real and convincing.

About all that a girl gets out of staging a scene and giving a man a piece of her mind, is the vocal exercise and the momentary stimulation.

LUCY CASE OF MISTAKEN IDENTITY

St. Louis, Aug. 19—(AP)—Joseph Sebben mistook another sailor for his twin brother, Abe, but the case of mistaken identity worked to bring the twins together. Joseph informed his parents by letter today. Joseph, sent to Portsmouth, Va., for training, thought he recognized his brother in a Y. M. C. A. but. . .the sailor wasn't his brother, Abe—he was Abe's barracks mate. He quickly arranged a meeting between the 20-year-old twins.

Flier Recounts Impressions In First Flight Over Sicily

By FLT. LT. LESLIE POWELL

Somewhere in North Africa, Aug. 19 —(CP)— "New Boy" breathed easier and relaxed his grip in the edges of the gun frame as the R. C. A. F. Wellington became airborne and soared up into the star-filled sky. The last few minutes had been nervous ones for "New Boy" perched in the front gun turret and off for his first operational trip.

There had been a slight tightening in the stomach when he first slid into the confined seat up in the nose of the kite—one feels so alone. Then the stillness of the African night had been broken by the sound of a pair of mighty Hercules engines, and "B for Beer" taxied around the perimeter track until it reached the head of the runway and paused.

"OK. Here we go, boys." With these words Sqdn. Ldr. Claude Herbert, pilot from Magog, Que., pushed forward the throttles and "Wimpy" roared down the runway and took off on the first leg of the trip of the Messina beaches on the northeast tip of Sicily.

For a moment, as the plane shuddered and trembled speeding down the runway, "New Boy" had thought: "Life's so comfortable down on terra firma—what the devil am I doing up here?" But the quiet voice of the pilot over the inter-com saying "OK, Don. On course now," and the reply of Don Elliot, the navigator from Springhill, N. S. "Right, skipper, we stay on that course until we hit Utica island," claimed the freshman.

Over Mediterranean

There is not much to be seen on a night bombing raid—at least not until the target is reached. But "New Boy's" eyes became used to the darkness and down below he could make out the shoreline as the plane left the mainland behind and soared over the Mediterranean. But it was a different Mediterranean from that seen from ground level during the day. There was no glittering blue crested with shimmering whitetops. Just a dull dark mass.

Occasionally earphones came to life as one or other of the crew spoke to the skipper. "New Boy" wanted to flick his switch to "speak" and talk, too. Then came his chance. Far ahead to his left he could see a white light on the surface of the sea and over went his switch while he tried to speak calmly.

"Skipper! There's a white light ahead and to port. Might be a dinghy."

To his utter embarrasment the tiny white light he thought was a dinghy turned out to be a brilliantly illuminated hospital ship.

"Why don't I keep my big mouth shut?" he thought.

A dark mass loomed up below and turned out to be Sicily but the Wellington flew on. "New Boy's" heart jumped into his mouth when, suddenly, a bright light illuminated the aircraft. It was a flare but where it came from no one knew. Then the navigator's voice came over the inter-com. "Skipper, we better change course."

A New Course

Around swung the Wimpy as the pilot guided it to a new course, with Italy somewhere in front.

The bomb aimer, PO. Reg Strong from Drake, Sask., left the astro-hatch where he had spent the outgoing trip and crawled into his compartment just below "New Boy." The Lancashire accents of Sgt. Bert Jenkinson, the crew's wireless operator, came over the inter-com as he wished Reg luck with his bombing.

"New Boy" shifted uneasily. "Must be getting near target," he thought. And they were, for Elliot's voice advised all that the turning point had been reached.

Then Strong spoke up:

"Dead on the nose all right, Don, for there's Italy just ahead and the tip of Sicily on our right."

Sweat broke out on "New Boy's" brow, for out of the darkness below came Italian searchlight beams like inquisitive fingers probing an immense black bag — you know something's there, but you just can't lay hands on it. More searchlights came on, this time from Sicily, and flak guns from both sides of Messina straits opened up.

"New Boy's" grip tightened until he realized the runners were shooting at another kite; they were nowhere near "B for Beer." The searchlights kept shifting and "New Boy" thought: "Any minute we will be caught by them—there, they have us. "But no; it passed right over the Wellington."

Sound of Flak

A new sound confused "New Boy" until he realized it was flak bursting around the aircraft. Tracer bullets streaked past his turret and he held on tighter as the kite swooped, swerved, turned and twisted during the pilot's evasive tactics.

"We're in trouble now," thought "New Boy" until Elliott and Strong dispelled his fears.

"There are the beaches below us, Don, but I don't see much action on them," said Strong. "Let's make a run down to Messina and on the way back drop a few flares."

"Okay, Reg. Quite a few flares are being dropped behind us so perhaps we can save ours for a second run. Then we could drop bombs in two sticks on the third and fourth runs. That OK. with you, Skipper?"

"Okeydoke with me, boys. Just let me know what you want," came back Herbert's quiet voice.

"Good Lord," thought "New Boy." "How long are these idiots going to stay around here. It's all right to be keen. But not too keen."

South to Messina

They stooged as far south as Messina, where they were greeted with more flak and lights and, on the return journey northwards, lights and guns from San Giovanni on the mainland went into action. Arriving at the tip of the island again, the pilot swung the kite around, giving "New Boy" a too-clear view of the ground below with spurs of flame from the guns.

The second run was carried out as planned through a sky now vivid with lights from tracers and dropping flares. Then "New Boy's" nerves were steadied by the pilot's remark: "Getting pretty hot around here, Reg. See if you can't pick out a target on the next run and drop the whole load." Sweet words, matched only by the bomb-aimer's reply of "OK., Skip."

The third and final run started off all right, though the lights were getting closer. Then they caught the Wellington good and proper and the kite must have stood out like Lana Turner in an old women's home. The pilot couldn't shake the searchlights and others came on to cone the aircraft while the gunners below swung their guns into line with the lights.

"New Boy's" fear was completely gone — this was too exciting and thrilling for fear. It was amazing how he viewed the activity with a sense of detachment. In his confined seat he felt very little of the violent evasive action, but it was confusing to see a great fire below one moment and the next to see the same fire high overhead.

Hold 'Er Steady

As the "Wimpy" dipped and dived, with the pilot using every trick at his command to escape the ever-nearing flak, the bomb aimer made the most amazing request:

"Hold her steady a minute will you, Skipper? We're right over the target."

The pilot complied, and through the earphones came Strong's satisfied voice:

"OK. Claude, bombs gone."

The popping of flak in the vicinity of the kite increased as the Wellington swung northwards over the Straits to resume its homeward journey — a journey which the enemy were determined "wasn't really necessary." Gradually the flak and lights diminished. And as the course was set for home, the reaction set in. The crew realized the strain through which they had been and they all reached for water bottles for the first cool drink of the day.

Flying for hours high in the sky cools off the tepid North African drinking water nicely.

"New Boy" drank deeply and shifted his parachute harness a little. It dawned on him that he had enjoyed the whole thing—it was like a box seat at some super pyrotechnic display, a display which put the New York World's Fair to shame.

Back Home

Soon "B for Beer" reached our coast, and about six hours after the take-off, the pilot set the aircaft down gently. The crew tumbled out, stretching and bending tired limbs. A small truck came lumbering through the darkness to pick up the crew and take them to the intelligence tent for interrogation.

"New Boy" heard with amazement the rear gunner, Sgt. Phil Hyde of Magog, fellow townsman and old friend of the pilot, tell the Intelligence Officer that the flak was heavier than anything he had seen since he had been in North Africa. His statement was borne out by the next day's BBC broadcast, which reported "heaviest flak seen outside the Ruhr."

That shook "New Boy."

He considered himself quite an expert next day and spoke of the 1,000-air mile trip as commonplace. After listening to "New Boy's" comments for some time, the Squadron Commander, Wing Cmdr. Joseph St. Pierre from Ste. Eustache, Que., said: "You've had it, [illegible] I think we'd better ground you."

'Reg't. Going Ahead to Fame, Glory' Lt. Jack McKibbon Writes Parents

Trenton, Aug. 19—A letter from Lieut. Jack McKibbon to his parents here Mr. and Mrs. J. E. McKibbon, Henry Street, describes the Hastings & Prince Edward Regiment as "Going Straight Ahead to Fame and Glory."

Lieut. McKibbon was wounded in the battle of Sicily and in his letter tells of being in hospital in Africa waiting anxiously to get back into the battle. He was wounded by a sniper, who got him in the right foot but fortunately not thought to be serious, although for the time being his foot is in a cast. In the same hospital in a bed just across from Jack is Major Buchan, (Lord Tweedsmuir), who was second in command and is expected to take over command of the regiment on his recovery.

Another of the smaller deeds done by Red Cross is exemplified by the fact as stated by Lieut. McKibbon that each of the boys in hospital is given two envelopes by the Red Cross for letters which will be guaranteed a quick despatch. Jack's was sent through the United States Army Post Office and arrived in nine days.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex Craddock, Wragge Street, whose son Sergeant Kenneth Craddock was also wounded in the battle of Sicily received a letter from him, also sent through the U.S. Army P.O. Ken stated that his wounds were not serious, just shrapnel, in the elbow, and that he was progressing favorably. He said another Trentonian in the same hospital with him was Charles Whitney. Ken. is in hospital in Algiers having been flown there from Tunisia

Officers and ratings of the Canadian Navy stood side by side with several hundred employees of the Central Bridge Co. on Wednesday afternoon along the wind swept water front of the Trent River just above the town bridge, when Lieut. Commander Souter of the Royal Canadian Navy presided at the triple commissioning of three naval craft by the Royal Canadian Navy.

In addressing his employees previous to the actual ceremony Mr. Alex Hill, Superintendent of the Central Bridge Co., referred to the occasion as the acceptance and placing into active service of the ships. To his men he said: "Each one who participated in the making of these craft should be very proud to be handing over —to the Royal Canadian Navy your contribution to the winning of this war, and proud to see your ships going into active service." "These ships" he said, "Are the work of many months and in handing them over to the Canadian Navy we only hope they will bear up to all the magnificent contributions already made by that Navy." "We wish, on behalf of our men" he said, "Good sailing, worthy ships for a worthy Navy."

In a few brief seconds the commissioning pennant was raised on the mast-head and the Naval Ensign on the stern and the craft were officially "Royal Canadian Navy," crews for each filing aboard in smart naval style.

Ships Accepted by Navy

In accepting the ships Lieut. Commander Souter thanked all officials and employees of the Central Bridge Co. for a magnificent piece of work. He spoke of the valuable job being done all the way through by these boys on the home front in the building of such sea-going craft, which are an essential part of the navy. "Though your peacetime work has been the building of bridges," he said, "You lost no time in assuming the important work and responsibility of building of boats." He said these craft were doing a splendid work in Halifax, Sidney and other harbors and although they seem like small craft nevertheless they were a strong contribution towards the winning of the war.

He spoke of the three craft now commissioned as the final ships of this class to be built in Trenton and said that the company were now to be engaged in the building of tugs for the Royal Navy.

"He hoped," he said, at a future date to have the privilege of coming to Trenton to accept some other work of the Central Bridge Co.

In closing his address Lieut. Commander Souter admonished all to "Carry on the good work and help beat Hitler and his associates."

Three rousing cheers by the boys in blue for the builders of these boats was followed by even louder cheers by the employees of the Central Bridge Co. for the Royal Canadian Navy.

Traffic Cases Heard

Traffic cases occupied the major portion of the docket at Trenton police court on Tuesday. Six were fined the usual $1.00 and two others $2.00 each for breaches of the Parking Bylaw, while Frank Reid and John Dales paid $4.50 each for driving through a traffic signal.

For having liquor in an illegal place Mabel Weeks paid $13.00 as did also Thomas Haley and Sherman Patrick for being intoxicated.

Carmen Weldon and Louis Kirby were each fined $10.00 and costs or fourteen days for being intoxicated, and failing to pay were sentenced to 14 days in the common jail.

Percy Dafoe charged with assault against Bert Tyckman was given one year's suspended sentence and ordered to make restitution and pay costs to the amount of $66.60.

Magistrate J. L. Lloyd presided, while Country Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C. prosecuted.

A SEA "MYSTERY"

Belfast, Ireland, —(CP)— Here's another one of those war-time sea mysteries. A Coastal Command aircraft sweeping the Atlantic for submarines came across an invasion barge with an aircraft on board. The Admiralty probably knows how they came there, but it's not telling.

RETURNED AS PRISONER

Algiers—(CP)— Lt.-Gen. Achille Garbi of the Italian 216th Division has lived up to the boast scrawled by his men on the wall of Tripoli —"we will return." He was the first Italian general captured in Sicily and was brought to the Tunisian port from which he was driven.

The War Today—

Achieve Impossible in Pacific By Forcing Japs on Defensive

(By DeWITT MacKENZIE)
(Associated Press War Analyst)

As the big chiefs go into action at Quebec to grease the skids for Nazidom it strikes me we might well pause for touch of the cap to the gallant fighting services which have continued to hold the Pacific lines while we have been engaged in "beating Hitler first."

It gives one a chill to think what might have happened to Australia, the Hawaiian Islands, Alaska or even the west coast of continental United States and Canada if it hadn't been for the skill and sacrifice of all categories in the far Pacific. They've done one of the decisive jobs of the war.

The latest aerial success yesterday and Tuesday at Wewak, New Guinea, is a reminder that not only have the Pacific forces performed the essential holding operation against a powerful enemy, but they have done the impossible by seizing the initiative and putting the Japs on the defensive.

Will Wipe Out Jap Naval Base at Truk

The significance? Well, that beautiful Wewak job brings us just so much closer to the day when we shall wipe out the great Jap naval base at Truk, thus rendering the Mikado's forces impotent in that whole vast zone of islands northeast of Australia. The little men of the rising sun are being forced back step by step.

Meantime in the "Hitler-first" campaign, Moscow reports the Germans are counter-attacking before Kharkov on the fiercely-contested southern battlefront, seeking an opening for an offensive to offset the devastating Red drive. Such a development would greatly intensify the already-bloody crisis which is threatening to force the Nazi chief to withdraw his entire great line in Russia.

This turn of events has resulted in the Soviet army newspaper Red Star making a fresh appeal for a second land front in western Europe, to force Hitler to divert troops from Russia and put him on the defensive in both west and east.

Estimated 211 Nazi Divisins in Russia

Red Star estimates the German force in Russia at 211 divisions, which might run close to 3,000,000 effectives. There are said to be some 16 divisions more (say more than 200,000 men) in reserve in Poland. About 75 other divisions (maybe 1,000,000 troops) are estimated to be distributed over the rest of Europe.

"The disposition of the German forces and reserves clearly proves that the German general staff does not await any forthcoming large, serious operations by the Allies on the continent," says Red Star.

All this is set forth by the newspaper with direct reference to the Quebec conference, and of course anything published in Red Star represents the government view.

So far as Quebec is concerned, the need of a land front in Western Europe at the earliest feasible moment was conceded long ago by the Allied high command. Therefore the problem of Messrs. Churchill and Roosevelt, and their advisers, isn't whether there should be such a front but when it will be feasible to establish it.

Doctors Fight Scrub Typhus

Melbourne (CP- — Early in the New Guinea campaign scrub typhus began to take toll of the troops. It is a Rickettsial disease. The organisms are borne by a larval mite which must have an animal reservoir to live on.

Exactly the same disease occurs in Malaya, the N.E.I., coastal areas in Queensland and in Japan where it is called river fever or tsutsugamushi or "insect stinging people sleeping on the ground." Nowhere has a specific been found, beyond the general good nursing.

First reaction by Australian scientists was a search for means of rapid diagnosis. This is highly important in areas such as New Guinea where the patient may be suffering from one of a number of fevers. Heart strain follows if the patient is allowed to walk in the early stages.

Scientists of the Walter and Eliza Hall Institute, Melbourne, famous for influenza research, set to work and so far it has cost one life, that of Miss Dora Lush, M.Sc., bacteriologist, who was infected when a syringe slipped while she was inoculating animals.

Reunions Galore In North Africa

Wellington, N. Z., Aug. 19—(CP)—Unexpected meetings of brothers from New Zealand have made the war zone a hive of strange coincidences.

Two soldiers made a quick dive into a slit trench when enemy planes roared overhead. They turned to look at each other when the menace passed, and shook hands frantically. They were brothers, the elder had been three years in the desert, and the other had arrived that morning.

New Zealand airman ferrying planes to an advance ground east of Tripoli decided to hop a truck and pay a surprise visit to his brother whose unit was nearby. The truck he hailed had his brother as driver.

Two soldiers bathing at Baggush on the Mediterranean began yarning. They found their surnames were the same, and in no time at all discovered they were brothers. Their parents had separated when they were both youngsters, and one had been brought up in the North Island and the other in the South.

Four soldiers raised their glasses in a Cairo bar and said, "Here's to mother." They were a father and three sons—two from New Zealand and two from Britain. The war had re-united them.

A soldier from a Scottish regiment asked a New Zealander if he knew a family in Dunedin; he had stayed on in Scotland when his family has gone to New Zealand. The Kiwi smiled and produced a photograph. The Scottish soldier said "That's my sister." It was the Kiwi's fiancee.

Fight Eye Trouble In Aussie Desert

Sydney, Australia, Aug. 19—(CP)—Eye troubles which have effected troops along the vital supply line linking northern and southern Australia have been largely overcome by the efforts of three army eye specialists, one of whom is a Catholic priest. He is Rev. Frank Flynn, who was a Sydney eye specialist before entering the priesthood.

Army authorities became concerned at the large number of truck drivers affected after travelling across long desert roads. Heat, dust and the glare of the roads in Australia's arid heart caused severe inflammation of the lining of the eyelids.

After long experiments eye surgeons at first introduced a green strip at the top of the windshields which eliminated the violet rays. They ordered all drivers to wear goggles against dust and wind and also established a string of stations where routine medical treatment was provided before complications set in. This included painting the eyelids with a violet liquid, promptly dubbed glamor paint.

Treatment in some areas has reduced the incidence of eye trouble by 50 per cent.

Father Flynn treats dozens of patients in his surgery, thus saving the Army large expense and inconvenience in sending them to the south. He has improvised a range of necessary instruments. With the help of Army workship technicians he has made binocular magnifying apparatus for detecting foreign bodies in the eyes and instruments for eye testing.

Father Flynn comes from a family of six, all of whom are surgeons and five of whom are serving with the armed forces. His father was also a doctor.

ALLIED POLITICAL

British Foreign Office and American State Department—pulling in opposite directions in relation to the de Gaulle-Giraud setup.

It was beng predicted here today some form of modified recognition of the French committee would emerge from the conference, limited to the French Colonial Empire and not as a governmental institution.

It was suggested here last night that relations between Russia and the western democracies will be of paramount consideration, particularly as they appear to be reaching a point where some concrete indication of unity, co-operation and solidarity may be necessary to reassure public opinion in Allied and enemy-dominated countries.

Diplomatic sources here today stressed that Allied policy toward Italy has lately lost its propaganda value among the Italian people. They suggested that Premier Badoglio is presenting one face to the Germans and another to the Allies, with the result the Allies have been able to make no political progress among the Italian people since the downfall of Benito Mussolini.

May Be Duplicated.

This situation, it was suggested here, may be duplicated in the Balkans when military victories tear them from the Axis side—something that requires an immediate review of Allied political strategy.

What may emerge from the conference is a positive Allied general policy, making allowance for political differences in each state but at the same time designed to take advantage of the sort of internal unrest and disruption that has been evident in Italy.

As the war progresses in Europe, as the Russians advance on the eastern front, and as the Allies prepare for a second front on the Atlantic or Mediterranean coastlines, this problem of a unified and fixed political policy becomes more and more important.

Faced With Two Choices

The time is approaching when the people of occupied countries and German satellite countries will be faced with two choices for the future: Government under Russian or Allied guidance.

The arrival of the British Foreign Secretary and the expected arrival of the American Secretary of State emphasize these facts, and give rise to reports that some attempt will be made to forge at Quebec an All-Allied political program for Europe, to be unfolded with successive military developments.

TWO SPECTACULAR

Down the coat 350 miles, the Japanese air base town of Salamaua is largely in ruins from more than 1,000 tons of bombs dropped within the past month by Australians and Americans.

Five miles below Salamaua Japanese troops are fighting to keep Allied jungle forces from capturing the airdrome.

Supply Barges Blown Up

They need supplies and reinforcements which the Japanese try to sneak down by sea. Yesterday Allied planes blew up several supply barges and also hit at least four small coastal vessels. On southern New Britain 17 were destroyed or damaged.

Other Allied planes yesterday bombed a 4,500 ton enemy freighter-transport between New Britain and New Ireland.

Today's communique from Allied headquarters reported Allied bombers and fighters went back yesterday to the Wewak area airdromes where on Tuesday all but 52 of a fleet of 225 enemy planes were either destroyed or damaged. Thirty of the 52 rose to meet the raiders. Twenty-eight were shot down.

Strafed for Hours

Then the raiders bombed and strafed the 'dromes for hours until only ten of the fleet remained intact. They also set fire to three ships in the harbor. In the second raid, three Allied planes were lost, a total cost of six for the two raids.

The communique also reported that in the Solomons, below Vella Lavella Island occupied by U.S. troops last Sunday, American warships Tuesday night intercepted four Japanese destroyers escorting barges believed bound for the enemy's air base of Vila, on Kolombangara. Three destroyers were hit and one probably sunk after which the majority of the barges were destroyed. No American warship was damaged.

Tuesday night, in the heaviest of three raids made within a week on Balikpapan, Borneo, bombers covered 2,600 miles round trip to sink four tankers, damage two others and rekindle fires among oil refineries. All bombers got back.

Here is a clean, stainless antiseptic oil that will do more to help you get rid of your trouble than anything you've ever used.

Whitehall Notebook

By ALLAN NICKLESON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 19 —(CP)—A 71-year-old spinster, gifted with wit and vigor, held the House of Commons engrossed for more than half an hour in a speech exhorting the government to reverse the serious trend toward a dwindling population.

A silver-haired lady in a plain black frock, Eleanor Rathbone told the House during a debate on the population decrease that one of her ideas was to open up immigration barriers because "we are losing an opportunity which Hitler's lunacy offered us of getting some of the cream of European culture."

Miss Rathbone, independent member of the parliament for the combined English universities, more than once was encouraged by cheers from other members. And she drew laughter when she said that importing foreigners wouldn't matter because "we are a mongrel race," a reference to the many nationalities.

A member who interrupted to suggest she was getting out of order by straying from the subject brought her the rarest of parliamentary prizes—a graceful compliment from the chair.

"If I may say so with the greatest respect," said the chairman, Cmdr. C. Williams, "I thought the lady was making her points admirably."

Miss Rathbone urged several remedies, including better housing and family allowances to encourage mothers to bear large families.

Miss Rathbone has devoted herself to the population problem throughout the 14 years of her commons' membership.

Before Health Minister Ernest Brown terminated the debate by promising a broad inquiry on the whole question of birth-rate and population, a couple of other women members had their say.

Dr. Edith Summerskill, Labor, made the most original speech. Warning in advance that her proposal would not be looked on with a kindly eye by any male, she said every wife should have a legal share of her husband's wages, so serious was the frame of mind of the House, however, that no one laughed.

"The housewife should be given economic independence," said Dr. Summerskill, mother of two children. "It is the woman who decides the size of the family and where the woman in the home has been able to. . .compare her lot with that of other workers she is in a condition of silent revolt. She refuses to produce the most valuable commodity—the embryo worker."

Lady Astor, mother of six children, said she believed it would take 25 years for Dr. Summerskill's revolution to succeed. The men were to blame for the present state of affairs, she said, because "they have been in control."

"I know that even the richest man will not tell their wives how much they have got," she added. "Rich women will not tell their husbands."

A liberal party conference in London demanded that women be eligible for the House of Lords. It adopted further resolutions that women be granted equal status with men and should be entitled to retain their nationality on marriage to an Alien.

As an amendment two Oxford undergraduates, who said they had been "pelted with abuse by women liberals" for sponsoring the proposal, submitted it was essential that married women should devote themselves above all to rearing families.

'KILLER' KATAN WINS ODD FALL TO BEAT MORGAN

Ex-Marine Hurdles Out of Ring After Trying to Make Flying Tackle

STEELE IS BEATEN

As far as Belleville wrestling fans are concerned John Katan is still the No. 1 contender for the world's title, but had "Toar" Morgan not became too zealous maybe the picture would have been reversed at the Hume Arena last night. However, Morgan became over-wrought and tried one too many of his favourite flying tackles and landed prostrate outside of the ring where Referee Cliff Fox counted him "ten and out" in the main scrap of our weekly local grappling show.

True enough Morgan pleased the patrons by roughing the villainous Katan, but it remained for Dick Bishop, the Texas Terror, to steal the show in the semi-finals. After soundly beating "Glendale Fred" Steele, Bishop mounted the ropes, and hurdled the ring boards to battle all and sundry as the "Texas Teror", raced into the Arena "bull pen" and challenge 1,500 patrons.

Bishop went unmolested, as he milled through the crowd in a pugnacious manner challenging all and sundry. He was given a clear path until a lad clad in a Navy uniform settled the near-bedlam and quietly escorted the pugnacious Bishop back to the ringside. It marked the first time in Belleville's wrestling history that a contestant left the crowd unchallenged. Ultimately Bishop wended his way to his retirement unmolested. (Why? You'll never know.)

Katan Took First Fall

As for the main attraction that villainous John Katan took the first fall over the popular "Toar" Morgan with the appliance of his famed chin-lock, that left the ex-Marine an easy victim for a press. Morgan bounced back to even matters in the second round following a series of flying tackles and again had the "Palermo Assassin" on the third flying tackle Morgan missed his target and hurtled bodily through the ropes to land outside of the ring in a semi-conscious condition where Referee Fox tolled the "ten and out" count.

Of course it was explained before that "Texas Dick" Bishop was a real terror. He not only made Freddie Steele of Glendale concede the only fall of the semi-final go with a reverse grab-hold, but subsequently challenged the entire Arena populace and made it stick.

As for the curtain-raiser Joe Maich and George Tofalos hauled and pulled to a 30-minute draw and there's no use denying Promoter Frank Tunney will be back next Thursday night at the local palace de sport with more surprises, wait and see.

SWACO LASSIES BEAT RELIANCE IN SEMI-FINALS

Two Three-Run Splurges Help Winners to Take the Contest

L. NELSON HURT

Garnering in three runs in the second frame to take a decided advantage, Tommy Colden's SWACO lassies took the first game of the Ladies' Softball League play-offs over Reliance by the close margin of 8 to 7 on the Armouries lawn last night.

Despite the fact Skipper Harold Kurtz's Reliance lassies bounced back with a trio of runs in the top half of the third, SWACO added two more in their half of the same and were never headed.

It was purely a hitting contest as Norma Corneal, on the winners' hilltop, failed to strike out a single Reliance batter and in the same trend did not walk an opposition bat wielder. Millie Foster was on the hilltop for Reliance and fared little better than her opposing pitcher, although Miss Foster did whiff two and walked an equal amount the four ball route.

The SWACOs scored runs in all but the initial and fourth frames, while Reliance scored in clutches in the third, fifth and sixth.

Dot Rowbotham hit the game's only circuit blow for one run in the third. But it was Norma Corneal who helped her own pitching cause with three timely singles to pace the hitters of the night. Lela Nelson had a perfect two-for-two before she became victim of the game's only accident and fell to sustain a serious leg injury and had to be removed from the game and medical attention was necessary.

Although Reliance counted four two-base hits, A. Wright and G. Hickerson were the only two Kurtz batters to collect two safeties as the hitters of both squads held prominence with SWACO getting the odd base blow in 23 registered.

On Friday Bell-Sargent and Bristol gals resume their sectional playdowns at the Armouries, where all collections go directly to war services.

STATION RECORDS SHATTERED AT ATHLETIC MEET

I.T.S. Stages Show and Records for 100 Yards and Pole Vault Broken

MAYOR TAKES SALUTE

Station records were shattered with abandon at the annual field day staged at No. 5 I.T.S. of the R.C.A.F. here yesterday. The most noticeable establishment of new station records were in the track events and the pole vault.

A tie was declared for the station individual field day championship between Leroy Pietz of Crystal Beach and Gerald Sharkey of Winnipeg. Pietz took the century dash and the ball throw, while Sharkey came down on top in the middle distance runs of the mile and half mile gallops to capture top honors. Flight 29, with FO. McMahon in charge won the collective day's honors, while Flight 32, under FO. Benner, was second.

Pietz established a new station time for the 100 yard dash, when he came home in 10 2-5 seconds. Wright lowered the time for the station 440 yard dash at 57 seconds while Sharkey added to other records by doing the 880 yards in two minutes 17 seconds and the mile in 5.09 minutes for records. A. McPhee got a big hand for adding six inches to the station pole vault distance as he cleared the bar at ten feet ten inches and received the biggest ovation of the day for his efforts.

Wing Commander A. J. Snetsinger welcomed the civilian public and encouraged the competitors after His Worship, Mayor Rollins took the salute for the afternoon's parade. A goodly number of civilians from Belleville enjoyed the day's competition. Wing Commander Snetsinger was chief referee, FL. Cameron and Sgt. Attwell announcers, PO. Avren and FO. Warren clerks, FL. Douglas was observer while FO. McMahon and Sgt. Hamilton were starters. FL. Dickson was judge, while other officers and non-commissioned men materially assisted in the meet. Lieut.-Col. B. C. Donnan, officer commanding the Argyll Light Infantry, was also in attendance for the meet.

The results of the annual field day of No. 5 I.T.S. were:

100 Yards: Pietz, Wright, Walker.
440 Yards: Wright, Lopez, McAuley.
880 Yards: Sharkey, Lannon, Lake.
Mile: Sharkey, Rachmar, Wallace.
Cross Country: Rachmar, Wallace, Steffler.
Shot Put: Coyne, Montgomery, Lucas.
Discus: Dewar, Irving, Lucas.
Javelin: Carter, Black, Irving.
Ball Throw: Pietz, White, Irving.
Pole Vault: McPhee, Lucas, Lougheed.
Broad Jump: Naylor, Lannon, Coyne.
High Jump: Dawson, Martyn, Guest.
Log Throw: Dewar, Yausie, Gould.

Harry Hatch's Goodwill Bill Wins Stratford Futurity Pace

By the Canadian Press

In the second start of his career, Goodwill Bill, owned by H. E. Hatch of Toronto, dashed to the fore in both heats in the two-year-old futurity pace at Stratford yesterday to capture Canada's important event for youngsters under the sponsorship of the Standard Bred Horse Society.

The juvenile, member of the famed Volomite strain, was reigned by Chappy Chapman who was also the driver of Easter Parade, winner of the 2.26 pace in two straight heats. Darzy Volo, owned and driven by Frank Toor, finished first in all three heats of the 2:24 trot, with May Todd second each time. Darky Volo established a track record of 2:11 1-4 in the first heat of this clash. Pine Ridge Alex, driven by James, made a clean sweep of the free-for-all pace. The furity trot for two-year-olds went to Roman, driven by Pierce, in two heats, with Cecilia Lee second.

Third baseman Al Hart, for three seasons with the New Orleans' Pelicans in the Southern Association, was sold yesterday to the Brooklyn Dodgers but will not report until the end of the season. Hart is currently hitting .320 and has homered 15 times.

The 1943 licenses of Jockey George Bowman, owner-trainer Lawrence F. King and an exercise boy were revoked yesterday by the Illinois racing board for the alleged use of a battery on the horse Tib at Washington Park Aug. 10. Edward Janis, said to have been involved, was barred from all tracks in the state.

Since the opening of the 1940 baseball season, pitcher Joe Beggs of the Cincinnati Reds has not started a game and his great ambition is to be called upon some day by Manager Bill McKechnie to pitch the first delivery. As relief twirler, however, he was won 26 games and lost nine for the Reds.

The Ontario Provincial Police can shoot. Yesterday at the third annual revolver tournament at St. Catharines, Sgt. Douglas H. Darby of Hamilton took the individual championship with 229 out of a possible 240 points. Provincial Constables Jack Fulton, Strathroy, and Bern Hammett of St. Catharines were second and third. The provincial police entry won the team prize.

The California Athletic Commission announced its decision yesterday to recognize the winner as the lightweight champion in the bout between Henry Armstrong, the veteran ringster, and Luther White, Baltimore negro, when they meet in a 15-rounder Sept. 18 in Hollywood.

Phil Marchildon of Penetang, 17-game winner for the Philadelphia Athletics last year, was not good enough yesterday at Halifax to win a Service League game for R. C. A. F. against the Navy squad, the latter taking a 7-0 decision behind the twirling of Dick Pawley, formerly of Stratford and Dundas. Pawley gave only two hits.

Hester Hanover, three-year-old filly owned by Elbridge L. Gerry of New York, captured the Nyack Trot yesterday in the grand circuit racing at Empire City track, doing the second heat in 2:05 to outsprint symphony. The daily double, for which Mac Abigail and Gem Hanover combined, paid $179.30.

Senators Get Harlond Clift And Pitcher Niggeling In Effort to Rebuild Club

Clarke Griffith Has Been After Clift for Past Two Years

MAY FINISH SECOND

By JUDSON BAILEY
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

The way the rivals of the St. Louis Cardinals and New York Yankees are reacting to the unimpeded sweep of these two clubs to the Major League pennants is an interesting topic today.

Some still are trying to strengthen themselves for the present season, some are trying to rebuild for next year and some simply are waiting for the schedule to end.

Washington Senators are the prize example of the first group. It would take a miracle to move the Senators ahead of the Yankees, but Clark Griffith isn't overlooking any chances and yesterday he finally put through a deal with St. Louis Browns for third baseman Harlond Clift and pitcher John Niggeling.

The old fox has been trying to get Clift for at least two years.

Lost Runner-up Spot

The deal quite likely will let the Senators finish second, a jump from seventh place last year. They lost their runner-up spot yesterday though, by dividing a doubleheader at Chicago. The White Sox nosed them out in the first game 3-2 in 14 innings, but Washington rallied to win the nightcap 4-2. The Senators made 10 double plays in the two games.

The Yankees were ambushed by Cleveland Indians 9-8 and 7-5 in morning and afternoon games, enabling the Tribe to move up to second place. The second game went 14 innings before a two-run homer by Jeff Heath decided it. Heath, who had walloped a two-run homer in the first contest, also hit a triple and a single in the second game to bat in a total of seven runs for the day.

Drop 12th Straight

Philadelphia Athletics, among the clubs that are merely marking time, dropped their 12th consecutive game 4-0 in the face of a five-hit pitching performance by Bob Muncrief of the Browns and Detroit Tigers nosed out Boston Red Sox 1-0.

Brooklyn Dodgers tried out two youngsters on the mound yesterday and dropped both ends of a doubleheader to Chicago Cubs 7-5 and 15-6.

Hal Gregg and Rex Barney, both from Montreal, started the games for the Dodgers and each gave four hits and six walks in addition to some wild pitches before being eliminated early.

St. Louis Cardinals divided a mid-day doubleheader at Philadelphia, sinking the first game 6-0 on Howard Krist's five-hit hurling and dropping the second game 6-3.

Cincinnati split a doubleheader at Boston, winning 5-0 for Bucky Walters after losing 4-3 and Pittsburgh Pirates split with the New York Giants. A single by Pete Coscarart in the 10th gave Hank Gornicki his third win in two days 7-6 in the opener and Carl Hubbell won the nightcap 3-2.

TORONTO LEAFS BEATEN IN NINTH

Syracuse Chiefs Score Single Run on Double and One-Base Blow

(By The Associated Press)

Rufe Gentry seems assured of becoming a 20-game winning pitcher in the International League.

The Buffalo twirler chalked up his 17th triumph last night with a five-hit 5-0 shutout of Baltimore Orioles, a team that already boasts a 20-game winner in Ed. Klieman.

Given a lead in the first inning on Ott Denning's three-run homer, Gentry was effective the rest of the way although he handed out six walks in addition to four singles and a double. He fanned seven and left 10 Orioles stranded.

Newark gained a game and a half on the first-place Toronto Maple Leafs by taking a doubleheader from Montreal, 5-2 and 4-0 behind the excellent pitching of Ken Holcombe and Joe Page. Page was especially effective in the nightcap, striking 15 and yielding only three hits, all in the last three frames.

Toronto went down before Syracuse, 2-1, on Frankie Kelleher's ninth inning single with two out. The one-baser brought home Dutch Mele, who had doubled. Rochester beat Jersey City, 6-5, in 10 innings. The winning run scored on Del Rice's single, his third hit of the fray.

What's Doing in Sport

Stratford — (CP) — With the visiting team assisting to the extent of 11 errors, Stratford Nationals trounced Galt Terriers to the tune of 12-1 in the first of the semi-finals yesterday in the inter county senior baseball series. Catcher Billy Flick, 16, replaced Irish MisKimmons behind the plate for the Nats and made two hits.

Guelph — (CP) — The soccer team of No. 4 R.C.A.F. Wireless School rammed home a 61 victory against the Royal Netherlands Army in yesterday's scheduled match of the Guelph and district league, going into a tie with Fergus for first place as a result.

Brampton —(CP)— The leading sharpshooter of the Ontario Lacrosse Association is Ken Dixon of the Brampton Bullets, his count for the season thus far being 53 goals and 35 assists for an 88point total. Runner-up, with 81 points, is Bill Brunskill of Mimico Combines.

Hamilton —(CP)— Comprising former pro ball players, a nine from Niagara Falls, N.Y., easily disposed of the Hamilton Co-Ops 13-7 last night, with Hank Nowak, once in the major leagues, taking care of the moundwork for five innings.

Sarnia —(CP)— Sarnia smothered Tilburf 17-2 while London nosed out Goderich 7-6 in the semi-finals yesterday of the Western Counties Baseball Association Midget Series. The surviving teams are due to meet for the championship tonight.

Oshawa —(CP)— Ed Goodman's Oshawa rink, defending the General Motors Gold Cup, got away to a 13-11 win over the Belleville four skipped by C. R. Clapp, in the first round of the fifth annual bowling tournament for the trophy yesterday. Sixty-four rinks are competing.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 152

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Of the bridge playing clunks who will never be missed, there are gunks who bid no-trump when they could assist. They would rather bid no-trump and miss it a mile than admit they are following rules for awhile.

You have this responding hand:

♠9 5 2
♥K 7 6 3
♦8 5
♣A Q 7 4

Your hand contains four suit tricks, three of which are no-trump tricks. Until you bid something, partner assumes you have only two tricks in either a suit bid or no-trump.

You thus have additional tricks to show; two in suit and one in no-trump. Bids follow the order T-A-N; takeout, assist ,no-trump. And each raise shows an additional trick.

Suppose partner starts with an opening bid of one club. It is too late for you to show that you have a biddable club suit. Because your clubs may now be shown only as an assist.

Following T-A-N, you have no takeout suit. So you take the second choice of bids, an assist. Your first response with that hand is an assist to two clubs.

Having raised the partnership contract, you admit that your hand contains at least three tricks; one raise showing a trick more than your assumed two.

Suppose partner then bids three clubs. Again you follow T-A-N, unless you pass. You have already said you had no takeout. So you look to see if you have another assist in clubs.

You have an unshown suit trick. So you raise to four clubs and thus show your fourth suit trick. You have thus consumed all the tricks contained in your hand.

Akbolap Oxport would prefer to have you gamble at a contract of three no-trump in this spot. And there are times when you would make it, too.

Horse Sense tells you the correct bridge rules. If you prefer dice, shake, rattle, and roll.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Appointment in Berlin"

"Appointment in Berlin," the Columbia spy thriller which opens next at the McCarthy Theatre, is said to be one of the greatest conspiracies of modern times. George Sanders and Marguerite Chapman are starred and the fine supporting cast includes Onslow Stevens, Gale Sondergaard, Alan Napier and Alec Craig.

An added hit is the second feature, "Taxi, Mister," which old-timers and the youngest of screen fans will enjoy. There's a glimpse of a real old-fashioned, honest-to-goodness burlesque show, headed by the lustrous Grace Bradley that will wow the elders and thrill the youngsters, too. Bill Bendix and Joe Sawyer, as the two ambitious young taxi drivers, get in and out of trouble in most amazing and ludicrous fashion. Be sure and see this one if you like your screen fare hot, fast and funny.

The latest thing in news, British-Canadian newsreel is also shown.

AT THE BELLE

"The Moon is Down"

A breath-taking example of filmdom at its finest, "The Moon Is Down" the picturization of John Steinbeck's great novel, now at the Belle Theatre, is a truly great motion picture.

Vivid, intensely moving and masterfully filmed, is this story of the Nazi invasion of a peaceful Norwegian town. The bitter destiny of the defeated overwhelms the people as the sudden appearance of the German troops takes them completely unaware. But freedom is a precious heritage and therein lies the story that a people's hopes, strength and spirit — everything that freedom stands for—even under the heel of the conqueror, will never be crushed.

Producer Nunnally Johnson, who also wrote the dynamic screen play, has brought the novel to the screen with great care and faithfulness. The cast was selected particularly for ability to fulfill the qualifications of the individual roles.

The entire picture is a rare cinematic masterpiece. Not only has it captured the mood of the book, but the brilliance of the individual scenes has seldom, if ever, been surpassed. There remains in the writer's mind, for instance, the trial of a Norwegian patriot by a Nazi Colonel, convincingly played by Cir Cedric Hardwicke. Mayor Orden, whose screen counterpart is Henry Travers, sympathizes with the native who has killed a Nazi soldier, but is powerless to help him. As the doomed man goes to his death the mayor says:

"Go knowing that these men will never again have any rest, no rest at all, until they are gone from Norway, or dead. . ."

Again, Molly Morden, who is enacted by Dorris Bowdon, determines to avenge the death of her husband at the hands of the invaders. When a lonely, despondent Nazi lieutenant calls on her, she reaches for a pair of scissors: "Soon there will be one less of this horrible horde!"

Irving Pichel, in whose able hands the direction was placed, has kept the action swiftly moving throughout. Crisp and sure, he has enhanced the book with the individual touches that mark an exceptional motion picture.

Lee J. Cobb and Margaret Wycherly complete the featured cast of the film.

"Dood It Again" is the title of a comicolor cartoon to be presented on the same program with a new and thoroughly entertaining March of Time film "Mr. and Mrs. America."

AT THE CAPITOL

"Gentleman Jim"

The exciting 1880's and the colorful Gay Nineties furnish the backgound for the Capitol theatre's current attraction, "Gentleman Jim," which starts its local engagement today, Errol Flynn and Alexis Smith are co-starred in the Warner Bros. picturization of the life of James J. Corbett.

Climaxing the picture is the re-enactment of the now classic bout between Corbett and John L. Sullivan for the heavyweight championship of the world on September 7, 1892, in New Orleans. Here Corbett fighting a scientific bout, was able to knock out the slow, slugging Sullivan in the 21st. round.

"The Ghost Rider"

Johnny Mack Brown is the star and Raymond Hatton the featured player in "The Ghost Rider" first of the new Monogram western series which opens tonight at the Capitol theatre. Other players in this exciting melodrama of the western frontier are Beverly Boyd, Harry Woods, Tom Seidel, Milburn Moranti, Edmond Cobb, Charles King, Bud Osborne, Artie Ortego, GeGorge DeNormand and Jack Daley.

A color cartoon and Zane Grey's "King of the Mounties" completes the bill.

Double Shuffle.

Skipper "Spike" Pryke shook his Reliance batting order around Tuesday night with the most prolific results. The strategy worked like a charm as the top portion of the order came through with timely hits and generally speaking when the top half of the line-up collects hits you can usually mark down a victory in the win column. Teddy Henn was moved into the lead-off spot and Gerald Ethier batted in the clean-up position and the shift paid off in run dividends. On the other hand only Muldoon, the Fliers lead-off batter did any noticeable, willow-weilding for the top quartette of batters for the Fliers, Muldoon getting two hits of three collected by the top trio batters for P.O. Warren's men. With the series all even and the teams advancing to the fifth game tonight no doubt the Fliers will have to rely on Steve Borovitch, their Yankee hurler, to try and gain an edge. For Reliance it may be Johnny Bawden right back, as Bawden thrives on mound labors.

Poor Old Georgie.

There was no joy in the Oshawa "Colts" camp the other night when Scribe George Campbell's nine lost the first game of the Oshawa City League softball play-offs to the Motor City "Laundry", who took Mister Campbell's Colts to the well known "cleaners" and gave them a 9 to 4 washing. It marked the first game the 1942 O.A.S.A. champions had lost this year, but the reverse came at a most unopportune time. Scribe-Manager Campbell was actually at a loss for words in describing his team's downfall and when Mrs. Campbell's little boy Georgie faced an upset he really worries. (Remember the Winnipeg Rangers, George?)

Up in Peterboro' Harry Morgan's Basic Training "Soldiers" are leading the 4th Battery two games to nothing in their league finals and need but one more game to cinch the series. It would be like "old home week" if Skipper Morgan could bring his "Soldiers" to Belleville in an O.A.S.A. playdown.

Remember When.

Tiger Flowers became the first negro to hold the world's middleweight boxing title when he outpointed Harry Greb at New York 17 years ago tonight. Flowers held the crown four months before losing it to Mickey Walker Dec. 3rd., 1926.

Last Sunday Bill Walshe, sports editor of the Kingston sheet ,hauled one of the largest maskinonge ever caught in the St. Lawrence river into his boat. Then Billie proceeded to have his picture taken with the finny beauty,. and who could blame him? The 'lunge was 57 inches long and the 45-odd pounds had to be suspended on a hall tree as Bill was too weak to hold it up for the cameraman. (What kinda jungle juice did you use for bait, Willie?)

Maybe Glued.

Saturday, August 7, may long be remembered by Managers Mel Ott, Leo Durocher and Billy Southworth of the Giants, Dodgers and Cardinals, respectively, as the day of utter futility. At least, as far as their players availing themselves of scoring opportunities was concerned.

The two Greater New York teams, the Giants and Dodgers, must have set some kind of a record for ineptitude in Fiorella LaGuardia's big municipality by having 32 white-clad home runners left on base in the two parks. At the Polo Grounds, Manhattan, the usually mild-mannered Ott became actually blue in the face as he saw the Giants tie a major league record by having 18 runners stranded while losing to the Phillies, 9 to 6.

If Mel was blue, over in Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, Leo Durocher was absolutely livid, as 14 Dodgers were left stranded while the Braves won, 7 to 4. Bum futility reached its height in the seventh and eighth innings, when the third out left six runners stranded.

Inability to convert hits into runs even reached the lair of the World's Champion Cardinals, St. Louis, where the Redbirds long have been famous for the amount of run mileage they get on hits. But, on the afternoon of general ineptitude, the Cards could score only one run on 13 hits, while the Pirates won by a score of 4 to 1.

We were eating liver and onions in pop's honor, and I said, G, do you remember when people used to go away places for vacations, including us?

There's no place like home, unless things have changed, pop said, and I said, I know pop, but if I had my free choice of anything in the world I wanted to do for a vacation, do you know where I'd go?

No, do you? pop said, and I said, No sir, but it would either be to India to shoot wild tigers from the top of tame elephants or else to Asia to explore the insides of smoking volcanoes that nobody knew even existed.

I hope you'd get back all right, pop said, and ma said, Well if I had any such midaculous choice as that I know what I'd do, and no second choice about it. I'd get more beautiful new outfits than any woman ever dreamed of in her most fabulous moments, and I'd go to the cream della cream of fashionable resorts to be admired enviously by other women dressed in beautiful outfits of their own but natually not nearly as beautiful as mine, she said.

That's one important differences between the sexes, pop said. I'd go to some remote backwoods —with running water where I wouldn't have to wear a sired that wasn't a tatter, because there wouldn't be a sole there to see me, he said, and I said, Well anyways I know a guy that's got an old sofa that his mother was going to throw away, and today us fellows had more fun than a little jumping on it from the top of the letter box like parashoot troops, and maybe he'll still have it tomorrow if he's lucky, and that's as much fun as any vacation and maybe more than some.

High ho, life is a continual vacation when you're very young, pop said.

Which maybe it is, anyways as long as there's an old sofa or something around.

CHAPTER 7

"That's all for the present. Thank you, Miss Driscoll," Hare said.

It was the tone of voice he used to Madame Hurd, when she tried to tell him about a dream she had.

I walked out with what dignity I could muster. Utz was still expounding his nasty theory. I remembered with pleasure that Peggy always referred to him as Ug, the Ape Man. And then I remembered, without pleasure that I had left Peg in a dead faint on the kitchen floor.

The thought of Peg and Emilie Raymond laid out in neat faints on the kitchen floor put wings on my feet. I did not bother about the elevator, I tore up the three flights of stairs imagining horrible things all the way.

A fine sight it would be if one of the homicide squad beat me to it. Oh, why did I run off without waiting to find out if they were all right? Suppose the seemingly husky Peg had a weak heart? That didn't seem very likely, but then I did remember what I had forgotten in the excitement, that Miss Raymond was just recovering from a bad case of the flu and flu does leave people with weak hearts.

I flung open the door and almost knocked over a plainclothes man who was on his way out.

"It's Mary Driscoll, she lives here," Peggy explained. She was sitting on the sofa with Emilie and ilie."

"They took pictures of you, too," Emilie said.

"Don't be absurd. It was you they wanted," Peggy snapped.

I wanted to laugh, but I didn't dare. Imagine Peg, big, successful Peggy Hudson being annoyed because a pretty little commercial artist gets her picture in the papers and she doesn't! To change the subject I said, "I was really worried about both of you. I shouldn't have left you, but I really had to get back to find out a few more things and make the next edition. I can't imagine you fainting. Peg—you never did before!"

"I didn't faint."

"Why, Peggy, you simply collapsed! You went out like a light. Right on the floor. I thought—"

"You thought the Amazon had no feelings, I presume," Peg said. "Nevertheless it is a shock to suddenly hear that there's been a murder in your best friend's studio. And I didn't faint. I simply felt sick and weak. But Emilie fainted. I had quite a time bringing her to."

"I don't feel so good even yet," Emilie said. "The flu is awful. I don't think I'll ever get to feeling human again.

"You ought to stay in bed," I said.

"I do all I can. But I can't turn rush orders down. I've spent almost two years working up the business and now I've got it, a knocked over a plain-clothes man. I flung open the door, and almost

I need not have worried about them, they had both recovered.

Emilie had on my best jade housecoat, kindly lent by Peg, and was looking glamorous as usual, though she had looked like a sick-scarecrow when I left her less than an hour before.

"What-what happened?" I cried, as soon as the door shut behind the officer.

"Oh nothing, just about four dozen people battering at the door, asking foolish questions, and six cameramen taking pictures of Em-little thing like flu isn't going to ruin it for me—not while I can sit up and paint."

Emilie had had a hard struggle, I know and now her things were going over at last. She had a fine color sense and lots of originality. The department stores were using her canister sets and painted waste-baskets and bottles and many of the decorators, like Peggy, were beginning to call on her for special orders.

"I'll make some coffee, then we will all feel better," Peggy said.

I said I would feel better when I was sure that Jan was all right.

"What's wrong?" they both cried.

"I don't know. He hasn't showed up yet and at the hotel they say he wasn't in last night, and his bed wasn't slept in. One of the inspectors is over there now. I'm going to have to check with him—"

"Why don't you try reading your own newspaper?" Peg asked dryly.

"What?"

"It was in all the papers," Emilie said. "I should think the hotel would have known it, but you know how Jan is, never says a word. He went to Hollywood, flew down, to play in the Hollywood Bowl last night. I went down to tell him I wasn't well enough to start my lessons again as I had expected, and he told me."

"I still don't see why you don't read your own paper, Mary," Peg said again.

"I don't read all the music news!" But I knew the city editor would ask me that one, too, and just in case he hasn't read it himself, I'd better phone in a hurry.

It was just like Jan not to tell the hotel he was flying to Hollywood. It was a wonder he remembered to get on the plane. Fortunately the office knew about it, even if I didn't and Josh was too busy to say much. He just said that angle was taken care of, and for me to stick to the tenants and their stories and call back in half an hour.

FREE FROM RHEUMATIC PAIN BACKACHE; PRAISES SYNTONA

Condition Followed Six Years' Suffering with Stomach Disorders. Got Bad Dizzy Spells; Very Nervous and Always Felt Tired; Tells of Grand Relief.

MR. GEORGE BELL

Time and again, many men and women, rejoicing in the good results obtained by taking Syntona Herbal Compound have declared: "Syntona helped me when I needed it most. — It is the first medicine that ever gave me any real relief." That, for example, is the experience of Mr. George Bell, 312 York Street, London, Ontario, who said:

"In the past 6 years I have had a lot of stomach trouble. An hour or so after my meals I would get gassy pains with heartburn and belching up of hot, sour liquids. I would have a heavy, full, bloated sensation, and often felt sick and nauseated. At times I got bad dizzy spells with spots darting before my eyes and my tongue was always coated.

"More recently I developed a dull, aching pain across the small of my back and rheumatic pains settled in my limbs, joints and muscles. I often felt stiff and sore all over. I became very nervous and wasn't sleeping at all well at night, so I felt tired all the time.

"I had been reading about Syntona but didn't take it very seriously until some very good friends advised me to try it. Then I got some and I wasn't taking it very long when my stomach felt better. I found my food was digesting without giving me those awful gassy pains, sourness or heartburn. My bowels became more active. The dizziness and spots before my eyes stopped troubling me and I began to feel better all over. So, I kept on taking it until now I am also free from the rheumatic pains and backache. I am getting sound sleep at night and get up mornings feeling fully rested. As a result I am able to do my day's work without coming home feeling all fagged out as I used to."

Go to DOLAN THE DRUGGIST, Belleville, and find out how Syntona can help you, too.

Italian Underground Radio Calls For General Strike

London, Aug. 19 —(CP)— The Italian underground radio station "Milano E Liberta" broadcast a new appeal by anti-Fascist parties today calling for a general strike in Italy.

The broadcast recorded by the Associated press, demanded an immediate end to hostilities, abdication of King Victor Emmanuel, dismissal of Premier Badoglio, amnesty for political prisoners and freedom of workers to organize.

Secretary Hull Leaves For Quebec Parleys

Washington, Aug. 19 —(AP)— State Secretary Cordell Hull will leave Washington this afternoon for Quebec to participate in the Allied conference there.

Hull told his press conference he would be accompanied by James C. Dunn, political adviser to the secretary of state, and by his secretary, George W. Renchard.

The British foreign secretary, Anthony Eden, arrived in Quebec yesterday to participate in the discussions.

FRENCH GENERAL KILLED

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 19 (AP)—Gen. Louis-Marie Koeltz, commander of the French 19th Corps, has been killed in action, it was disclosed today.

The death of the General, whose troops fought alongside the British 1st Army in the Tunisian campaign, was disclosed with announcement of a posthumous Legion of Merit award.

Besides Gen. Koeltz, Gen. Henri Giraud, Gen. Sir Harold Alexander, Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery and 60 other British and French officers who played major roles in the North African landings and the subsequent Tunisian campaign were awarded Legion of Merit medals.

Sub Crews Hear Weird 'Honk, Honk' Sounds From Fish

Washington, Aug. 19 —(AP)— Allied submarines turning corners at 10 fathoms or so have pulled up in surprise and wonderment at hearing such raucous sounds as "Honk, Honk!—Beep, Beep!—Gr-rrr!"

The men with the earphones who listen to what goes on while their craft is slithering through the briny often confuse these noises with the hum of enemy propellers, and signal for a quick stop, look, listen.

But, as it turned out today, the eerie underwater traffic noises often are caused by fish.

"Fish," said the Fish and Wildlife Service of the United States, in a formal report, "actually grunt, purr, drum, grind their teeth and make a medley of other sounds that create strong underwater vibrations even when inaudible on the surface."

The F. and W. Service has made a series of recordings of fish noises which are being drummed into the ears of submarine "listeners" so that they will know the difference between an ichtyological burp and the U-boat propeller.

"The experts," said the report to Mr. Ickes, "obtained their most surprising results with the toadfish, a common species of the Atlantic coast known for its ugliness and its bad temper. Although advised by Fish and Wildlife Service biologists that the toadfish is an important sound-producer, the investigators were unprepared for the volume of its voice, which they said compared in intensity with a steamboat whistle."

WILL TIRPITZ TRY TO BREAK OUT OF CONCEALMENT?

Admiral Says It Would Have Chance of a Dog in Meat Grinder

(By JOHN E. LEE)
United States Naval Correspondent With the British Home Fleet
Distributed by The Canadian Press

With the British Home Fleet, (By Mail) — All the world remembers the spectacular pursuit of May, 1941, when the giant German battleship Bismarck burst into the Atlantic, sank the British battle cruiser Hood and in turn was sent to her doom in swift revenge.

Today another prize, the powerful Tirpitz, sistership of the Bismarck, glitters elusively before the eyes of Admiral Sir Bruce Fraser's home fleet, which has the irksome task of pinning down the German flagship and other warcraft in harbors where they are concealed.

Will the Tirpitz try to break out? That is the chief question in the minds of naval experts who direct the home fleet. Some believe she may attempt it. Others contend the Germans know such a venture would be suicide.

That is the view of a famous British Admiral commanding a cruiser squadron who recently received this correspondent aboard his flagship.

Dog's Chance in Meat Grinder

He predicted the Tirpitz or any other German ship would have as much chance of survival "as a dog in a meat grinder" if she tried to break out.

According to latest information at this northern British naval base, the Germans might be able to bring about ten large ships into action, in addition to destroyers, submarines and miscellaneous craft.

Germany's most powerful warships are the 40,000-ton Tirpitz, with eight 15-inch guns; the aircraft carrier Graf Zeppelin, with at least forty planes; the battle cruisers Scharnhorst and Gneisenau, each carrying nine 11-inch guns, and the pocket battleships Luetzow (ex-Deutschland) and Scheer, each with six 11-inch guns and capable of a speed of at least 28 knots.

There also are the cruisers Priz Eugen and Hipper, 10,000-ton vessels carrying eight-inch guns, and the 6,000-ton cruisers Emden, Leipzig, Koeln and Nuernburg, all equipped with six-inch guns. The cruiser Seydlitz may not have been completed.

The Tirpitz, Scharnhorst and Luetzow are believed to be in Northern Norway, while the Gneisenau is reported under repair in a Central Baltic port. The Scheer, possibly damaged by aerial attacks, The Hipper in drydock as a result of a New Year's eve clash with British warships the Prinz Eugen, the Koeln and the Graf Zeppelin, Emden and Leipzig probably all are in the Baltic. The Nuernburg is said to be somewhere in northern waters.

FISH IN STANDPIPE

Gananoque, Aug. 19 (CP)—Workers of the town of Gananoque are preparing for a fish dinner to follow a periodic cleaning of the town's water storage tank. The fish are drawn through the screened intake pipe as minnows and grow to large size—sometimes as much as three or four pounds—inside the standpipe.

CIVILIANS EMERGE FROM CAVES CUT IN MESSINA HILLS

Whole Families Found Refuge in Cave Discovered Last Year

PRAYED FOR RAIDS

By RELMAN MORIN
Associated Press War Correspondent

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 19 —(AP)— Dispatches from Sicily said terrified civilians began emerging today from caves cut into the rock of Messina's hills.

The Allied victory permitted them to return to the sunlight.

One cave measured 60 yards in length and 30 feet in width. It was found in tunnelling the hillside nearly a year ago when the first raids his Sicily.

Whole families made this their home through the past six months. Toward the end of the Sicilian campaign, they seldom left its dark recesses. They told of pain, disease and misery.

But the cruelty of the German troops and their callous disregard for all human considerations made the people pray for even heavier raids, they said, because it meant quicker deliverance.

30 Children Born There

During the time when the tunnel was packed tight with families 30 babies were born there, an Italian doctor said.

He worked in the flickering light of kerosene lamps, often dimmed by the haze of rock and dust from bombs and shells hitting the escarpment overhead. There was no disinfectant, little material for bandaging and few surgical instruments.

The doctor told R. A. F. officers that the Germans refused all professional assistance, confiscated all medical equipment and supplies, kept the single ambulance themselves and even prevented Italian hospital workers from lending their efforts to alleviate the suffering of the dirty, horror-crazed people in the cave.

People died in there—women in childbirth, new-born infants, men from shock, hunger and disease. The doctor was his own sanitary inspector. Sometimes he had to remove corpses himself. Others were too weak or too stunned to help.

Not all died from these causes. Some were shot by the Germans.

The people said that even the battle-tough Nazi officers and soldiers began losing their nerve as the raids continued day and night. When the Allied field artillery began shelling the town, too, they fought like wild animals for places in the rocky shelters.

Once Saved Admiral, Now Asks Probation On Burglary Count

Oakland, Calif., Aug. 19—(AP)— A young sailor identified in court as the man who rescued Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, commander-in-chief of the United States Pacific fleet, after a seaplane sank in San Francisco Bay last year, asked for probation yesterday on a burglary conviction. He was Raymond E. Gastil, 23, of Alameda, Calif.

Donald Thompson, deputy probation officer, cited the rescue of Admiral Nimitz and commented that Gastil "has been and should continue to be an asset to the navy."

Judge Lincoln S. Church referred the matter to the Youth Correction authority. Gastil said he committed the robbery because an allotment to his divorced wife left him only $5 a month.

Thompson's report said Gastil dived into the bay to bring out the admiral and three navy companions who were trapped in the wrecked seaplane. His report was based on information from the police department.

(The Navy Department in Washington announced July 10, 1942, that Admiral Nimitz was in a crash in an unidentified west coast port.)

Berne Says Troops Are Leaving Rome

Berne, Aug. 19 (AP)—Steps by the Italian government to make Rome an open city were reported today in a Rome dispatch to the Petit Dauphinois of Grenoble, which said troops were being evacuated from the capital.

Archives of the War Ministry also are being removed, the dispatch said.

It reported the Italian government had submitted a new proposition to the Allies to make Rome an open city but that no reply had yet been received.

WHITE BLUEBERRIES

Timmins, Aug. 19 (CP)—Charles Wallingford of Timmins reports a new type of berry—which he called a whiteberry—growing in Murphy Township, six miles north of here. He said the berries are identical in taste to blueberries but are reddish white in color. Mr. Wallingford has been in the area for 29 years as a forest ranger but has never seen the berries before. He reported they are "quite plentiful."

Girl Sustains Serious Injury To Left Hand

A serious accident occurred to Miss Vera M. Flindall, 16-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William R. Flindall, 84 Gordon Street, when her left hand was caught in the meat grinder at Loblaw's Groceteria this morning.

Miss Flindall was rushed to the Belleville General Hospital immediately after the accident, where Dr. G. S. Cronk was called. His examination determined the necessity of the removal of all four fingers to behind the hand knuckles and Miss Flindall was taken to the operating theatre.

Miss Flindall was working part time in the local food market during the school summer holidays. She was entering her last year of high school with the opening of the fall school term and was an outstanding musician having taken first class senior honors in pianoforte this year.

The actual cause of the accident is not yet decided but a thorough investigation will follow her release from hospital. Miss Flindall was considered one of the most conscientious workers in the store and her unfortunate accident is greatly regretted by the management and fellow employees.

Market Prices Remain Firm

Tomatoes were being featured on the Belleville market during Thursday's marketing, the fruit being large and firm. The price has not altered since Saturday of last week, tomatoes bringing 40 cents per basket, or $1.50 a bushel. Green corn appeared to be plentiful and sold for 40 cents per dozen ears. Cucumbers ranged from 25 cents to 40 cents per basket and the individual vegetable sold for 5 cents and two for 15 cents. Spanish onions, large and medium were bringing only 10 cents a bunch and cauliflower varied from 10 cents to 30 cents each according to size. Watermelons appeared in quantity and ran from 30 cents to 60 cents each. These melons were all fairly large and solid. Medium size eggs were 45 cents per dozen and 48 cents for the large. Chickens were 32 cents for the fall birds and 35 cents per pound for springers. A few white fish and trout were sold immediately for 36 cents and 45 cents per pound. Other vegetables and berries remained at the last week's prices.

Report Whole Nazi Gov't Left Berlin Is Unconfirmed

London, Aug. 19 —(CP)— The United Nations radio at Algiers today broadcast a Berne dispatch quoting Hitler's newspaper Voelkischer Beobachter as saying that "the whole German government has left Berlin." The broadcast was recorded by the Associated Press.

There was no immediate explanation or confirmation of the report.

The statement that the "whole German government" had moved came as a surprise in London, although there had been numerous unconfirmed reports the past three or four weeks that some governmental departments were being transferred.

These reports — none of which had any official confirmation—told of great vans being loaded at the doors of Berlin ministries and rolling away — possibly to Vienna, Linz or Breslau.

Neutral reports also have told of the moving of some governmental offices shortly after the Germans announced that they were withdrawing non-essential civilians from Berlin.

One Briton said "if the report is true it undoubtedly is inspired by the fears of a 'Hamburg' bombing which in a single night might destroy tons of records and create chaos in the governmental machinery."

There also was the possibility removal of the government might be a forerunner of an attempt, such as that of Rome, to obtain an "open city" status for the Reich capital.

This was regarded as doubtful, however, due to the great concentration of electrical and other factories in the Berlin area and its importance of a transportation centre.

Million Might be Involved

A conservative guess in London of the number of persons who would be involved if the whole government moved would be that at least 1,000,000 of Berlin's 4,400,000 population are connected in some way with civil or military government.

The city is in the middle of the evacuation of more than 1,000,000 women and children, whose removal was ordered after Hamburg was almost wiped out.

American aircraft operating from North African bases struck within 27 miles of Vienna when they attacked Wiener Neustadt last week and the city is only about 700 miles from Sicilian bases now held by the Allies.

Breslau and Vienna are also only about 700 miles from Britain.

Trains Choked With Hungarians Trying to Flee

Istanbul, Aug. 17 (Delayed) (AP) —Bombardment by American planes of the Wiener Neustadt Messerschmitt aircraft plant in former Austria Friday and dropping of tracts by the planes in Budapest stirred up trouble in the Hungarian capital, travellers from there said today.

The day after the planes appeared over Vienna and Budapest, the Central railway station of Budapest was choked with Hungarians trying to flee to the country.

Near the station, some large crowds waiting for trains began a demonstration and parade, crying "peace, peace," the travellers reported, adding that police broke up the demonstration.

The German Minister at Budapest had a long conference with Premier Nicholas Kallay Monday, according to a diplomat. The diplomat said the subject of the conference apperently was the dangerous point reached recently in Rumanian - Hungarian enmity over Transylvania.

It was believed the Germans proposed mediation of the quarrel and got an agreement from Kallay that the Hungarians would not push their claims for the present.

ALLIES TEAR NEW GAPS IN ITALY'S RAIL SYSTEM

U.S. Naval Forces Seize Islands Of Lipari, Stromboli

Now Control Sea Area Between Sicily And Lower Italy by Naval Assaults

DESTROY 34 PLANES

By RELMAN MORIN
Associated Press War Correspondent

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 20—(AP)—United States Naval Forces have seized the islands of Lipari and Stromboli to control the sea area between Sicily and lower Italy, headquarters announced today, as Allied air and sea power tore great new gaps in Italy's vital railway system.

Stupendous air assaults shattered the industrial and railway city of Foggia, across the peninsula from Naples and 20 miles inland from the Adriatic Sea, in one of the heaviest raids of the Mediterranean war. Allied bombers and their escorts knocked down 34 enemy fighters in battles there.

Occupation of volanic Lipari and Stromboli Tuesday morning put the entire Aeolian Island group in Allied hands. Stromboli is only 37 miles from Cape Vaticano on the Italian mainland, and Lipari is 35 miles northwest of Messina in Sicily.

British Team With U. S.

British warships teamed with air power in the hammer blows to disrupt Italy's rail system—a key of Italian defence—by pumping tons of shells into Scalea, on the west coast of the Calabrian Peninsula.

Wave upon wave of heavy R.A.F. and American bombers concentrating upon Foggia struck industrial and communications areas in Saturation raids typical of attacks that wrecked every important target in Sicily.

Heavy bombers from the Middle East joined in the day and night attacks on the city, 160 miles southeast of Rome.

Blast Sapri, Salerno

Medium bombers blasted at Sapri and Salerno, south of Naples, covering railroad yards with interlacing patterns of bombs, and fighter-bombers went after the important communications point at Catanzaro, on the sole of Italy's boot.

They shot down five more Axis fighters, and destruction of still another during the night brought the Allied bag for the period to 40.

Seventeen Allied planes were lost during all activities.

Lipari and Stromboli are the two main islands of seven in the Aeolian group. They may serve as important stepping stones toward the Italian boot. Control of the islands deprives the Axis of their use as observation points of Allied air and sea movement.

No Shipping Facilities

The islands apparently have no facilities for shipping except the smallest kind and there is no evidence that air fields have been built upon them. Lipari has 8,000 population, Stromboli 1,800.

There apparently was no resistance from the Italian garrison, which had been cut off from any large volume of supplies by Allied air and sea power.

There was every indication the enemy would fight to the last ditch to hold the extreme tip of the Italian Peninsula against the Allied armies massed along the Sicilian coast across Messina Strait.

Shells wailed steadily across the strait as Axis 15-inch coastal rifles, hurling 2,400-pound projectiles, dueled with British and American field batteries.

JAPAN'S SUPPLY LINE HAS BEEN CUT IN SOLOMONS

Enemy Still Has Precarious Foothold on New Georgia and Clings to Salamaua

REMAIN ON MUNDA

By C. YATES McDANIEL
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

Allied Headquarters, the Southwest Pacific, Aug. 20 (AP)—Japan's supply line has been cut in the Solomons and sorely strained in New Guinea—the right and left flanks of the Allies' Pacific drive—but the resourceful enemy still has a precarious foothold on New Georgia and clings to Salamaua.

Reports in today's communique from both ends of the 750-mile battle are emphasize clearly the jungle character of the Pacific war and the determination of the Japanese to make the most of the topography.

The communique told of American jungle troops in the Solomons going after pockets of enemy resistance Thursday on Atolls and Islets only a mile or so west of the Munda airfield on New Georgia which was wrested from the Japanese Aug. 5.

Despite that, the Japanese have remained on small isles near Munda, even shelling the field, making necessary the liquidation campaign which today's communique disclosed. They also are hanging on at Bairoko harbor. The communique indicated they are contiuing efforts to sneak in supplies at night to the imperilled garrison there, reporting that motor torpedo boats dispersed barges Thursday in the north New Georgia vicinity.

Sensing the peril posed by American occupation of Vella Laveila, the Japanese tried to land a counter-invasion force by destroyer-escorted barges early Wednesday but were repulsed.

(A dispatch from Guadalcanal by Art Burgess, Associated Press War Correspondent, said more than 1,000 Japanese soldiers were slain or drowned as United States light naval units routed the destroyers and blasted the barges.)

In the northeastern New Guinea fighting zone, the communique reported consolidation of Australian and American positions on ridges five miles southwest of Salamaua. That is within three miles of the airdrome, the primary objective.

Striking Barrage Balloon Cables Not Recommended "As a Hobby"

By LOUIS V. HUNTER
Canadian Press War Correspondent

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 20 (CP Cable)—Lt.-Col. Cliff Wallace, Press Relations Officer of the Canadian army overseas escaped uninjured when the aircraft in which he was returning to North Africa from Sicily crash-landed recently at an airfield at Licata, it was announced today.

The aircraft struck a barrage balloon cable and part of its port wing was torn off.

The P.R.O. who revealed the crash only today said the experience "is not one to be recommended as a hobby."

Col. Wallace insisted when he saw the crash was inevitable that his batman, Pte. Harry Beck of Bridgewater, N.S., take his seat so the batman could use the safety belt.

Beck, a blond youngster, said Col. Wallace "simply insisted I take it—that's all there was to it."

The aircraft, "Speckled Hen," had been in the air half an hour when it struck the cable. The pilots, Lieuts. George Tan of Lima, Ohio, and Lloyd Bethune of Grand Rapids, Mich., made the successful crash-landing on a fighter-dotted airfield where an ambulance greeted them. No one was hurt.

BERLIN ATTACKED IN SERIES OF ALLIED FORAYS

Bombers Account For 16 Enemy Fighters And Escorts Knock Down 18 More

AIRFIELDS BLASTED

London, Aug. 20—(CP)—Fast R. A. F. Mosquito bombers again attacked targets in Berlin last night while fighters struck at airfields and railway targets on the continent, it was announced today.

The night raids followed blows by Allied planes, including an R.C. A. F. fighter wing, at four of Germany's most important air bases in Holland and France yesterday. A joint Anglo-American communique disclosed 50 enemy aircraft were shot down yesterday.

Intruders last night attacked railway and airfield targets in France and Belgium.

Flushing and Gilze-Rijen in Holland were battered by American heavy bombers late yesterday afternoon and 34 enemy planes were shot down by the bombers and their escorts of R. A. F., R. C. A. F., and American fighters.

34 Enemy Planes Downed

The bombers accounted for 16 enemy fighters while their escorts knocked down 18, two of them falling before the guns of Canadian Spitfires. Good bombing results were reported.

Four bombers and two fighters were lost in these raids but the pilot of one was saved.

Earlier in the day R. A. F. and American medium bombers had blasted Nazi airfields at Poix and Amiens-Clissy in France. The Americans flew on the first attack while the R. A. F. planes flowed in for a second smash.

R. C. A. F. fighters provided protection on both attacks, shooting down an Me109 over northern France. On other sweeps typhoons and Spitfires of the R.A.F. knocked down 13 German fighters, while another fell to a bomber.

Six Allied Planes Lost

Six Allied fighters, one of them a Canadian, were reported lost.

Bomb, Burn, Ruthlessly Destroy Any Responsible For War Aim of Parley

Conference Studies Plans for Supplementary Land Operations

(By J. F. SANDERSON)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Quebec, Aug. 20. (CP)—Three months ago Prime Minister Churchill, speaking before the Congress of the United States announced the intensification of allied bombing raids over Axis-dominated Europe, particularly throughout the industrial areas of the Reich.

He said the experiment of trying to knock Germany out of the war by bombing alone was worth a trial providing other means of shortening the war were not excluded. Since that day, thousands of tons of bombs have been rained on German and Italian cities in the greatest softening-up process in history.

But now, as signs multiply that the hour for the invasion of Europe is at hand, it is apparent the Allied High Command has decided that strategic bombing is not enough; that massive land forces must be used to supplement the bomber in the final, conclusive attack on the flanks of the Nazi-dominated continent.

As President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Prime Minister Mackenzie King went into their third day of conferences on military and political strategy, there were plain indications, not only in Quebec but in dispatches from overseas, that the hour for invasion of Europe is not far distant.

Cordell Hull Expected

Cordell Hull, the veteran American Secretary of State, is expected here today, completing the list of principals. His arrival, two days after Anthony Eden, the British Foreign Secretary, emphasized the political problems facing the United Nations, particularly in Europe—problems that will develop quickly once the invasion starts.

The timing of the blow in Europe, it was suggested here today, is of paramount importance because of the success of the Russian summer offensive on the eastern front. The impression prevails in some quarters here that the primary responsibility of the military planners now in Quebec is to speed up preparations for the allied assault in the west, so as to take immediate advantage of the steamroller offensive in the east.

The military plans being prepared at the conference are designed

Eleven Points of Discussion Listed as Subjects of Discussion

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Quebec, Aug. 19—(CP)—Deliberations of President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill at their sixth war conference are carried on in utmost secrecy and there's virtually no way of getting a full, accurate picture of their work—but certainly their agenda is heavy.

Morsels of information are given newspapermen by official spokesmen for the British, American and Canadian government information services, but nothing about the subjects discussed.

Now virtually all the major conferees are in Quebec. Cordell Hull, American Secretary of State and last high official definitely known to be coming here, is on his way. The Churchill-Roosevelt conference is in its final phase.

During the week of preliminary discussions many subjects were listed in speculation as likely to be on the conference agenda.

Here, in summary, are 11 points which have been among the most widely mentioned by conference correspondents:

1. The planning of new and unprecedented operations against enemy and enemy-occupied lands in continental Europe, presumably across the English Channel into France, against Italy or the German vassal states in the Balkans, against Norway, or at a number of points simultaneously.

2. The planning of new blows against the Japanese in the Pacific arena, including a drive to retake Burma and push the Nipponese out of the South Pacific islands and the Netherlands East Indies.

3. The naming of commanding officers for these various offensive operations.

4. The determination of the role to be played by the Canadian armed forces, particularly the army, in future offensives; whether the army is to go into action as a unit or whether one or more sections may be detached for service with other Allied forces as was the case with the Canadian 1st Division in Sicily.

5. A decision on the extent of formal recognition to be accorded the French committee for national liberation under Gen. Charles De

KING OF ITALY BROADCASTS TO SICILIAN PEOPLE

Rome Radio Hints Ruler Is Trying to Forestall Move Toward Separation

LOYALTY STRESSED

London, Aug. 20 (CP)—King Victor Emmanuel told Sicilians in a proclamation broadcast by the Rome radio today that the present isolation of Sicily from the rest of Italy "will not last for long" and he made no mention of continued prosecution of the war.

(A letter broadcast by Rome indicated the King was trying to forestall a separatist movement rather than to imply that peace was in the offing.

(Quoting the newspaper Il Messaggero, it said rumors had reached Italy that the Sicilians were trying to set up their own government; declared that at the "present moment separatism is a crime against the mother country." Sicilians have long been at best lukewarm toward having mainland Italians as their chiefs of state.)

The broadcast of the unbelligerent proclamation was recorded by The Associated Press.

The King opened his message by recalling that Premier Pietro Badoglio and former Premier Vittorio Emanuele Orlando previously had addressed the Italian people.

"I have lived with you this terrible moment," he continued. "I have heard your voice. I have understood your sufferings.

"Italians of Sicily, your King is near to you.

King's Faith in Future

"I have faith in a better future. I know that you are faithful to me and to my reigning house. We are now cut off one from the other, but this will not last for long. The future will bring a reward for your sufferings."

The King pointedly stressed Sicily's fealty to the monarch in general and the House of Savoy in particular. He spoke of Italy as wounded and predicted the "certain resurrection of your country, generous and strong."

Thirty Villages Captured and 2,400 Nazis Wiped Out

Russians Forced To Fight Over Terrain That Lends Itself To Defence

ACTION SHARPENING

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, Aug. 20. (AP)—Difficult going in terrain naturally lending itself to defence was reported slowing down the Red Army today as it pressed twin drives on the Nazi bastions of Bryansk and Kharkov.

Front line dispatches to the Soviet army organ Red Star reported that Russian troops on the Central front were encountering "considerable difficulties and enormous strain" as they battled their way through forests and swamps and across numerous small rivers toward Bryansk.

The nature of the country, the dispatches said, offered many advantages to the Nazi defendants.

On the Kharkov front in the Ukraine, some 240 miles south of Bryansk, Russian troops were said to be encountering stiff resistance in attempts to overcome German defences based on hills forming a natural line around the city.

Action in this sector was sharpening in the face of mounting German counter-attacks, while the Red Army air force pounded heavily at bases in the enemy rear in an endeavor to cripple supply routes.

Fierce Battle Reported

A fierce battle was reported in one area of the front east of Bryansk where Soviet troops were said to have attacked enemy positions based on four villages. The terrain was such, front line dispatches said, that neither side was able to use tanks and infantrymen slugged it out at close quarters.

Fresh German battalions were repeatedly hurled into the fray but were unable to hold off the charging Red Army, which meth-

Eight Persons Believed Buried By Explosion

Kearny, N.J., Aug. 20. (AP)— A mass of rubble hid the fate today of at least eight persons believed buried in the ruins of a three-storey brick and concrete building at the Congoleum-Nairn, Inc., plant after an explosion and fire which left three dead and ten others injured, eight critically.

Fire Chief Charles Burnett of Newark said steamshovels would be used in the search of the blackened, smoking heads of debris.

The blast late yesterday afternoon rocked a 10-mile area in the heart of northern New Jersey and broke windows in homes and stores within a mile radius of the sprawling linoleum products plant.

Fire which sprouted out from the blasted building wrecked two other structures before the flames were brought under control last night.

A spokesman for the company said a check of workers' homes indicated eight persons were missing but other sources indicated the toll might rise much higher.

Fire Chief Charles Burnett of Newark said the explosion was caused by dust from cork and linoleum.

Two Men Hanged At Montreal Jail

Montreal, Aug. 20 (CP)—In a double hanging at the Montreal jail early today, Lucien Valiquette, 25, and Roger Beaudoin, 21, paid for the murder last Nov. 25 of a nightwatchman, robbed of his $20 pay envelope by his attackers.

The murdered man was Francois Mingan, 62-year-old employe of the east-end plant of the Guaranteed Pure Milk Company.

Police testified in court that Valiquette had been picked up in a stolen car an hour and a half before the slaying was actually reported while Meaudoin was taken prisoner several hours later.

Each accused the other of the killing but both were found guilty of the crime at separate trials; Valiquette in February and Beaudoin in May.

Canadian Flier Sinks Nazi Minesweeper

London, Aug. 20 —(CP Cable)— Flying Officer J. L. Dehoux of Toronto sank a German minesweeper near Calais during last night, the Air Ministry News Service announced today.

Dehoux and other pilots found German ships a mile off shore and the Canadian pilot took the minesweeper by surprise while his companions were destroying an escorting R-boat and setting another on fire.

At the same time it was announced the Air Ministry in a message to the Air Officer commanding the Coastal Command had passed on the Cabinet's congratulations for outstanding successes in the battle against U-boats. The message mentioned specifically the work of Canadian fliers.

Mrs. Churchill And Daughter to Broadcast

Quebec, Aug. 20—(CP)—It was announced today by M. R. K. Burge, British Ministry of Information spokesman, that Mrs. Churchill, wife of the Prime Minister, will broadcast to British listeners at 1.15 p.m., E.D.T. Sunday in support of the "Aid to Russia" campaign, and that her daughter, Mary, will speak in French and English over a national network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation Sunday evening at 8.45 p.m. E.D.T.

Bombaimer Makes Safe Bellylanding In Darkness With Full Load of Bombs

London, Aug. 20 —(CP Cable)— An enemy night fighter attacked a giant R. A. F. Lancaster bomber while it was crossing the Alps last Monday en route to raid Turin, killed the navigator and wounded the pilot so badly he was unconscious and left Flt. Sgt. A. W. J. Larden of North Bay, Ont., a bombardier, in charge of the aircraft 500 miles from its base.

Larden, although he had never flown a plane for more than a few minutes before, lifted the pilot from his seat and took over the controls. Five hours later, with the crew holding its breath, Larden brought the plane in for a perfect bellylanding in the darkness of a North African field.

The enemy fighter was still gunning for the plane when Larden took over the pilot's place, forcing him to dive from 15,000 feet to 3,000 feet in order to shake it.

Then, deciding there was little chance of reaching England and even less of reaching Turin without a navigator, he set a course for North Africa. He tried to jettison the bombs, but the release mechanism had been hit and would not work.

Larden had been at the controls five hours, flying low over the sea, when he managed to reach the coast of North Africa. Picking an African coast town and airdrome, Larden circled the field once and came in perfectly despite the bomb-loaded racks, three damaged engines and the 36 bullet holes perforating the machine.

He was as surprised at his skill as anyone, admitting, "I never landed a plane before."

HAROLD FARMER ILL WITH LOCKJAW

Failure to attend to a cut in his hand, which he sustained over three weeks ago caused Thomas Ryan, farmer, R. R. I, Harold, to be admitted to Belleville General Hospital on Wednesday suffering from lockjaw. He is being attended by Dr. E. A. Carleton of Stirling, who reported today that the patient is making a satisfactory recovery. Mr. Ryan started to see his physician on Wednesday after the cut sustained began to bother him and when only a short distance from Stirling was unable to continue his journey. He stopped his car and was found later by the side of the road in a ditch by a passing motorist, who notified Dr. Carleton. He was rushed to the hospital in a passing truck and in a serious condition, which has steadily improved since his admittance.

WRIST WATCH TAKEN FROM RUNNING BOARD

Placing his wrist watch on the running board of a parked motor car while he played football on the Collegiate Campus here yesterday, Jack Rowsome, Trenton, was more than surprised, when the motor car was gone, and so was his watch, when play terminated.

So engrossed had young Rowsome became in the game of football he had failed to observe the car owner return to his vehicle and drive away with the watch on the running board. The lad reported the incident to police, adding he thought the vehicle was an Essex model and had been parked on the east side of Church Street opposite the Belleville Collegiate

2 Tweed Boys Escape Serious Injury When Buggy Is Hit by Car

Tweed, (Special)—Jack and Pat LeSage, young sons of Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred LeSage, escaped serious injury in an accident which occurred while they were visiting with their uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Jos. McGrath at Atherley, near Orillia.

The youngsters had left the farm in a buggy with their uncle and as the vehicle emerged from a side-road it was struck by a car driven by a resident of that vicinity. The buggy was badly smashed and young Jack received head injuries which required five stitches to close. Pat was tossed some distance but escaped with a shaking-up, while the other occupant, Mr. McGrath was rendered unconscious when he was run over by the buggy, as the horse bolted.

The horse's leg was broken when struck by the car and it was necessary to destroy the animal.

Mr. and Mrs. LeSage immediately proceeded to Atherley on receipt of the news.

The driver of the car was unable to avoid the accident as the side road was hidden by a knoll and he escaped without any injuries.

WO1 John Silver Is 2,000th Man From Trenton Air Station to Donate Blood at Kiwanis Blood Clinic

One hundred Canadian airmen contributed their blood to aid their fellow airmen and Canadian soldiers when they, one hundred strong, gave their blood at the Kiwanis Blood Donors' Clinic last night The men were all members of the personnel of Trenton Air Station.

These men have been in the highest brackets of voluntary blood donors during the last year. WO1 John Silver, was the 2,000th Canadian airman from Trenton Station to make his donation of blood at the Clinic and the event was recorded by an R.C.A.F. photographer from Toronto.

Wing Commander Noble, Chief Medical Officer, was credited with the great success of this work and the Chairman of the Clinic, Lt Col. P. H. Wills, expressed his appreciation for the support the Clinic has received from these men. Group Captain R. E. McBurney has also lent every support and assistance.

The men contributing their blood to this cause, the helping of their comrades wounded in combat, are among the finest of Canadian youth, and their efforts are willing and ceaseless. No man is asked to give his blood....each man voluntarily offers himself with the most selfless and genuine interest, for, as one young man remarked: "We may get our own blood back in our own veins some day.

The need for blood donations is great at the present time. The lists of wounded Canadian airmen and soldiers mount with each passing day as the reports arrive from Sicily telling of the hundreds who suffer for the cause for which the whole world is at war. The greatest praise and appreciation must go to these one hundred men and the other hundreds as well who gave their blood to help a wounded comrade.

Jury Recommends No Passengers Be Allowed to Ride in Truck Cabs

Inquest Held in Accident Case Involving Fatal Injury to Jean Brant

WAS UNAVOIDABLE

At the inquest held on Thursday night before Coroner Dr. J. J. Robertson, to investigate an accident, which occurred 1 1-2 miles west of Deseronto on Aug. 17, ending in the death of Jean Brant, seven-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Brant of Deseronto, the jury found that the death of Jean Brant was unavoidable. The jury also recommended that no passengers should be allowed to ride in a truck cab.

Assistant Crown Attorney S. G. Robertson conducted the investigation at which six witnesses were called. Constable O'Brien who had been called to the scene of the accident testified, that there had been a horse-drawn hayrick and a truck on the road, and that the truck had skidded over so that its front wheels rested on the shoulder of the road. Thomas Claus, who was driving the load of hay, and Frank Green was riding on the load, testified that Jean Brant with her brother and a neighbor had been playing in the field where they were haying.

They had driven the load of hay out of the field, and just as the they were opposite the Brant home, they saw a truck approaching on the right-hand side of the road. They heard the brakes of the truck, and a crash and looking back had seen the child under the back end of the truck. It was not known whether the children had been hanging onto the hay-load, but they had not been seen by either of the men on the load.

Boy Crosses Road

Edward Goulding, a passenger in the truck at the time of the accident, Edwin Dow, an employee of the W. Harris Co., owner of the truck and an assistant of the driver, and Ivan Barrager, driver of the truck, testified that just as the truck approached the load of hay and was almost opposite the heads of the horses, a small boy darted from behind the load of hay, and ran across the road in front of the truck.

The driver leaned on the horn and applied the brakes slightly. Just as the boy got across the road, a girl also darted from behind the hay-load. The driver applied the brakes fully, but the girl was hit.

The jury asked whether there was any law which said that three people should not ride in the cab of a truck, and when told that there was none, made the recommendation that no passengers should be allowed to ride in a truck. Members of the Coroner's jury were Hazen Stairs, George Finch, Bert Farrar, Lionel Harris, and Lorne Green.

W. G. HOWES

(Formerly of Thurlow Township)

He was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Howes, whom many will remember as market gardeners of this district.

He was born in Thurlow Township and spent most of his early life there attending public school and the Methodist church at Roslin. He was in his 63rd year.

In 1904 he went West and took up farming, when war broke out in 1914 he enlisted with the 53rd battalion of Saskatchewan and while on active duty he received severe shrapnel wounds in the knee and back and at times he has been unable to work.

Although he had been in the hospital for three months his death came as a shock to his many friends here.

REPORT OF DEATH ERRONEOUS

Washington, Aug. 20 (AP)—United States War Department records showed today that an Associated Press dispatch received yesterday from Allied headquarters in North Africa reporting the death of Gen. Louis Marie Koeltz, Commander of the French 19th Army Corps, was erroneous.

The dispatch said that the U.S. Legion of Merit Medal had been given posthumously to Gen. Koeltz. This apparently was due to confusion of his name with that of Gen. Marie Joseph Edouard Welvert, who was killed while leading French troops in the Pichon sector in Tunisia last April and who was awarded the Legion of Merit posthumously.

The War Department said Gen. Koeltz, who was one of a number of Allied leaders in the North African campaign to receive the award, is alive. An Algiers broadcast today said "Gen. Koeltz is in perfect health."

Fewer Candidates For Entry In Navy Being Rejected

Ottawa, Aug. 20 —(CP)— Navy Minister Macdonald said in a statement today that fewer candidates for entry into the Royal Canadian Navy are being rejected on medical grounds than any time since the war began, although physical requirements have been kept at a high standard.

The Minister said that of the prospective recruits examined during May, June and July of this year only 9.8 per cent failed to meet the required standard, and the percentage of medical rejects has shown a consistent downward trend since the naval service took over the conduct of medical examinations for its recruits.

Before May, 1941, medical examinations were conducted under various auspices, including private physicians, and no statistics covering medical rejections are available. In the period immediately following May, 1941, 11.8 per cent of candidates were rejected—more than two per cent above the rate shown by the latest figures.

Mr. Macdonald, quoting a report of Surgeon Capt. A. McCallum, Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve, Medical Director General of the R. C. N., said that for the entire period between May 1, 1941 and July 1, 1943, the percentage of candidates rejected on medical grounds was 10.2.

Defective vision is the greatest single cause of rejection among candidates for entry into the R. C. N., and nearly 25 per cent of the total number rejected are turned down for that reason.

U.S. NAVAL

(Ross Munro, Canadian Press War Coresspondent now with the British 8th Army, reported last night that the British and American guns were brought into action shortly after Messina was cleaned out. He said that 15 miles of the Italian coast was in range of Allied artillery, allowing them to pound Reggio Calabria itself).

Extremely Difficult Task

Allied bombers sought to knock out the enemy batteries, hidden in the mountains along the Calabrian shore, but the protective anti-aircraft fire made their task extremely difficult.

Although there was no evidence of any mass evacuation of the area, some German troops who fought to the last hours on Sicily are withdrawing northward through a curtain of fire laid down by Allied aircraft, which are maintaining ceaseless sweeps over southern Italy as far north as Catanzaro, two-thirds of the way to the mainland heel.

(Radio France in Algiers said in a midday broadcast recorded by The Associated Press that "for 24 hours now Allied artillery, air forces and naval units have been plastering southern Italy in one of the most formidable combined attacks ever seen."

34 Planes Shot Down

Thirty-four enemy fighters were shot down a communique said, in the Foggia action, one of the greatest raids of the Mediterranean war. Five more Axis planes were destroyed over southern Italy, and another was bagged Wednesday night.

Seventeen Allied planes were lost during all operations.

The Allied mass bombing tactics that had knocked out every important target in Sicily were applied to Foggia — 20 miles inland from the Adriatic Sea — by R.A.F. Wellingtons after dark and heavy U.S. bombers during the day. Foggia, a large industrial city and railway junction, lies 160 miles southeast of Rome.

British cruisers and destroyers steaming up the west coast of the Calabrian Peninsula Tuesday night bombarded Scalea, some 26 miles south of Cape Palinuro where the railway runs close to the sea.

"Naval activity continues on both coasts of the Calabrian Peninsula and on the eastern shore of the Straits of Messina," the Naval communique added.

Many Bombs Hit Target

The air communique declared that "many bombs" blasted the target area at Foggia, hitting among railway yards, the electrical station and on installations and buildings.

A "large force" from the Middle East joined in the assault. "A heavy weight of bombs covered the entire yards and direct hits were scored on an overhead railway bridge, railway carriage repair shops, warehouses and military barracks near the railway," Cairo announced in supplying details.

Fires were set in locomotive repair shops and near the main railway station. Four enemy fighters were downed.

Medium bombers of the Northwest Africa Command pounded railway yards at Sapri and at Salerno south of Naples, and target areas "were well covered by bomb bursts."

"Cheer up," laughed Elsie, "Canada needs farm commandos in the worst way!"

"WELL, Canada got one of the worst when you made me give up my vacation to work on this farm," beefed Elmer, the bull.

"But pul-leeze, Elmer, I'm being very serious," asserted Elsie, the Borden Cow, "I want you to give this farm commando job all you've got. Canada can't win this war or shorten it by a single day without the Canadian farmer."

"This hard work is shortening my days!" growled Elmer.

"Nonsense!" contradicted Elsie. "That kind of exercise is good for you—and the Canadian farmer needs every bit of extra help he can get—and he needs it right now! That's why we're calling for help on everyone who has even half-a-day to spare. Every hour of useful farm labour now will count next winter."

"What are you getting out of this?" queried Elmer suspiciously.

"I'm getting a great deal," smiled Elsie honestly. "All milk producers are! The more good feed for us cows that workers like you put into that silo, the more milk every bossie in Canada will give!"

"So I'm doing this for you, am I?" snorted Elmer.

"Yes, you are—and for Canada too—we need more milk for children and for grown-ups! And there's another very important reason—"

"What's that?" asked Elmer.

"Milk and Cream to make ice cream—not only for civilians—but Canada's Armed Forces and War Workers, too. Why, Borden's supplied over 300,000 pieces of MelOrol Ice Cream last month to the Armed Forces! Now, all kiddies need milk—but some don't like drinking it—well, they can get what they need through Borden's delicious Ice Cream."

"Get me another pair of overalls—looks like more chores for old Elmer," he snorted buckling into the job. "We farm commandos will take care of those shortages! Tell all the fellows in Canada they've got to back me up with some good hard work!"

"I will, dear," said Elsie, "and if it's Borden's it's got to be good hard work!"

-if it's Borden's it's got to be good

Eclipse of Warlike Japan

Japan has witnessed the collapse and fall of Mussolini and the Fascist party. She has seen German defeats on the Russian front with German offensive not only held back but beaten back and followed by a Russian offensive which has retaken hundreds of villages.

Japan who entered the war when she thought the time propitious, is finding this summer very ominous and unpropitous — right in the Pacific. Her ship and plane losses are enormous for American losses are but a very small fraction of those of the warlike Nipponese. Two hundred and twenty-five planes downed in two days is the most recent success of the Americans in the New Guinea area at Wewak.

Japan has nothing to encourage and much to discourage her. She came into the war when it pleased herself and the result was that she found herself opposed by the might of the United States and Britain. One of her Axis associates is practically "done," namely Italy, while Germany the other is getting a beating in Russia and in the air over Europe and the Nipponese are pounded in a way that is having a disastrous effect upon her air and sea power.

The Nipponese can see China fighting as bold and courageously as ever, and if Japan could see into the future she would find the signs that China will at the close of the war be powerful and striking deadly blows at falling Japan. When Germany falls, then the Nipponese will have to face the released forces of the great United Nations.

The "rising sun" of Japan is hastening to the hour of its setting after its meteroric flight in the international sky. Before her lies the inevitability of a crushing defeat. There can be no other interpretation of the signs that are read in the news accounts of the loss of the Japanese offensive in the Pacific and of Japan's being forced into the defensive role.

May Ration Jams

Everyone knows the difficulty there has been in securing jams, marmalades and jellies. The grocery trade has done its best in voluntarily rationing these commodities for some time but the problem remains. Rarely is a jar of one of these left on a shelf for any lengthy time.

Word now comes from a spokesman of the Prices Board that rationing of these has been under consideration for some time.

Ottawa Journal the other day practically forecast rationing of canned fruit and vegetables, pointing out "there is not enough canned fruit, jams and marmalade to go around and the unofficial rule of most dealers — one tin or jar to a customer — cannot make them stretch out as they are managed now. Nor has domestic canning helped much. The special allowance of sugar, about which people were grumbling a little while ago, has been more than matched by a shortage of preserving fruit and very high prices for the small quantity which has come to the market." In another recent article on the same subject the Journal said, "there should be no difficulty in extending the rationing system to canned fruits, marmalade, probably to canned vegetables. Clearly in many of these commodities there is not sufficient to supply the demands of a free market and in fairness to all we should have a system by which every family gets its full share. Only rationing can do that. Canned fruit in particular is going to be short, possibly so short that it will be difficult to devise any workable ration scheme."

Nazis Scent Something Wrong

Germans in Poland are urged by the German Nazi newspaper published in Lodz that they should wear a special insignia because "it is often desirable to know whether one is dealing with a German," and adds that this would openly proclaim the German nationality of the wearer and would be "a gesture of courage," similar to that shown by Nazis when as the paper says "they proudly asserted their affiliation with the Nazi party at the time of their struggle for power."

Things must be going amiss in German occupied Poland. There can be read the fear of the Germans for the underground Poles who have demonstrated their courage in countless acts of sabotage against the Axis enemy. The paper stresses the need that the Germans make a big show of numbers, presumably to terrify the people, though Poles have never hesitated to strike at the Huns however strong and whenever opportunity arose. Here is what the Nazi paper says, "although this land (Poland) is openly ruled by the Germans, it is nevertheless advisable to make known that the Germans are great in number."

The behavior of the Germans in Poland has been so savage that all the badges of Nazi membership will not turn the Poles from their course of patriotic service or deter them from striking at the base intruder Huns whenever time and place agree. All the "gestures of courage" by wearing insignia of the Nazis on the part of the Germans cannot prevent the Poles smiting this enemy.

Underneath the appeal of the German Nazi newspaper in Lodz is the realization that the Germans are treading on ground that will eventually explode underneath their feet. The Germans in Poland must dread the day of consequences of the atrocities which they enacted against the population of this brave land which Hitler picked as his first victim in the opening of the Second World War.

The Nazi paper's remark would also seem to indicate that many Germans are not anxious to be singled out by their insignia for fear of the Poles else why should this paper urge them not to lose themselves in the crowd.

All is not well for the German occupation forces and officials in Poland. They must see the coming storm.

The magazine "Poland Fights" also draws attention to the fact that the German newspaper has to censure the abuse of German national insignia by those Germans who employ it for decorating objects of daily use. The Nazi paper points out that it is unbecoming for Nazis to use ash trays or cushions that are sat on which bear the picture of a swastika, or other national emblems. The Nazi sheet also has undertaken to score German shopkeepers in Lodz who use items of Nazi propaganda in their window displays in what it calls an improper manner. For instance the Nazi paper was extremely angry to see that a volume of Hitler's "Mein Kampf" was shown in the hands of a window mannequin. The Nazis are very touchy and cannot endure the scorn, laughter or mockery of the overrun peoples. Everyone has read how the Netherlands people have held the German occupation authorities up to scorn and mocked them into fury. So it is no wonder the Nazis in Poland are advised not to use ash trays on which are Nazi emblems or sit on cushions with Nazi decorations.

JUST FOLKS

THE LAWYER'S WIFE

To be a lawyer's wife is not
An altogether blissful lot,
Or so I'm told, for often she
To clients strange must friendly be.
She must for business reasons smile
On crooks and thugs and persons vile
And tell some square-jawed beetle brow,
"My husband isn't home just now!"

Some lawyers, if not one and all,
Must heed the dreaded midnight call
And hurry out to furnish bail
For clients newly locked in jail.
'Tis surely not a pleasant thing
At night to hear the doorbell ring
And know some client's in the pen
Who wants to be let out again.

Sometimes the lawyer's wife must wait
For years for fame and fortune great;
Must see his not so clever friends
Get bulky fees and dividends
While he still plods the rougher course
Of tort and trover and divorce,
And wear his coat and trousers thin
On cases there's no chance to win.

But when these days of care have passed,
There comes that happy hour at last
When he's made partner number four
And gets his name upon the door.
'Tis then the hard and tedious work
Is given to the junior clerk,
And he may lead an easier life,
And likewise may the lawyer's wife.

SAYS MEDITERRANEAN BEST ROUTE

Moscow, Aug. 20 —(AP)— The Soviet naval commentator Ivan Yermashev wrote in the newspaper Red Fleet yesterday the route across the Mediterranean "appears to be the best route to the continent" for opening a second front in Europe.

The newspaper made an implied appeal for an assault that wouuld draw 60 or more German divisions from the Russian front. Previously Russian newspapers have indicated only a smash from England directly across the Channel would meet Soviet needs.

ITALIANS FIGHT NAZI "FRIENDS"

Alexandria, La. —(CP)— Here's a new angle on the Italians as fighters: they do nicely when their opponents are Germans.

Staff Srgt. Herbert F. Wilson of Saugus, Mass., visiting here, said that at the Alexandria army air base German prisoners were separated from the Italian prisoners because "the Italians were always starting fights with them."

"It isn't that the Italians are afraid to fight," Wilson said. "They simply don't believe in fighting unless there's something griping them."

Canada Paying $8,000 Daily For Use of Chateau

By C. R. BLACKBURN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Quebec, Aug. 19—(CP)—Canada is paying about $8,000 a day to cover the expenses of between 500 and 600 people engaged in the Churchill-Roosevelt war conference at the Chateau Frontenac here.

This was revealed today by Dr. E. H. Coleman, Undersecretary of State and Chairman of the Canadian Co-ordinating Committee on conference arrangements, at a Press Conference held in the Quebec City council chamber.

He told how—working under the handicap of utmost secrecy starting the last week in July—he obtained the exclusive use of the crowded Chateau, famous tourist hotel owned by the Canadian Pacific Railway and crowded to capacity at this time of year.

He said he was authorized to tell his brother, D. C. Coleman, Chairman of the C. P. R., what the hotel was wanted for when he went to him July 30 with a request that the entire building be vacated for the conference.

"I told him that I had a great secret to tell him and he said if it was a great secret he did not want to hear it—and I did not tell him," said Dr. Coleman.

Has 624 Sleeping Rooms

The hotel, which has 1,100 beds and 624 sleeping rooms, was vacated Sunday evening Aug. 8, except for six aged and permanent guests who were permitted to remain in quarters closed off from the rest of the building and with an exit other than through the lobby.

Here are some practical details of the facilities and arrangements made to use them, as revealed by Dr. Coleman:

1. The British and American delegations range from 200 to 250 persons each. The Canadain delegation comprises 85 persons.

2. The Canadian Government is being charged between $11 and $12 a day for each person living in the Chateau, this amount covering rooms and meals. The charge is $10 a day for each of the 25 rooms converted into offices.

3. This arrangement and all others was made with B. A. Neale, C. P. R. hotel system director, and the rate was considered "reasonable."

4. Each of the three delegations has an entire Chateau floor for its exclusive use.

5. The Citadel, summer home of the Governor-General, was made available for Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt, each with a suite of about eight rooms.

6. Prime Minister Mackenzie King, conference host, is quartered in the apartment of Brig. E. Blais, District Officer Commanding Military District No. 5 (Quebec), immediately adjoining the vice-regal residence but with a separate entrance.

Washington Spotlight

(By J. S. SANDERSON)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Quebec, Aug. 20.—This reporter was in Washington last weekend, trying to keep up with Prime Minister Churchill in his flying visit to President Roosevelt, and one of the things that impressed him was the number of people commenting on the absence of Premier Stalin from the Quebec Conference.

It has served to bring Russian-American relations into sharp perspective and there is no getting around the fact they are not as healthy nor as free from friction and suspicion as they might be.

Unlike the British people who obviously are determined to co-operate with the Russians in the post-war world, the American people cannot make up their minds.

It is apparent to any observer in Washington that the American people, as a whole, have nothing but praise and admiration for the military accomplishments of the Russians. But there it seems to end.

* * *

There is a strong suspicion of Russia's political intentions in Europe, particularly in Eastern Europe. There is a persistent tendency to criticize Russia for not declaring war against Japan, or at least, not providing Siberian bases for air assaults against Tokyo.

To many people, Russia and Communism are synonymous and doubly damned.

The Russians themselves are authority for the statement Stalin was not invited to Quebec, and, in view of the nature of the conference, did not consider it necessary to be here.

Apart altogether from the reasons why Stalin is not in Quebec the fact remains that, among the American people at least, there is a growing tendency to refer to an Anglo-American military combination. For one reason or another, they exclude Russia from the inner allied circle.

So far, there has been no discernible movement in the direction of Russian imperialism in Europe, since there is nothing that Russia needs less than living room, facing a post-war domestic problem of gigantic proportions, a problem of rehabilitation and reconstruction that will require her individed attention for many years.

There is little if any evidence that Russia will want to dominate Europe by the familiar methods of territorial control for the sake of larger populations or additional resources. The 1941 boundaries would give the Soviets unhampered access to the Baltic. Some arrangement may be necessary to give Russia access to the Mediterranean, because no nation ever has been great without a direct route to the Atlantic.

It is admitted these are powerful problems— problems the American people as a whole decline to face. If the Russians are enigmatic, so are the Americans because no man can say definitely what the United States will do after the war — or where the United States will stand on any single question, any more than dogmatic terms can be used with respect to Russia.

The United Nations specifically the United States, Britain and Russia—still require to be united on the political side of the war.

QUO VADIS

It is said that "Quo Vadis" has been translated into more foreign tongues than any other book except the Bible.

This story of Christian martyrdom in the time of Nero was first published in 1895.

It was immediately popular all over the world and still is regarded as a sort of sub-classic.

The author was Henryk Sienkiewicz ("shen-KYA-vich"), who is one of the most popular Polish writers who ever lived.

He wrote the 225,000 words of "Quo Vadis" in less than a year, writing in long hand in red ink and making virtually no corrections or alterations in the manuscript.

In 1876 Sienkiewicz visited the United States—and contributed articles to a Warsaw newspaper under the pen-name "Litwos." While in America he lived with some of his countrymen in "Anno Luni," a community near Los Angeles, and seriously thought of settling in the United States permanently.

When the famous author died in 1916 at Geneva at the age of 70, "Quo Vadis" had been translated into 30 different languages and was one of the most famous books in the world.

Nero, Peter the Apostle, St. Paul, and Petronius the Arbiter of Elegance are some of the historical personages who appear in the romance.

The book got its title from a legend that when the Apostle Peter was fleeing from Rome to escape martyrdom he saw Jesus in a vision on the way. "Quo Vadis, Domine?" (Whither goest Thou, Lord?), asked the Apostle. "As thou art deserting my people, I go to Rome to be crucified again," replied the Voice. Whereupon the Apostle returned to Rome and was crucified.

Sienkiewicz ends his famous book with these words: "Near the ancient Capena Gate rises today a little chapel with an almost obliterated inscription: Quo Vadis, Domine?"

Among his own people the great novelist, who received the Nobel Prize in Literature in 1905, is better known for his trilogy dealing with Polish life and history, "Fire and Sword," "The Deluge" and "Pan Michael."

Upon the outbreak of the first World War Sienkiewicz went to Geneva and worked in the cause of Polish relief until the day of his death on Nov. 16, 1916.

Says Damaged Plane Flying Low 'Downed' By Whale Spout

Burlington, Wis., Aug. 20.—(CP)—At last it has happened—O. C. Hulett, Bos prevaricator of the Burlington Liars' Club, has a yarn he would like to enter in the 1943 lying contest but is reluctant because he thinks it might be true.

"I got the story in a letter from Flying Officer Ralph W. Ritchie, stationed in the Middle East with an R.A.F. squadron", Hulett reported. 'Ritchie says he is an American, born at Ottumwa, Ia., and is trying to transfer to the American Air Forces.

"Ritchie says his story is more true than he cares to state. If it is true, this is the first time I ever was kidded with a bona fide tale. But it could be the oddest thing that has come out of this war".

Ritchie's story:

"My plane was badly holed during a recent operational flight I had to fly low over the sea —only had one motor working. Two hours later I sighted what appeared to be an enemy submarine. I decided to shoot it up, so I went down to within five feet of the water.

"Just as I approached I noticed it was a whale and I had to laugh as my front gunner was blazing away. But I didn't laugh long.

"As I passed over the whale, he blew and the water he spouted drowned out my remaining motor and I had to land in the sea—the only pilot in this war, I think, to be shot down by whale".

GLASSLESS GREENHOUSE... SHATTERPROOF FOR SAFETY...

SERVING THE UNITED NATIONS WITH WAR ALCOHOL

Up in the nose the bomb aimer sits in a cosy little "greenhouse" all his own. Between him and the stars and empty space below is a curved, crystal-clear material that looks like glass—but isn't. Tougher by far than glass, shatterproof for safety, it is a clear transparent plastic that can be shaped and moulded to serve a thousand wartime uses. Plastics are infinite in variety, indispensable to modern war, and fabulous quantities of pure war alcohol are required to make them. Alcohol plays a vital part not only in the making of plastics, but in the manufacture of synthetic rubber, in keeping fighting planes ice-free, and in the war against infection in hospitals and on the battlefield. Every ounce we can produce is urgently needed. That is why all our plants are now on 100% war production.

DOVER'S CLIFFS SECURE SHELTER AGAINST RAIDS

Under Roof of 240 Feet of Solid Chalk, 11,000 Persons Can Sleep, Cook Meals, Get Medical Care, Safe From German Bombs

By SCOTT YOUNG
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Dover, England, Aug. 19. (CP)—The chalk caves of Dover, safest shelters in the world, are in constant readiness now to keep at least 11,000 people in safety should the Germans launch another large-scale attack on Britain as a diversion to draw allied strength from the invasion of southern Europe through Sicily.

These seven deep burrows into the cliffs made it possible to maintain Dover's as a working unit in the defence of Britain even when the almost-unopposed bombing of 1940 was at its zenith. Men and women essential to Dover's existence may live in comparative comfore there, with even a direct hit on the face of the cliffs housing the shelters powerless to drive them out.

Their roofs are 240 feet of solid chalk, a deadening, smothering substance that defies bombs and absorbs shells like a vast blotter. Some of the caves have been excavated since the war began, but some of them date back more than 100 years to days when smugglers used them to store the precious goods of their trade.

Caves Comfortable.

Hundreds of people troop into them every night. They are the regulars, people who have become used to cave-dwelling like some Londoners have been used to living in underground shelters. The homes of many have been damaged so badly that the caves are not only safer, but more comfortable.

On nights when the raids are bad, other hundreds come. It is estimated that in emergency, 11,000 people could be maintained there, fed and given medical attention, and sleeping in shifts on the tiers of bunks lining the walls along wide passages that are cool in summer and heated electrically in winter.

Vin Hoyle, a Yorkshireman, is in charge of one of the older caves, a typical one. Taking me through one hot afternoon when he was preparing for his nightly vigil, he started the tour in the emergency hospital, where cots and stretchers are ready to handle emergency cases. In storehouses in another part of the cave food is kept—enough for 300 people for four weeks. This food is changed periodically to ensure its value, and in case one or all of the four water inlets ever are knocked out, a vat of 500 gallons of water is kept. This water is changed every two weeks.

There is natural ventilation through five outlets. Floors of concrete were laid in the old caves, and wiring for heating and light. No cooking is allowed under normal conditions; but would be should it be necessary. Sanitary arrangements are adequate.

Arrange Entertainment.

The regular cave-dwellers of this one cave, about 70 to 90 of them, plan their own entertainment, running four whist-drives a week, with proceeds (about $100 so far this year) being donated to the Red Cross. Church of England services are held every night.

Families live together, in curtained-off sections, instead of having men and women segregated. There is a double row of bunks in each passage, with plenty of room between the rows for emergency sleeping accommodation, or free passage from one part of the cave to another.

The people who live regularly in the cave work closely with Hoyle. They are all friends, living in the same district close by the waterfront and in the shadow of the cliffs which protect them from danger. They are of all ages, from one baby five weeks old to three old people between the ages of 75 and 78. These three are invalids, and near one of the entrances is a wheel-chair to bring them to the shelter at night.

Red Triangle Club Dance Much Enjoyed

Fashion Flashes

ONE LINE that predominates in fall millinery is the narrowed forehead-dipping contour. This line is used for a Scotch cap of stitched woolen in green with a cuff of pheasant plumage and a sweep of pheasant tails.

SOMETHING NEW is a suit of tweed in two-tone small checks with fur touches. Silver gray and black-checked woolen is used for a suit with lapels and pocket flaps of silver fox. Collar is black velvet. Slim skirt and easy fitted jacket with bloused line above slim waist.

THERE'S NO USE denying that the favorite hat with pretty young things is the calot. Black velvet is used for a new calot trimmed in front with a cluster of colorful butterflies in satin with black velvet antennae and black velvet piping.

A MEMORABLE EVENING calls for beautiful clothes. To wear with a simple short-skirted black dinner dress, one girl has chosen a small hat of black hatter's plush with split brim and high fancies of black glycerined ostrich sprays.

LOTS OF INTEREST expressed for the new furlined cloth trench coat. Dark red woolen makes comfortable trench coat with wide revers of black Persian lamb, fur-covered buttons for the double-breasted closing half-moon fur pockets, tiny cuffs of fur and woolen tie ends to the fur trench belt.

IT'S GETTING SO that fabric gloves are as highly styled and smart as leather creations. Plum-colored velvet is used for a pretty glove made with cartridge pleats, suede palm and finger fourchettes in matching color.

MASCOT PIG GOES TO BUTCHER

San Francisco, Aug. 20 (AP)—Soul, a cheerful and companionable pig, spent most of her life aboard a transport ship in the South Pacific as crew mascot. "But the last few times we hit port," deck Steward Jack Abramson said, "many persons seemed to look on her more as red ration points on the hoof than as a pet." So Abramson gave her a last ride in the ship's elevator—her favorite recreation—and then turned her over to the butcher.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Wants to Go Away From Home

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Will you please help me plan for the future? I was graduated from high school in June, and my father and I don't agree on what I should do.

Father wants me to work for him at two dollars a day plus room and board, in his automobile repair shop where I can learn other trades in the same line. I had planned to go to another city and take a position, where I can be with my girl friend who is already there. In the fall I had intended entering a teacher's college and this plan had previously met with my father's approval. Now I don't know what to do.

(Miss) G. H.

New surrounding beckon, and there is the thrill of meeting interesting people and seeing new places. All this is easy to understand, and I hope your father will let you try it out. If he doesn't and you have to remain at home, make the best of it; learn all you can about the type of work at hand.

His Parents Objected

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 25 years old, and my soldier friend is 22. We were in love a year ago and he broke off with me for reasons I just recently found out. He has come back saying he can't forget me, and said the reason we parted was because his parents objected. I'm still in love with him, but my present problem is that my parents do not approve. I do want to continue my friendship with him, with the intention of marrying him in the future. What should I do?

A.S.

As a girl of 25 years of age, you should know your own mind, particularly as you have no intention of marrying this boy immediately. Why not see him occasionally, as your final decision is not to marry 'til the future?

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Maid-of-Honor's Duties

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. I am to be maid of honor in the near future. As the bride's only attendant, what are my duties?

2. Some of my friends tell me that it is a "must" for me, the bride's only attendant, to give a shower in honor of the prospective bride. Is this true? I'm worried about this, for my income is very small and I have many responsibilities, but I do want to do what I should.

L. R.

1. Your chief duties, as maid of honor, are to look as decorative as you possibly can; to be completely co-operative with the bride's wishes; and to be gracious and friendly when you attend any wedding festivities and, most especially, when you receive with the bride and groom in the wedding reception. And during the ceremony you hold the bride's bouquet returning it to her and adjusting her train and veil before she starts down the aisle for the recessional.

2. It is definitely not a "must" for any attendant to give a shower for the bride-to-be. However, here's a suggestion if you find that no showers are being planned for the bride-to-be, and if you'd like to be the guiding spirit in getting one up: why don't you ask several of the girl's closest friends to combine with you in giving a shower? This would apportion among the group the slight expense for, say, a simple tea — or supper menu. You could have some simple sandwiches, small cakes and hot or iced tea or fruit punch. It might be a miscellaneous shower, with each guest bringing "a thoughtful trifle."

Tips About Birth Announcements

In birth announcements sent to newspapers for publication, two errors frequently occur. For example, "Mr. and Mrs. John Williamson (nee Mary Fuller) announce the birth of a baby son on Thursday, August fifth." The word "baby" should, of course, be omitted . . . naturally the son is a baby! And Mrs. Williamson was not "nee" (born) Mary Fuller, since at the time of her birth she had no given name. The proper phrase is "nee Fuller."

Planning A Simple Silver Anniversary

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Please tell me the general plans that should be made for an informal Twenty-fifth Wedding Anniversary reception? Are written invitations necessary? Would cookies and punch be enough to serve?

O. S.

For such a significant occasion as the Twenty-fifth Wedding Anniversary, no matter how simple the party plans, some kind of invitations should be sent. "Mr. and Mrs." Informals can be used. With the invitation written on the inside pages either like a tea invitation or as a brief note. Or invitations may be written on note-paper.

An informal wedding anniversary party may be either a tea-party or an evening party. Your table-centrepiece could be a silver dish with white flowers, and perhaps you could locate some silver paper for the table-cover. If you have silver candlesticks or candelabra (or can borrow some) use these with white candles. And perhaps you have a silver punch bowl or could borrow one.

Yes, serve punch, particularly for the wedding anniversary toast. And I hope you can stretch your budget a bit to make, or to have made, a bride's cake (a white cake covered with white frosting) for the "bride" to cut. This is a charming gala touch for any wedding anniversary party!

Skin Disorders Common to Diabetics

Skin disturbances in the diabetic patient occur quite often, especially if treatment is neglected. Diabetes is a disease in which sugar is not properly used in the body, due to a lack of insulin. Insulin is secreted by the pancreas, which is located in the abdomen. Among the symptoms of diabetes are: increased appetite and thirst; and loss of weight and strength. Sugar is found in the urine, and in increased amount in the sweat and saliva.

It seems that the skin of a person with diabetes usually becomes infected with various types of germs, and yeast-like molds. Thus, it is not unusual to find that the diabetic suffers from boils.

It was thought for a long time that the cause for these many skin disturbances in diabetic patients was the increased amount of sugar in the blood and urine. However, Doctors Abraham Rudy and Richard Hoffman, of Boston, do not believe that the skin disorders are a result of the increased sugar but, rather, are due to a lack of vitamins contained in the vitamin B-complex, especially the one known as niacin. Niacin has been shown to be necessary in order to prevent pellagra, a condition in which there is a skin rash and disturbances of the nervous system. Inflammation of the skin, much like that seen in pellagra, is often found in patients with diabetes.

Doctors Rudy and Hoffman think that in those instances in which the diabetic patient shows skin disturbances, a careful study will show that they have many of the signs of vitamin deficiency, including inflammation of the lips and smoothness of the tongue.

It is found also that control of diabetes, with diet and insulin, does not get rid of the skin trouble, but, if the patient is given niacin in the proper amount, the skin trouble, as a general rule, clears up completely. In the more severe cases, it may be necessary to give the niacin by injection into a vein, as well as by mouth.

In view of the fact that there may be a deficiency of more than one of the vitamins of the B-complex, it is suggested that all of the various components, such as B-1, or thiamin, vitamin G, or riboflavin, as well as the niacin be administered.

It was also noticed that the skin disturbance tended to recur in some cases when the administration of the vitamin B-complex was stopped. Hence, it may be a good plan, in these patients, to give the vitamin B-complex continuously.

GIRLS INVADE POOL ROOM

Gananoque, Aug. 20—(CP)—Two Gananoque girls, not content to wear male-style slacks and take over machines in factories, have attempted to invade the sole remaining masculine outpost—the town's pool room. The two girls sauntered nonchalantly into the room selected cues and prepared for a game of snooker. However, the manager managed to steer the women out by raising the price to prohibitive levels.

Your Help is Badly Needed

MOTHERS . . . Wives . . . Sisters . . . Daughters . . . here is your opportunity to help on the production of Canada's food supply for next winter. The work is not hard; conditions are pleasant; you will be paid current wages for doing it.

Thousands of those who formerly worked in the canning factories are now on year-round war jobs. If the abundant tomatoes—the peaches, corn, beans, peas and other fruits and vegetables which are being gathered from farms and orchards—are not to be largely wasted, thousands of women must be found now to help can them.

You know how necessary these canned supplies will be this fall and winter. So lend a hand, even though you can spare only a few days or a few half days a week. You'll enjoy the work. And how useful the money you earn will be!

You can be of any age from 16 to 60. You don't need any experience or any special permit to undertake the work. So act now—don't delay.

DANISH PATRIOTS CONDUCT ACTIVE SABOTAGE DRIVE

Destroying Land and Sea Transport Facilities Used by Nazis

FACTORIES BOMBED

By JOHN H. COLBURN
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Stockholm, Aug. 20 —(AP)— A determined, country-wide campaign of sabotage, apparently aimed at destroying land and sea transport facilities used by the Nazis to supply their forces in Norway, was reported by travellers arriving here from Denmark today.

Danish patriots, the travellers said, are systematically wrecking Danish factories producing German war materials as well as railroads and harbor installations which have become increasingly important to the Germans since they can no longer ship men and supplies across Sweden to Norway.

At the same time representatives of the five major Danish political parties were called into extraordinary session in Copenhagen, apparently to consider changes in the government's policy toward Nazi occupation of Denmark.

Possibility of a switch in government leaders was seen as a result of the conclave, but any decisions reached are not expected to be announced until after King Christian meets with German Minister Werner Best tomorrow, when it is believed, Denmark's position in the light of recent developments will be reviewed.

The King was said to have seen Best last on Aug. 14, after Premier Eric Scavenius and other ministers had threatened to resign following Best's ultimatum that German occupational authorities would take over punishment of Danish saboteurs.

Meanwhile disorders were reported mounting, travellers bringing word of clashes between patriots and German soldiers in Odense. They said that a railroad line transporting German war supplies for shipment to Norway had been dynamited at several places between Flensburg, Germany and Aarhus, Denmark.

Reports reaching Malmo said that 15 German soldiers were killed in riots which forced the authorities to clamp down an 8 p.m. curfew on most of the Funen Island district. Danish soldiers have been stationed in that area.

Railway sabotage has become so intensive, reports stated, that the crew of one train carrying German soldiers was forced to change locomotives five times as the result of damage from exploding bombs placed between the rails.

Spreading strikes, minor violence, increased sabotage and underground activity during the past week has spurred the Germans to demand that those guilty be punished under Nazi law in German courts, these reports said. It is these demands, coupled with rising political unrest, that may result in a government upset.

RUSSIAN PRESS

odically cleared one village after the other and threw the Nazis back to a new line, the Russians said.

The German Air Force, meanwhile, was reported striking repeatedly but unsuccessfully at the Soviet Communication lines. From dawn to dusk, the Russians said, German bombers accompanied by fighters made thrust after thrust only to be repelled by Soviet airmen.

Russians Stormoviks retaliated with a continuous bombardment of the German positions at Bryansk and further west.

2,400 Germans Wiped Out

At Kharkov, some 2,400 Germans were wiped out and 30 villages captured as the Red Army smashed forward on the west, northwest and southeast sides of the city, a Soviet communique said.

One escape route—to the southwest along the line of the Krasnodar railway—remained open to the defence garrison, but a Pravda dispatch said the German High Command had ordered a fight to the death within the city.

The communique, recorded in London by the Soviet Radio Monitor, reported yesterday's heaviest fighting centred northwest of the city. Russian detachments there, the bulletin said, overwhelmed several enemy counter-attacks and successfully advanced, killing 1,500 Germans, knocking out 30 enemy tanks, and capturing large quantities of war material.

The War Today— Abandonment of Berlin Would Denote German Desperation

By DEWITT MacKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst)

One of the most interesting pieces of news to come out of Germany since the war began—and it's one of the most important, if true—is the report the whole Nazi government has abandoned Berlin.

While unconfirmed, it does come on the heels of the evacuation of 1,000,000 residents of the threatened capital. Maybe Hitler's intuition has enabled him to read the Allied program which has been set forth at Quebec by Information Minister Brenden Bracken thus pointedly:-

"These plans are to bomb and burn and ruthlessly destroy, in every way available to us, the people responsible for creating this war."

One could wish, by the way, that the Fuehrer might have heard Bracken deliver that edict. I wasn't present, but I know the minister as one of Britain's most colorful personalities. He's a big chap who pours out conviction in a torrent of forceful words, while his victim is held fascinated by the brilliant red hair which flares up from Bracken's head like the flames from a blast furnace. Yes, it's a pity Hitler wasn't there.

For any normal government — which of course the Nazi regime is not—desertion of the national capital is like abandonment of ship at sea. It's an act that denotes desperation.

Allied Leaders Stayed in Capitals

During the height of the terrible aerial blitz which London endured in 1940-41, when the British ship of state was wallowing in mountainous seas, the square-jawed Churchill and his cabinet stuck to the bridge.

Back in 1941 when Hitler's victorious armies were surging towards Moscow, the Soviet authorities moved the diplomatic corps to Kuibyshev. But Stalin and the other members of the Red government coolly carried on at the old stand.

Abandonment of the German capital would mean (1) that Berlin is in peril of destruction, and (2) that the Prussian militarists are exhibiting one of their outstanding characteristics — a disinclination to risk their necks unless it's absolutely necessary.

Britons Enjoy Churchillism

"Will you offer peace terms to Germany?"

"Heavens, no!" he was quoted as replying. "If I did, the Germans would accept immediately."

BOMB, BURN

"to bomb, burn, and ruthlessly destroy, in every way available to us, the people responsible for this war", Brendan Bracken, British Minister of Information, said at a press conference yesterday.

Disclosed on Battlefield

The plans, now being drafted in the inner recesses of the Chateau Frontenac and the Citadel, will be disclosed to the enemy only on the battlefield.

"The time will come", Mr. Bracken said, "when Hitler, Tojo and their tribes of gangsters will get the news of what is being done in Quebec—but they will get it from admirals, generals and air marshals and their fighting forces".

One thing the minister made abundantly clear: "When we have rounded up Hitler, the whole might of the British Empire will be given over to beating the Japanese who are a ruthless and savage people".

Mr. Bracken met the press 24 hours after his arrival from Britain with Anthony Eden, British Foreign Secretary. He was vague on the reason for his flying journey to Quebec, but, on the subject of the war as a whole, he was voluble but restrained.

"It is going well," he said, "but it will be long indeed and hard".

9. A drafting of war and peace aims more specific than the terms of the Atlantic charter signed by President Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill at their first war conference two years ago.

Excitement Caused by Losing Streaks Only Proportionate To Club Performing Feat

A's Have Lost 13 Straight Games and 19 Out of Last 22 Contests

YANKEES WIN

(By JUDSON BAILEY)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Losing streaks cause excitement, apparently, in proportion to who is doing the losing.

When Brooklyn Dodgers dropped 10 in a row recently the frantic Flatbush fans wanted to run Branch Rickey into the Gowanus Canal and when Philadelphia Phillies tossed off 17 out of 27 Stanley Raymond (Bucky) Harris, a manager of proven ability, was fired.

But Philadelphia Athletics now have lost 13 consecutive games and 19 of their last 22 and all the attention they are getting is a broad yawn.

One reason for this, of course, is that losing streaks for the Athletics are common.

Mostly, however, the calm reaction is in deference to Connie Mack, the grand old man of baseball. Every other major league team is considered the community property of the fans but the A's belong to Mr. Mack.

The A's latest loss was another shutout 4-0 on four-hit pitching by Dennis Galehouse of St. Louis Browns last night.

At the top of the American League New York Yankees squeezed back into the victory column with 2-1, 13-inning decision over Cleveland Indians in a night game.

Rookie Allie Reynolds held the Yanks to six hits in going the route, but was beaten when Joe Gordon doubled and eventually scored on a fly.

The defeat dropped Cleveland back into a tie for third place as Washington whipped Chicago White Sox 4-3. Dutch Leonard pitched four-hit ball and singled home the deciding run himself.

Detroit divided a doubleheader with Boston Red Sox, losing the first 4-3 through oJe Cronin's two-run punch double and winning the second 10-0 on Virgil Trucks' four hit hurling and the hitting of Rudy York, who collected his 24th homer and altogether batted in six runs.

In the National League St. Louis Cardinals were upset by Philadelphia Phillies 6-5 in a night game.

Two home runs by Jim Russell and one by Vince Dimaggio, his 14th, accounted for seven runs as Pittsburgh Pirates plastered New York Giants 8-1.

Curt Davis held Chicago Cubs to eight hits and scoreless after Bill Nicholson hit a two-run homer in the first inning to give Brooklyn a 9-2 triumph over Chicago.

Cincinnati clustered three runs in the sixth to beat Boston Braves 7-5.

New York, Aug. 20 — (AP) — Latest tip is it'll be a one-trip World Series this fall. . . First three games in Yankee Stadium, next four (or less) in St. Loo. . . Ol' Jedge Landis is giving all questioners the mummy-dummy routine, however. . . Fritzie Zivic, who took the welterweight title from Henry Armstrong, will also take Hennery's tip and retire at the end of the year.

What's Stewin, Bruin

The word is that Bill Helis, the New Orleans oil and hoss hot-shot, is tossing $350,000 into a syndicate to buy Suffolk Downs racetrack. . . If the army doesn't have the premises, and the war's still on, don't be surprised if some big league club does its training next spring in Atlantic City's audutorum —which is so big they've played college football games there.

Guest Star:

Cy Kritzer, Buffalo (N.Y.) Evening News: The jovial Mr. James Aloysius (Wish) Egan, who scouts exclusively for the Detroit Tigers, was asked, "Why are so many normally good ball players hitting far below their usual averages and why is there such a scarcity of .300 hitters?" . . . Egan thought the answer is on the front page instead of the sports pages: "For one thing with all this labor trouble, strikes and walkouts, there is a different atmosphere in the dressing room of a ball club. There's a shortage of labor and a shortage of ball players. Players know today you can't replace them. They know there is no youngster down on the farm to come up. They have no competition to keep them on their toes."

Pawntucket, R.I.—(AP)—For the second time in two days, officials of Narragansett Park race track had a strike on their hands when track workers quit work in a demand for better pay. The usual scraping between races was not done during the card. On the previous day, the stable boys who bring out the horses held up the first race for half an hour but finally got busy.

Vancouver, Aug. 20 —(CP)— Kenny Lindsay of the Royal Canadian Air Force scored a fourth-round technical knockout over Charley Bagnato of the Army here last night in a bout billed as for the featherweight boxing championship of Canada's armed forces and scheduled for 10 rounds. About 5,000 fans attended. Lindsay weighed 125, Bagnato 124.

Jim Hopper Chalks Up 6th Victory of Year Against Newark

ROYALS BEATEN

(By The Associated Press)

Ed. Klieman, Baltimore Oriole pitcher, won his 21st game of the season in the International League by beating Rochester, 5-4, last night. It was his second straight victory since Cleveland Indians announced they would claim him under a working agreement with the Orioles.

Klieman's six-hit performance gave the Orioles a sweep of a doubleheader since Paul Calvert blanked the Red Wings, 4-0, in the opener.

The first-place Toronto Maple Leafs turned back the second-place Newark Bears, 2-0, on the neat five-hit twirling of Jim Hopper. Harry Davis drove in both runs with a fourth-inning single.

Aided by six Montreal errors, Syracuse beat the Royals, 5-2, to tie for third place. Syracuse scored four unearned runs.

The last-place Jersey City Giants walloped Buffalo, 11-2, in a weird game marked by six Bison misplays and 17 Jersey City hits.

Former Ball Player, Amateur Golfer Wins Best-Ball Game

(By The Canadian Press)

As a preliminary to the Victory National 72-hole tournament opening today over the Beverly Hills course at Chicago, top-ranking pros and amateurs combined in pairs for a best-ball tilt yesterday and the winners were Sam Byrd of Philadelphia and amateur Bob Cochran of St. Louis —who turned 36 holes in 131, or 11 under par.

Byrd, who once played the outfield for the New York Yankees, and Cochran, runner-up in the recent Tam O'Shanter All-America Joust, had 10 birdies, one eagle and one bogey in the double-round. Byrd chipped a 45-foot shot into the seventh hole for the only two-under-par hole of the day. Jug McSpaden of Philadelphia, Tam O'Shanter champion, and Sgt. James McHale, stationed at Baltimore, came through with an aggregate of 132 for runners-up honors. Mike Turnesa of White Plains and Jim Frisini of Taylorville, Ill., were third with 133.

Toronto, Aug. 19 —(CP)— The Buffalo Hockey Club of Calgary won the Western Canada Intermediate puck title last winter and now has designs on bigger fields. The Buffaloes have embarked on a five-year plan of building that should be a lulu. Buffaloes will sponsor a six-club Pee Wee Hockey League for five years with Davy Duchak, Sam Timmins, Gordon McFarlane, Jack Arbour, Joe McGoldrick and other club members coaching.

When the plan is fully organized it will enbrace a membership of at least 300 boys from 12 to 14 years of age. Each player will be provided with complete hockey equipment except skates which he must provide himself. Each will have a brand new uniform.

If this land of plenty were as easy for a boy to attain as it sounds it might have bad effects; but the Buffaloes aim to build solid citizens as well as high-class hockey players. To be eligible a boy must attain high standards in school and be approved by an executive committee.

If the Buffaloes follow through—sponsor the boys through organized hockey at least into Junior Leagues at age 18, there's a good chance Calgary will become a power in amateur hockey. Calgary has won the National Junior title just once—in 1926—and the Canadian Senior Championship has never gone to Alberta.

Keen interest in midget and juvenile hockey leagues is the surest way to develop championship junior teams. By the time the youngsters reach junior age, they've had the benefit of good coaching and keen competition for so long that they're already polished performers.

The midget and juvenile leagues are the major reason for Manitoba's dominance of the junior hockey picture. Manitoba teams have won the Memorial Cup three years in a row now and six times in the last nine years. Some of the greatest stars of Manitoba rinks have been lured elsewhere by attractive offers, have helped to pack teams in other cities. But latterly, at least, the flood of Manitoba puck material has been so great a winning club was always forthcoming.

Calgary's Buffaloes deserve success if they carry through with their five-year plan. Whether they eventually win a major championship or not, they'll be performing a service to the country in giving youngsters proper guidance in organized sport.

Toronto, Aug. 20 (CP)—Favorite pastime of Baz (Montreal Star) O'Meara since the death of Frank Calder last winter has been guessing who will fall heir to the National Hockey League presidency. Baz latest guess is J. P. Ebbs, the Ottawa lawyer named as liaison man between the N.H.L. and National Selective on the question of cutting professional hockey in on the nation's manpower. Ebbs, comments O'Meara, may be "the man who will be the one to eventually wear the mantle of Frank Calder."

Of course, Red Dutton is in the driver's seat at present, acting as managing director of the N.H.L., but Dutton doesn't want the job permanently. O'Meara quotes Dutton as saying: "This is a job for a lawyer, one who can unravel a lot of knotty problems, who has a legal approach." Ebbs fills the bill on that count and he has an athletic background. Years ago he was a replacement with the famous Ottawa Silver Seven, one of the greatest hockey teams of all time. Ebbs also has a football background. He was President of Ottawa Rough Riders in some of their palmiest days.

Grid Gossip:

Jimmy Simpson, one of Canada's greatest outside wings as a member of Hamilton Tigers, is trying a football comeback after four years of inactivity. Simpson fractured a jaw four years ago and retired from the gridiron on advice of his physician. Now he figures his recovery is complete and that he can risk a return....Toronto R.C.A.F. Hurricanes, Canadian champions, have only six members of the 1942 team remaining—backfielders Fred Kijek, Jack Alexander and Art West, outside wing Jack Buckmaster and linemen Paul McGarry and Mike Ozarko. They have a good replacement for snapback Jack Gaudaur in Bob Cosgrave, the former Calgary and Toronto Balmy Beach star....Bill Stukus, star quarterback, is on the east coast. Al Lenard, Hamilton halfback who led the O.R.F.U. in scoring last year, is headed eastward for a navy officer's course.

Round and About:

Montreal's hopes of matching the Canadian lightweight champion, LAC. Dave Castilloux, with Cleo Shans of New York have collapsed ....Edith Skitch, 15-year-old Edmonton girl only four feet 11 inches tall, stood a Vancouver track meet on its beam ends by tying the B.C. women's record for 75 yards at nine seconds flat and missing the senior high jump mark by only 3-4 inch with a leap of four feet eight inches.

'DING' LUFFMAN GIVES RELIANCE EDGE OVER FLIERS

Former Point Anne Hurler Stops I.T.S. With 6 Hits for 9-2 Win

TWO HOME RUNS

Behind "Ding" Luffman's masterful six-hit pitching Reliance made it three games to two over the No. 5 I.T.S. "Flyers" in the best-in-seven series for the Belleville Softball League championship by downing FO. Warren's Airmen 9 to 2 at the Exhibition Park last evening.

Although the Flyers opened the scoring with a single counter in the initial frame, Luffman was really never in difficulty and blanked the Airmen for seven consecutive frames before they scored an unearned eighth-inning run. In the meantime Gene LaBonne's three-run homer in the fifth and Jimmie Barriage's two-run circuit blow in the eighth were enough for Reliance and Luffman to coast in ease.

"Moon" Mullins' second inning double was the only extra base hit collected off Luffman, as the Airmen failed to count more than one hit at a time as the former Point Anne moundsman pitched steady ball and was always on top. The Flyers scored their first runs as the result of a walk, McKay's sacrifice and Gignac's single. The other counter was unearned, two walks, an error and a fielder's choice, letting Daniels score. Incidentally Daniels scored both the Airmen's runs. Mullins and Gignac got two hits each for the vanquished Flyers.

Helped Own Cause

Luffman helped his own cause with a two-run producing single and scored the Reliance first run in the third to knot the count. Singles by LaBonne, Loft, Luffman and Henn gave Reliance three runs in the fourth and they coasted in even though LaBonne hit for the circuit with two aboard in the fifth. Not to be out-done, Jim Barriage slashed a hard drive to deep right centre with Henn aboard in the eighth for a homer, bringing the winners' count to nine.

Jim Barriage was the big hitter of the night with his circuit smash and two singles. LaBonne and Ethier each got two hits, one of Gene's being a four-master. Reliance fielded strongly behind Luffman's six-hit pitching. Cy Barriage at short, Jim Barriage in left and Phil Loft in right all coming through with some sensational fielding efforts when circus catches halted the Flyers in any attempt to rally. Bancroft shone defensively for the losers.

Steve Borovitch, the Flyers' Yankee pitcher from Detroit, proved no mystery to Spike Pryke's nine last night and was derricked in favor of Bancroft soon after LaBonne's homer in the fifth. Bill Bancroft took over the pitching chores and halted Reliance for two frames before Barriage duplicated LaBonne's willow-wielding effort. Bancroft struck out the side in the seventh, however.

Luffman Comes Through.

"Ding" Luffman, who pitched Point Anne to a provincial softball title back in 1938 showed last night he has lost none of his mound craftiness. Luffman was in rare form to let the hard-hitting No. 5 I.T.S. Flyers down with six hits, well scattered as Reliance took the odd game in five. After losing the first two games in the city series, "Spike" Pryke's Reliance nine has bounced back in a most convincing manner to win three straight and need but one more win to cinch the city softball crown. While Luffman was doing a masterful chore on the Reliance mound, his team mates were fielding in championship manner behind him while LaBonne and Jim Barriage hit circuit blows that were enough in themselves to win. Spike Pryke's crowd had their batting togs on and knocked Steve Borovitch off the Flyers' hilltop in the fifth, Bill Bancroft finishing and being the victim of Barriage's four-master So strong was Reliance on the attack they had men aboard in every inning, except the second. Incidentally Johnnie Bawden is out of the series as the result of a strained shoulder, sustained during Tuesday night's game.

Unfortunate Accident.

When Lela Nelson, hard-hitting third sacker for Tommy Colden's SWACO lassies, fell at first base during Wednesday night's game at the Armouries she had the misfortune to not only rupture the ligaments of her knee, but also fractured a small leg bone. With Mrs. Nelson out of the SWACO line-up it will be a serious blow to Colden's championship aspirations, as Lela has been one of the Easterners' leading batters throughout the season. Bell-Sargent lost the services of Marilyn Donovan, their short stop, Monday night when she fell attempting to run out a hit also. "Pudgy" will likely view the remainder of the series from the bench, although her injury was not as serious as Mrs. Nelson's. Tonight Bell-Sargent and Bristol will tangle in a league saw-off tussle at the Armouries.

That Man Dykes.

Chicago Arch Ward, the creator of baseball's annual All-star game, reports that Jimmy Dykes, manager of the White Sox, refused to become upset upon receipt of a printed placard a fan sent him. It read: "O, Lord, help me keep my big mouth shut until I know what I'm talking about." The ebullient Jimmy proudly pasted it on his locker. But he still disregards it.

Dykes rarely is at a loss for words, but Bill Guthrie, the rugged individualist who served for many years as an American League umpire, once stopped him cold. Dykes was at bat and he protested a called strike with his usual vehemence.

"Shut up," ordered the gruff arbiter, "and then no one except you and me and the catcher will know that you can't see."

Busman's Holiday.

The St. Louis Browns established a major baseball league record when they they went through the second game of a doubleheader at Cleveland recently without being credited with making a single assist and gained a share of another new standard with the Indians for fewest assists by two clubs in a nine-inning game—seven, one less than the old mark.

Only five balls were hit on the ground by the Indians and, strangely enough, all five were smashed at First Baseman George McQuinn, who made the putouts unassisted. Eight of the outs were flies to the outfield, and seven represented strikeouts. Four of the players who saw service in the game, won by Cleveland, 5 to 2, did not have a fielding chance. They were Second Baseman Don Gutteridge, Third Baseman Harlond Clift and Pitchers Buck Newsom and Nelson Potter.

The previous record for fewest assists in one game was one, set originally by the White Sox in 1917 and tied by the Red Sox in 1924 and 1938, Cubs, 1932; Yankees, 1934 and 1939, and Reds, 1938. The former mark for fewest assists by opposing teams was eight, shared by a number of clubs.

LESSON NO. 153

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

You take the worst of it when you do not follow T-A-N. And you give your partner the worst of it, too. T-A-N means takeout, assist, no-trump; the order of choice of bids.

Before a responder bids, he is assumed to hold two tricks. Each raise shows another trick. Combine that with T-A-N and you can tell all before the final bid is reached.

♠9 5 2
♥K 7 6 3
♦8 5
♣A Q 7 4

Your partner starts with an opening bid of one club. Following T-A-N, you have no takeout suit. But you have support for clubs. So you assist to two clubs.

Suppose partner then bids two diamonds or two spades. With no takeout or assist in another suit, you assist again in clubs. Your bid here is three clubs.

When partner opens with one club and you assist to two clubs, suppose partner then bids two hearts. You now have an assist for a new suit. Assist to three hearts.

Your first raise in clubs showed three tricks. Your second raise in either clubs or hearts showed your fourth trick. But what has your partner shown you by his first two bids?

With equal length suits, bid the higher rank first. With different length suits, bid the longer first. That tells you that your partner has at least five clubs and four hearts.

You thus learn that you and partner have four hearts apiece. But he has five clubs to your four. Before the bidding ends, you should insist on hearts becoming the final trump suit for your side.

Why? Because the best trump suit for a pair to play at is the one most evenly divided in their two hands. Even if the unevenly split suit is longer. Before long I will give you the reasons.

That makes two hands with but a single thought. Two pards that bid as one.

"Gentleman Jim"

Translated into ring jargon, "Gentleman Jim" is a knockout.

Packing all the excitement of the 1880's and and the color of the Gay Nineties, the current Warner Bros. picture at the Capitol Theatre is an action account of the life of James J. Corbett who somehow typifies the period in which he became heavyweight champion of the world. Especially worthy of mention is the thrilling climax of the picture in which Corbett wins the crown from John L. Sullivan in the New Orleans bout which has become a classic in the annals of sports history.

"Ghost Rider"

"The Ghost Rider," first of a new Monogram western series, opened at the Capitol Theatre last night, and gave every evidence that the new pictures will occupy an important position in the field of outdoor drama.

Johnny Mack Brown is starred and Raymond Hatton plays the featured role, and both are excellent in their parts. The talents of these fine actors have long been recognized by theatre-goers, and they add a convincing quality to the picture which has much to do with its worth as outstanding entertainment.

A color cartoon and Zane Grey's "King of the Mounties" rounds out a very entertaining program.

AT THE BELLE

Love in Africa against the titanic struggle between the Allies and Rommell's Afrika Korps is portrayed in Paramount's "Five Graves to Cairo," by Franchot Tone and Anne Baxter. The two are co-starred in the thrilling adventure romance which comes this weekend to the Belle Theatre with Akim Tamiroff, and Erich Von Stroheim as Field Marshal Rommell.

AT THE CAPITOL

Fashioned in the heroic mold of the westerns that starred Tom Mix and William S. Hart, "Ghost Rider" starring Johnny Mack Brown is now at the Capitol with the added knockout hit "Gentleman Jim", starring Errol Flynn.

AT THE McCARTHY

Studded with beautiful showgirls and riotous comedy, Hal Roach's new streamliner, "Taxi, Mister," co-starring William Bendix and Grace Bradley, now playing at the McCarthy Theatre, along with George Sanders in "Appointment in Berlin."

AT THE McCARTHY

"Appointment in Berlin"

"Appointment in Berlin," the Columbia spy thriller which is now playing at the McCarthy Theatre, is said to be one of the greatest conspiracies of modern times. George Sanders and Marguerite Chapman are starred and the fine supporting cast includes Onslow Stevens, Gale Sondergaard, Alan Napier and Alec Craig.

An added hit is the second feature, "Taxi, Mister," which oldtimers and the youngest of screen fans will enjoy. There's a glimpse of a real-oldfashioned, honest-to-goodness burlesque show, headed by the lustrous Grace Bradley that will wow the elders and thrill the youngsters, too. Bill Bendix and Joe Sawyer, as the two ambitious young taxi drivers, get in and out of trouble in most amazing and ludicrous fashion. Be sure and see this one if you like your screen fare hot, fast and funny.

The latest thing in news, British-Canadian newsreel is also shown.

AT THE BELLE

"The Moon Is Down"

John Steinbeck's "The Moon Is Down" selected by critics as "The Book of The Year" is now closing at the Belle Theatre. With a hand-picked cast 20th Century-Fox has brought to the screen a human and touching picture that will live in the hearts of all freedom loving Canadians.

An excellent Junior feature program will also be exhibited.

"Five Graves to Cairo" Thrilling

The war has yielded many thrilling stories for books, stage and screen so far, and there will be many more to come, but one of the most intriguing ideas yet filmed seems to be that contained in Paramount's new adventure movie, "Five Graves to Cairo," which comes to the Belle Theatre this weekend.

The title itself is one to pique the curiosity and from all accounts the story lives up to the interest it creates, having as it does for background the titanic struggle in Africa between the British Eighth Army and Rommel's Afrika Korps. The "Five Graves to Cairo" is Rommel's secret—a secret stumbled upon in the picture by a British tank corporal in the person of personable Franchot Tone.

As the story unfolds, Tone, delirious from sunstroke, stumbles into what he believes to be a British-controlled hotel only to find that it is about to become staff headquarters for Field Marshal Rommel. He disguises himself as a waiter, with the help of Akim Tamiroff, Egyptian hotel owner, and a little French chambermaid, played by Anne Baxter. When Rommel moves into the hotel with his staff, Tone is amazed to be accepted as one of the Nazis, a trusted advance fifth-columnist.

How Tone acquires the secret of the "Five Graves to Cairo" and manages to deliver it to the British authorities provides plenty of excitement and gives "Five Graves to Cairo" the reputation for being one of the best of the recent war-background adventure films. It marks the return of Erich von Stroheim to Hollywood in a role that is probably the best he ever had—that of Field Marshal Erwin Rommel.

The screen story was written by Charles Brackett and Billy Wilder who have such film hits to their credit as "The Major and the Minor," "Arise, My Love," "Hold Back the Dawn" and "Ninotchka," among many others.

Three Favorite Shorts

Your favorite shorts have been assembled for exhibition on the same program including the Canadian Paramount News of the World, the latest hit of the popular Madcap Models color novelties "Jasper's Music Lesson" and a refreshing and entertaining screen miniature "Moments of Charm". On Saturday matinee the 2nd chapter of "The Adventures of Smilin' Jack" will be exhibited. Continuous shows will be exhibited on Saturday.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

(By ALAN RANDAL)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

With the R.C.A.F. Somewhere in England, (CP)—Once you get into heavy flak there can be no turning back. It's a matter of going on and weaving about as much as possible but Warrant Officer R. J. Walters of Edmonton didn't intend to do quite so much weaving as he did.

Flying a Stirling, Walters was making a run-up to lay mines and came out of a bank of haze right over an escort vessel in a large enemy convoy. "I saw five or six warships on each side of me", he said.

It became a question of going back and becoming a sitting target in the course of the manoeuvre or weaving violently through while the warships threw up flak. Walters chose the latter and the flak was so intense it turned the Stirling upside down but it got through all right.

"I didn't realize how far over we had gone until I looked up—only it was looking down—and saw the sea above my head", said Walters. "When we got back into control I saw that we had cut through the convoy so we laid our mines in what we hoped would be its path".

Flt. Lt. Ronnie Oldham, 29-year-old R.A.F. navigator from 2590 Point Grey Road, Vancouver, was the only non-Frenchman in the Fighting French Lorraine Squadron when it took off on its first bombing sortie from Britain. The attack was on the Fokker factory at Amsterdam and Oldham said he saw the bombs from their Bostons go down into the target area.

Oldham, squadron leader who flies with the squadron commander, used to teach mathematics in a private school in West Vancouver.

An addition to the R.C.A.F. roster of British wives is pretty Jean Doris Lytton of Ruislip in Middlesex who married P.O. Norman N. McDermid, Toronto-born staff officer at R.C.A.F. overseas headquarters in London. The bride works in a war factory and met McDermid at dance about a year ago.

Listen to this from Wing Cmdr. Guy Gibson, the man with the V.C., D.S.O. and Bar and D.F.C. and bar, who led the dam busting raid on the Ruhr: "Bombing raids to us are not frightening things at all. They are just our job, a job being done every night by young men from all kinds of peace-time jobs who have learned to pilot a bomber.

P.O. Bill Gaudet of Montague, P.E.I., 22-year-old airgunner has added to his souvenirs the Iron Cross of the Third Reich. He picked it up at Bardia from a German prisoner, trading a pack of cigarets for it.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

JAMES W. BARTON, M.D.

Tuberculosis can be wiped out.

It is said that what we don't know should not hurt us; or where ignorance is bliss it is folly to be wise. Fortunately most of us do not believe this, because the more we know, the more careful we will be and so not allow our ignorance to cause suffering or death to ourselves or others.

It is not generally known that in the United States, Canada, in fact practically all countries, the germs or organisms that cause tuberculosis are present in one half of the entire population.

Now as these germs cause tuberculosis, why is this entire half of the population not suffering with tuberculosis?

Tuberculosis is held to but a small percent of the population because Nature is able to hold these germs in check. This holding of the germs of tuberculosis in check has only been possible during the past forty years. Before that time tuberculosis killed off a large portion of the population, standing high in the list of causes of death. However, this war, as with previous wars, has increased the number of cases of tuberculosis, which "is still the greatest killer among the communicable diseases."

When an individual becomes infected with tuberculosis, it means that "the germs have made a home in a living body".

After a body has become infected one to four things happens:

1.—The powers of the body resistance kill the invading organisms. Then all is well.

2.—The body and the germs manage to live together side by side, each unable to hurt the other.

3.—Quite often however the balance between the body and the germs becomes disturbed in favor of the germs, either by inside or outside forces. Then, tuberculosis disease develops.

4.—When the body's defences get the best of the germs and balance is established again, the disease is said to be arrested. When the body kills the germs, tuberculosis has been cured completely.

I believe this knowledge as given us by the National Tuberculosis Association will not only encourage us as we see how Nature fight for us, but will make us willing, should it be necessary, to enter a sanatorium to learn how to aid nature in her fight for us.

Their final message is "Tuberculosis can not only be brought under control but can be wiped out. Our present knowledge is sufficient to assure victory over the white plague".

CHAPTER 8

Peg and Emilie had the coffee ready when I left the telephone. I felt a little better.

"Well, I'm glad you found out about Jan's going," I said to Emilie, after my first cup of good, scalding black coffee. "If it hadn't been for you and your music lessons I'd still be worrying about Jan. Utz was spreading the good news that he was the guilty party, not that anyone believed it, of course."

Emilie looked rather queer. She swallowed and then she said, "Look! What would you say, what would Utz and the rest of the tenants and the police say if they knew I had the key to Jan's studio? He gave it to me so that I could go down and practice if I felt like it, while he was away. Of course I didn't go, but—" She looked appealingly from Peg to me.

"I thought I might get in a few minutes' practice today. Last night I was so miserable I never even thought of it. I lay down for a while about eight o'clock and then about nine or ten I took two sleeping tablets and went to bed. I didn't even wake up until you banged on the door this morning, Mary. But if Jan happens to say that he gave me the key—"

"Jan? He'd never tell that. He's got too much sense," Peg said stoutly. "But if I were you, Emilie, I'd get rid of it in a hurry."

Emilie looked at me. "What do you think?"

I shook my head. "I don't know." I said and I didn't. Once you get mixed up in something like this, you begin to hold things back. You get so that you don't dare trust justice. There's always someone like Utz, to believe the worst and there's always an Inspector Hare to make you feel foolish when you really try to be helpful, and guilty when you make an innocent statement. The chances were that they'd find the murderer without seriously suspecting any of us, or making any intensive search of our rooms. Still . . .

"Ged rid of it," Peg was saying. "Ged rid of it right now."

Emilie was still looking at me.

Peg jumped up and took Emilie by the arm. "Come on," she said, "where is it?"

"On my dresser, I think. Or the table—around the room somewhere. But do you really think . . . Mary, do you?"

Before I could make up my mind Peg was out of the door and running downstairs with Emilie following more slowly.

Peg was back in a couple of minutes. "Well, that's that. I'm not going to have that poor, sick kid hauled all over the coals by a lot of bungling dicks. I dropped it down the drain in that hopper thing in the wash-room. It's down the sewer by now."

Peg was pretty pleased with herself. "Now we don't have to worry about Emilie, that's out," she said. "But if you weren't downstairs last night, Mary, and of course you weren't if Jan was in Hollywood, where were you?"

"Why, I told you I went to a movie. I reviewed it for the paper."

"No, you didn't tell me."

"I told you I was working. I took George Evans and his wife to the movie with me. Alline will be tickled to death if they drag her into it to help make an alibi for me. She's always said that in the eight years she's been married to George nothing exciting has ever happened to her."

"I wish I had an alibi," Peg said.

"Don't be silly. People don't need alibis. If they ask you where you were, just tell them the truth. You were right here working on that fussy dressing table for Mrs. Joslyn weren't you?"

"Yes, but I—I didn't see anyone. Who'd believe it? Besides I thought I heard you and Jan talking, so I—"

"Peg," I said, "Peg. I wasn't THERE. Oh, Peg. YOU weren't down in Jan's studio last night! Peg, you weren't that crazy! And it was locked, you couldn't have been there."

"No, it wasn't locked. Jan might have meant to lock it but you know how he is, he didn't. It was open, and I went in and—"

"Peg, WHY? Why did you have to go and—"

"Why SHOULDN'T I?" she flared back at me. "You don't OWN Jan, do you? Well you act that way sometimes. You never go up or down those stairs that you don't poke your head in to see if Jan's there, at all hours. But if I, if I even so much as—"

She was right. Why shouldn't she have gone down to Jan's studio? How did she know that there would be a murder there? And didn't I do the same thing myself, or almost? I didn't try the door, but I did walk down the corridor and listen.

"Oh, Peggy," I said, "what time did you go in?"

"I don't know what time it was. I haven't the least idea. I was working and I got feeling sorry for myself, slaving all alone, so I thought I'd see what was doing. I thought I heard your voice—"

"You certainly didn't."

"Well, then it was someone else talking in the hall, so I thought you were down there and I—of course I left fingerprints on the doorknob! Oh Mary, of course I did. It will positively show my fingerprints!"

"It will show at least 59 other people's too—including mine," I said. Just the same I didn't like the idea. "Well, there wasn't anyone there when you went in, was there?"

"No, not a soul—at least I don't suppose there was. It was dark. Oh Mary—if it had happened already and he—he—"

"Oh no. It was probably much later. At least I should think so. Unless it was late when you—"

"I don't know what time it was, honestly. Maybe eight. It might have been as late as nine. I went to bed about ten or a little after, and I was upstairs a while before I got tired of that hateful dressing table and just got mad and went to bed. Do you know what time it happened? The coroner would know—"

"Sometime around ten or eleven they thought—or it might have been a little earlier or later. The official report isn't in yet. They'll probably decide it happened after midnight — just the time I was coming in," I said to console her, because she did look all upset.

"Oh what a mess. I kind of wish I hadn't got rid of that key for Emilie now. What if they give us the third degree?"

"Oh, nonsense, Peg!"

"You never know. They'll start looking for the key and wonder why it isn't in the door or some place."

"No, they won't. Jan keeps it on his ring, doesn't he?"

"I don't know. I suppose so. Emilie would know, if he gave it to her. I'm going to tell him the first minute he's back and I can get him alone."

"Well—" I said. I was hoping she'd get to him before the police asked him about it.

"Of course the real way to find out who did it," Peg said, "is to find out who had a gun like that. And I'll be a lot happier once that is settled. There's something awful funny about it if two shots were fired and nobody heard them. Unless there was a silencer on the gun."

"No, there wasn't. It was just an ordinary '30, the kind you can pick up in any hock shop, the inspector said. That's why it is going to be hard to trace it. But it isn't so funny that no one heard the shots. People hardly ever hear them, there are so many other noises in a city—cars backfiring—things like that. Well, I've got to get busy on my story."

When I had finished it I phoned the office and dictated it and then Josh, the city editor, came on the wire. "Come in about three," he said. "I want to check with you on the love-nest angle. That's the next thing."

"The what?"

"Love nest. He's been that way about Inez, the dancer at Little Paris and there's the hat-check girl and a couple more entertainers. But I've got a line on a society matron too. Say, you used to know him—know any of his women?"

"No.— I—I didn't know him very well."

Peggy had been listening and watching me. "What's the matter, did you make a mistake or something?"

A mistake? When I thought of Gil Castle the way I knew him, the way I thought of him and now this. "I guess I did," I said. But couldn't quite bring myself to believe it.

"I'll heat up a can of soup and we'll have some lunch."

I said, "No thanks, Peg. I just don't feel like eating." I had never felt less like it in my life.

Operation of Bomb Division of Plant Will be Abandoned

Woodstock, Ont., Aug. 20.—(CP)—Operation of the bomb division of the Massey-Harris Limited plant here will be abandoned as soon as work now on hand is completed, it was announced today by J. J. Linton, general manager.

Between 240 and 250 employees, about 75 of them women, will be involved, he said. A few are being transferred to other branches of the company and the balance are being absorbed by Selective Service for other employment in Woodstock.

Mr. Linton said the move was made necessary by the cancellation "without warning" of orders by Great Britain. "The local firm is not alone in this situation", he added, "all other Canadian firms making this type of bomb received similar cancellations."

The Woodstock plant will continue to produce war truck bodies and wagons with a staff of more than 200 employees.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was eating her grapefruit diet this morning, saying to pop, The most unjust part of a war is that the innocent have to suffer with the guilty. Now for instants who could be more innocent that I am? I had no more to do with starting this war than an unborn babe in some future generation, and in fact if you asked me what it's all about I could only answer you in the most unsatisfactory general terms, and yet without even being consulted as to my own private feelings in the matter I'm forced to stand in line a quarter of an hour for a quarter of a pound of bacon which just as likely as not isn't even at the other end of the rainbow when I finely get there. And that's only one example of many to give you a faint idea of what lies before me today when I go marketing for a simple meal. Oh dear, she said.

According to the sycologists, the best way to eradicate a fear is to substitute another fear in its place, and the best way to chase away a worry is to fix your mind on some other worry, pop said. In this case I'm quite willing to make it easier for you by letting you substitute one of my worries. I've really got cause to worry. It's a pretty serious thing to be deprived of the only real cure for all worries. I refer to sleep. I heard the clock strike one, and I heard it strike 2 and three and four, and if you imagine I dozed —in between, let me assure you that I heard it strike the half hours too, and also tick the seconds, he said, and ma said, Why William, that's dreadful, was there anything on your mind?

Only lack of sleep, pop said. I leaned back in that chair all Sunday afternoon and I dont believe I slept 4 seconds. I must of read the entire Sunday paper in sheer desperation, he said, and ma said Now William if you think that's funny I assure you you're alone on a desert island with your delusion.

SAYS DANISH KING CONFERRED WITH BEST

Stockholm, Aug. 20. (AP)—King Christian of Denmark called German Ambassador Werner Best for a conference last Saturday during a crisis in Denmark over Nazi plans to punish saboteurs, the Stockholm newspaper Sevenska Dagbladet reported today.

No indication of the outcome of their discussion was given, but the Germans were said to have postponed putting into effect an ultimatum that Danish saboteurs be tried in German courts under Nazi law. Saboteurs now are tried in Danish courts.

Awards Made In School Contests

The winners in the Provincial Rural School Competition for the improvement of school grounds and properties in the rural areas have been announced by J. A. Carroll, secretary of the Ontario Horticultural Association, which sponsors this competition. The third place in the competition was awarded to S.S. No. 5, Percy Township, Northumberland County, taught by Miss Evelyn Partridge. This school received a prize which was donated by the T. Eaton Company, Limited.

Each of the schools eligible for final judging was the winner of a local competition within its own county and inspectorate. Awards were based on work done and the improvement made in the school property between July 1, 1942, and the time of judging in July of this year. The factors considered by the judges were clean-up, painting, repairs, grading, levelling and seeding of lawns and play areas, new plantings and arrangement of trees, shrubs and other plants, the cutting of weeds, mowing of grass and general care of the grounds.

The other schools which were winners of local competitions, and which were eligible for the final contest, were two schools in this district, S.S. No. 1, Thurlow Township, Miss Myrtle Barnum, teacher; and S.S. No. 13 North Fredericksburg Township, Lennox and Addington, Miss P. Sexsmith teacher.

The competition was based solely on the improvement made during the last year, so that even the poorest of rural schools had an opportunity of taking part and being listed as winners.

KIWANIS KARNIVAL IS CONCLUDED

Final Awards Made Before Large Crowd of Interested Spectators

The Kiwanis Street Karnival closed last night with a resounding bang. Today and yesterday all of Belleville and Trenton were talking about it. Visitors from Trenton and other towns in the district came to take their chances on the games where many fine prizes were offered and each game received a generous amount of play with the players finding profit and pleasure.

The feature events of the final night were the drawings for the hope chest, a third wrist watch and the sailing sloop, "The Good Ship Pirate." Most of the girls who had been entrants to the "Miss War Worker" contest returned to the Karnival but only as spectators and participants in the various games, and Miss Aileen Wright won the prize for selling the most tickets on the Hope Chest, receiving a cheque for the amount from Ross Stiver, the club secretary, while a second prize for salesmanship went to Doris Waite.

A visitor in the city from Toronto became the new owner of the model sailing vessel, a Miss Bessie Ellsworth, and the Hope Chest went to Miss Bessie Aitcheson of 112 West Moira Street. A young man from Guelph held the winning ticket on the free draw for the third wrist watch. After the three tickets had been drawn, Mr. Bruce Lattimer, president of the Kiwanis Club, addressed the audience and extended the thanks of the Kiwanians to the public for their generous co-operation toward making this year's Karnival such a great success.

A considerable amount of credit goes to a man, a Kiwanian, who worked hard to put the show over, a man who worked behind the scenes and did not have even the fun of operating one of the games. He is Mr. Ross Stiver. Mr. Stiver held the financial reins throughout the three nights, was responsible for the checking in and out of all monies and prizes won. Another Kiwanian who comands recognition by all is the man who handled all the arrangements from advertising to the removal of the booths at the end of each night he is Mr. Jack White, General Chairman of the Karnival. Mr. White worked long hours to bring this exceptional show to Belleville. Plans are already being made for next year's Karnival which will be bigger and better than the one just ended.
